There was a large wooden box close by the "gate," and on it, in small paper boxes, lying on white and pink cotton, were the articles she had made. The blossoms of scarlet sage strung together looked almost like a coral necklace, red, rosy lips made a pretty bracelet, yellow baby roses put together with wire answered for pins and belt buckles, while fuchias were pretty earrings.

"Nobody will want to buy ours after seeing yours," declared Corinne.

"Oh, I think they will!" returned Laura. "But why not put them all together. I'd rather!"

"Would you, really?" aksed Corinne, her face growing hot, as she remembered that she had been the one to propose separate "stores."

So more shallow boxes were obtained and the whole stock was soon in readiness for the real play to begin. Business was brisk, and Laura soon had to leave her place behind the counter in order to fashion more jewelry.

By dinner-time all the children were wearing pretty ornaments, and both Corinne and Edith thought there could not be a pleasanter playmate than Laura Mills.—Montreal Star.

FRED'S FOOT-WARMER

For once in his life Fred went to bed without being sent. That was because tomorrow would be his birthday, and Fred thought the sooner he got to bed the sooner his birthday would come. But, though Fred was in bed, he couldn't get to sleep. He kept wondering what daddy and mother would give him for a birthday present, and then he wiggled and flounced around because his feet were cold. Everyone knows how hard it is to go to sleep when the feet are cold. Well, Fred tried his best. He counted imaginary sheep again. By and by he got drowsy. He could still hear daddy and mother talking and laughing downstairs, and then he heard a dog bark. After awhile he lay very quiet, and a moment later he was almost asleep. Almost, I say, for a thump on the bed had aroused him. Fred stirred a bit, and the next thing he knew his feet suddenly got warm.

"Mother has put the fur rug over my feet. That's what makes them warm," thought Fred to himself, and then he fell fast asleep.

The sun was shining in his face when Fred awakened.

"Oh, it's my birthday," he cried, and blinked his eyes and yawned. "My!" but a fellow sleeps well when his feet are warm."

"Birthday greetings, little son," said daddy and mother, putting their heads in at the door.

"Thank you," replied Fred, and then he noticed daddy looked puzzled. "What's the matter?" he asked.

Daddy and mother took turns at explaining. "It was your birthday gift, and now it's gone," said daddy. "It disappeared in the night, and we have looked everywhere for it. I can't imagine what became of it," said mother.

"What was it?" asked Fred, his curiosity beaming in his eyes.

"A dog, a nice, friendly, half-grown collie," answered mother. And then something funny happened. The covers on Fred's bed suddenly raised and moved. Everyone saw it —daddy, mother, and Fred—but all were too surprised to say a word. Then from under the covers peeped a black nose and a pair of friendly eyes, while the covers began to move furiously; but that was because a tail was wagging as hard as it could.

"Why, here he is," shouted daddy.

"Why, I thought it was a rug at my feet," laughed Fred, and then he told them how cold his feet had been and how he thought mother had covered him with the fur rug.

The collie was on the floor now making friends with them all, and proving that a dog makes the most acceptable kind of a birthday gift.

"I couldn't blame him for not wanting to sleep down in the cold kitchen alone," said daddy.—Word and Way.

Tithing

Some say that in urging the tithe we are urging an Old Testament practice, and that we are Christians, under grace and not under the law, and should give according to the liberty of the gospel. That is true, provided our gospel liberty is not regarded as lbierty to give less than the Jews gave under the law. Our gratitude to Christ should lead us to do far better than the Jews, who had no Christ. Our Saviour Himself said of tithe-paying, "This ought ye to do," though, of course, He implied that we are not to do it as a ceremonial obligation, but are to give from the heart.—C. E. World.

DORIS AND SPOTTY

It had rained steadily for two whole days, and of course, Doris had not been able to go outside the door, much less spend the morning in the garden with Spotty and her dolls, as was her custom in fine weather.

"This weather's hard on the kiddie," Dad had said at breakfast that morning.

"Never mind," answered Mother. "Doris and I are going to be very, very busy today, aren't we, dear?—so we shan't mind the weather a bit."

"That's fine," said Dad. "Keep yourself busy, and let the rain patter. You'll be quite happy, so weather won't matter, eh Doris?"

Dad was always making up funny rhymes like this, and of course Doris was quite sure that she had the most wonderful Dad in the whole world. So all day long, she and Spotty went around with Mother, and helped her "very much," so Mother said.

Spotty was Doris' pet kitten, and they were always together. In fact, Daddy had made up a rhyme about that, too. Perhaps you would like to hear it, so here it is:

"Doris and Spotty are always together
Indoors and outdoors, never apart,
Spotty is Doris' pussy sweetheart."

While they were waiting for Dad to come back from the City, Doris was telling Spotty about the lovely birthday party she had had. "That was before you came, you know." Spotty listened very gravely and Doris always declared she understood every word she said.

"There was a man who did the most wonderful things, made flowers grow in handkerchiefs, and birds fly out of empty boxes, and everything. Then we tried to pin a tail on a donkey's picture with a handkerchief over our eyes. Bessie did best, and got a box of candy. Mother told me I could not have taken the prize even if I won it, for I was—was—oh, something that sounded like toasties; I didn't know I was that; I didn't want to be. Then we"—she stopped suddenly.

Surely that was Uncle Jack's whistle. He always whistled Yankee Doodle when he came—and—

Down the stairs she rushed, Spotty after her, and—there—sure enough was Uncle Jack, just taking off his wet coat.

Uncle Jack lived in the city, but often came out to see his "country relations," as he called them. He and Doris were great chums.

"And now for the 'fairy-pockie,' " he said.

This was Doris' name for a pocket in Uncle Jack's coat, kept specially for her, and in it had been found the most wonderful surprises.

Once it had been a tiny bird in a cage, that sang beautifully when wound up; again a funny Japanese candy doll. In fact, Spotty arrived that way, her furry black head peeping out of the "fairy-pockie," decorated with a collar of light blue ribbon, tied in an enormous bow. She had been Uncle Jack's birthday gift, and had arrived very late on Doris' last birthday.

It did not take long for Doris to dip in and fish out of the "fairie-pockie" a rather large package in brilliant green paper. She settled herself comfortably on Uncle Jack's knee, while Spotty, on the floor, looked up and watched Doris untie the green package, only to find another one, a red paper this time. A blue paper inside the red was undone in turn, and there was a mysterious-looking box. Doris was much excited as she opened it. What do you think it was?

A dear little mouse with a long, long string. Uncle Jack took it from her, wound it up, and off it went, rushing all around, Spotty after it.

"Oh, Uncle Jack, that is perfectly splendid. Look how Spotty loves it."

"I'm glad you and Spotty like it. Don't forget to tie it up in all the papers every night when you put it to bed."

Next day's weather was not much better, and there was no chance of going out in the morning. Doris and Spotty were perfectly happy with their new toy, "Mousey-tail," as Doris called her. The morning passed so quickly it was dinner-time before they knew it.

After dinner Spotty disappeared and when Doris went to hunt for her, she found her in the sitting room, where they had left Mousey-tail, and what in the world was that she had there?

Doris sat right down on the floor, and took hold of Mousey-tail, as she looked. She saw a tiny little gray mouse—a real one—that didn't move as Spotty dabbed at it with her paw, as if she expected it to jump like Mousey-tail.

Just then cook appeared at the door. "Well, glory-be-to-goodness! Here's that little imp and the mouse, too. It's the very one that has been nibblin' at things in the pantry, and I had just caught it, an' put it down a minit, for the grocer just came, and off whisked that Spotty. I saw the tail of her just disappearin' up the stairs."

"What's the matter?" said Mother's voice.

Cook explained matters to her and, stooping down, took up the still little mouse. "Here, you imp! Give me that here," she said to Spotty, who looked up at her in evident wonder.

"That would not be at all a nice thing to play with, dearie," said Mother, but it was funny of Spotty to bring it here. It almost seems as if she remembered it looked a little like Uncle Jack's toy one. But come along, it is clearing, and I think we will go over and see Grandma now."

Spotty was not left at home, either, for Doris had a special little basket to carry Spotty in every time she went to Grandma's.—Selected.

A COURAGEOUS BOY EXPLORER

Robert Carver North, twelve-year-old schoolboy of Walton, N. Y., has well earned the right to be called a real explorer. Not only that, but, like David Binney Putnam and Deric Nusbaum, he has written a book about his adventures.

A year ago "Bob" made a trip with his father into the Canadian wilderness. Articles about that trip were published in the Youth's Companion, and the book, Bob North Starts Exploring, was published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, of New York. Last June "Bob" started alone in a canoe for the Canadian wilderness and only recently returned to his home after a trip of 1,250 miles. He paddled the full length of Albany River into James Bay and also explored the English and Kenogami Rivers. On August 23, on his way home, he was received by Lord Willingdon, Governor General of Canada. Lord Willingdon praised him highly and congratulated him. On this trip "Bob" visited many Indian mission stations and fur trader posts. He spent much time with the Indians and witnessed their religious services, sports, weddings, feasts and other ceremonies.

On Friday of last week the citizens of Walton celebrated the exploits of their famous boy explorer. The celebration was in charge of the Parent-Teacher Association and the American Legion Post of Walton. "Bob" explained 100 stereopticon views taken from pictures he made on his trip, and told the story of his adventures in the wilds of Canada.—Current Events.

If we read the Bible aright, we read a book that teaches us to go forth and do the work of the Lord.—Theodore Roosevelt.

1 Per Cent on Budgets For Superannuates

Forsyth	11.48

This week we have two more charges reporting over the top on all three of the budgets. These are State Street, and Charlotte, First. Yadkin College is added to the list of those over the top on the A. C. B. Yadkin has been over the top for sometime but by an oversight has not been reported so. We are glad to make this correction this week, and by next week we hope and expect to place them over the top on all budgets.

On the 1 per cent for Superanuate Fund, State Street joins Orange charge and these two are the first two over the top on this fund. Orange went over last week, also their pastor making the first of the ministers to report on this fund. Hickory Ridge on Forsyth has also as one of the churches been over on this fund for sometime. This report this week is corrected and put in the form it should be. Let's get this fund for our superannuates in as early now as we can possibly, both from the ministers and charges. To date we have four charges reporting on this fund and one minister.

On the A. C. B. we have 71 charges out of 92 reporting. On the G. C. B. we have 83 out of the 92 reporting. On the college fund we have 60 out of the 92 reporting.

Let's make it a race now for next place on each of these and make it a joyful contest for the Kingdom interests. Whose is next over the top?

A. G. DIXON.

J. NORMAN WILLS, Treasurer.

—"Professor, I have made some money, and I want to do something for my old college. I don't remember what studies I excelled in, if any."

"In my classes you slept most of the time."

"Uh! Well, I'll endow a dormitory."—Kansas City Journal.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE

Have you finished paying your pledge to the college? Many have told me that they just overlooked their pledge and would have paid had some one called their attention to it.

If you have not paid, will you make a special effort to do so? If you have paid remind your neighbor who has not paid and help along in an enterprise which you have invested in.

Some are behind with their Building Fund pledge and others with the annual pledge for Endowment.

More than 315 students have enrolled this semester which has been beyond the expectation of the most loyal friends. The growth has been marvelous but we must have money to carry out our promises.

Every time we fail to pay a dollar which we have promised we are disappointing and embarrassing our treasurer, Mr. J. Norman Wills, who has had a tremendous burden.

We believe you believed in the college to the amount of the sum you pledged and accordingly our trustees made their investments.

Remember every time a hundred dollars is paid in six dollars is saved for the college.

Please mail your check to Mr. J. Norman Wills, Treasurer, Greensboro, N. C., which will help lighten his burden and make you happier.

Most sincerely,
H. A. GARRETT, Field Secretary.

PASTORS, PLEASE NOTICE

Pastors' Report Blanks were mailed out today—Monday—and should be in your hands before you read this. If you haven't received your envelope, please notify me at once, and I will send others.

You will notice a number of changes in some of the blanks. A new supply had to be printed, and I have incorporated in the new blanks the changes ordered by Conference or suggested by members of Conference. The changes are all improvements, and the blanks ought to be easier to fill out.

Now just a suggestion or two: 1. Let us remember that this is the year for the election of representatives to the General Conference, and that we must know how many members we have before we can know how many representatives we are entitled to. It is especially important, therefore, that pastors' reports be in on Thursday so the Statistical Secretary can have time to tally before the election Friday afternoon.

2. The Conference Treasurer has agreed to accept the last report of the Missionary Branch Treasurers as published in the Herald. In filling out your "Conference Treasurer's Envelope," in the space marked "Amt. Previously Paid thru W. F. M. S.," put the amount your charge is given credit for in the final report in the Herald. Likewise with the W. H. M. S. This is very important, since the Conference Treasurer will not accept your envelope unless it contains these credits.

C. W. BATES, Secretary.

—Rev. J. E. Pritchard has some fine Buff Orpington chickens at the Randolph county fair. The judges showed appreciation of their superiority. We do not know whether these chickens have vitality enough to survive the annual conference or not. Time will tell.

FACULTY NOTICE

The Faculty of the North Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church will meet in Asheboro, the Conference Church, Tuesday, November 1, 1927, at 2 p.m.

The following resolutions were passed at the last Annual Conference: "On motion members of the Conference Class are hereby notified that, unless they have a reasonable excuse, they will not be examined after the regular meeting of the Faculty."

"On motion all applicants for examination shall notify the Secretary of the Faculty one week before Conference."

Of course members of the Faculty will be expected to be present as well as those who wish to be examined. Pastors and all who see this that have to do with candidates coming in will do them a favor to so notify. —Calvary church had a most successful pageant last Sunday night as a part of the rally day service, representing the offering of Isaac. Brother J. W. Dixon took the part of Abraham while Master Williamson acted well the part of Isaac. Brother L. W. Jobe represented the angel of Jehovah. It took much preparation for this pageant, but the results justified it. It was witnessed by a large, appreciative congregation. The children's part of rally day service was rendered in the morning at the Sunday school hour. This too was enjoyed though the rain greatly reduced the attendance.

—Miss Brooks of Ore Hill is among the teachers of South Buffalo School, again.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Palestine, Flat Rock.—Third Sunday in August our pastor was away helping in a meeting. That Sabbath was given entirely to the Sunday school. The school gave a children's day pprogram at the morning service. The children did well considering the training they got, and the choir singing was good. In the afternoon, after a good dinner on the church grounds, Rev. Mr. Rogers, pastor of the Madison M. E. church, made an interesting address, and favored the children with some stories. His message was enjoyed by all, both young and old.

Third Sunday in September our beloved pastor preached a good sermon as he always does.

On Saturday afternoon before the first Sunday in October, our Sunday school motored over to Guilford Battle Grounds and enjoyed their annual picnic. There were about one hundred from Palestine and Gidion's Grove went over also with between fifty and seventy-five. Both schools spread their supper together and my! what a long table laden with good things to eat. If one started at the head of it, he would be well filled by the time he reached the foot; that is, if he ate all the way down.

Our pastor made a few minutes talk especially to the little ones, and then asked the blessing, after which every one ate, and there was some to pack up and carry back home.

We are all sorry J. B. Trogdon, Jr., is on the sick list. Hope he will soon be a-going again.

We are nearing the close of another year. We have only two more preaching services before conference. Yes, we see many mistakes and many things left undone, especially in not being as regular to report this year as heretofore. Shall try to do better. We have a live and active Sunday school at Palestine. The best we have every had. The average attendance is between seventy and one hundred every Sunday.

Best wishes to Herald.

GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

Midway, Haw River Circuit.—Brother Reed filled his appointment the fourth Sunday, and adminstered the Lord's Supper. It was a good service; nearly every one present partook of the sacrament.

Our Sunday school is still moving along nicely, under the leadership of R. P. Butler; 86 present last Sunday. Christian Endeavor was led Sunday night by Alice Mae Butler and was attended by a good crowd of children and young people.

Brother Reed was with us in the afternoon and preached a good sermon to a large congregation. We had special music given by Brother R. W. Crowder and sister, and Misses Margurite Crowder and Eva Maynard. We thank them and hope they can come again. We regret very much to lose Sister Lee Dixon who has moved to High Point M. P. Children's Home with her three small children. Hope they will be happy; the children's father, Brother A. J. Dixon, was a great believer in this home, and we believe could he speak he would say, Put my children there. This conference year will soon come to a close. May the Lord be in and bless the work of the conference, and may each preacher be sent to the work that is best fitted for him.

MRS. G. W. APPLE, Reporter.

Siler City.—Owing to the absence of our pastor who is away at the Seminary, Rev. W. M. Pike filled his appointments Sunday morning and evening, October 2nd. He delivered a wonderful sermon at the morning service on the text, "Render unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's and unto God the things which be God's." At the evening service Mr. Pike talked on the subject, "The Characteristics of a Christian." May we, as Christians, strive to reach the high standards as pointed out by the messager. Mr. Pike is well known in our community, and we are always glad to have him with us.

We are getting along very nicely with our Wednesday evening prayer services since our pastor has been away. In order to make them more interesting and beneficial, all present are asked to freely discuss the subject of the evening. Mrs. Lewis Woody conducted the service last Wednesday night; the subject discussed was, The Parable of the Rich Man.

We are not yet satisfied with the enrollment in our Sunday school although the attendance has increased considerably since last year; but we are very proud of the work we are doing. The Junior Philathea class was reorganized last Sunday morning and the following officers were elected: President, Miss Minnie Cooper; secretary, Miss Oma Andrews; and Mrs. Los Wrenn was re-elected teacher.

Randleman Charge.—Our special meeting at Level Cross began the first Sunday and closed the second Sunday night. Dr. and Mrs. Dixon were with us and rendered most efficient service. Brother Hutton, who served as pastor here nearly thirty years ago, preached one time.

While the visible results were not what we had anticipated, yet the ultimate results are destined to be of far-reaching consequence. Thirty-three pledged themselves to Dr. Dixon to pray for the removal of the hindering cause that is in the way of the church. This prayer band was formed at the close of the closing service. According to this writer's way of thinking, this Prayer Band, praying, will mean more to Level Cross and community, than the reception of fifty children into the church would mean, with continued existing conditions.

The church building which was recently freed from debt, was dedicated by Dr. Dixon Sunday afternoon.

Next Sunday, the sixteenth, is Home-Coming day at Mt. Lebanon. We are expecting many of the friends of this church who once worshipped here, but who have moved away, to be present and enter into the service. The afternoon service will begin at two o'clock, and then the Worthville choir will sing. At 2:30 Prof. Lindley will speak.

The fourth quarterly conference will convene at Mt. Lebanon Saturday, October 22nd, at 2:30 p.m.

WM. H. NEESE.

Randleman, N. C., October 10, 1927.

Asheville.—While I am writing about another matter, I will supplement what our reporter has said with an additional item or two from this charge.

We are in the windup of the Conference year. Just what the outcome is to be financially is a little hard to say. We are considerably behind on the local Budget. General Conference Budget, thanks to a good Rally Day offering yesterday, is a little over paid. The Annual Conference Budget is about half paid, but will be paid in full.

We have received three members into the church, besides the one reported last week, this month. We have made up for all losses by death or removal this year, and if those who have indicated their intention of uniting with us do so, will report a net gain. One of the problems of the churches of all denominations here in Asheville is a constantly moving membership.

Our Societies are doing good work. The Missionary Societies under the leadership of Mrs. C. C. McNeill, a daughter of the late Rev. J. H. Stowe, are going forward. The Ladies' Aid pledged $300 on the building project, and have in hand $116 toward the payment of the pledge. The Christian Endeavor Society has paid something over $50 on the Budgets. The Society plans to hold a chicken supper on Friday night week to finish their apportionment.

Last week Mrs. Bates had a birthday. The Ladies' Aid at Weaverville remembered her with some gifts. And on last Friday night the Christian Endeavor Society surprised her with a birthday cake, and some more gifts. All greatly appreciated.

The Brotherhood meets again tomorrow night. This organization has brought the men of the church together in a fine fellowship. Supper is served at 6:30; this is followed by the program and business meeting. The men enjoy it and are helped.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Granville Charge.—The second Sunday was Rally Day at Union Chapel. It poured rain all morning yet there was a fair attendance. Mr. Jasper Hicks of Henderson made an address. Mr. Hicks will take part in the Rally Day program at Rehoboth church next Sunday.

There is one noticeable improvement at each of the churches which seems to be the direct result of the recent revival services. At Rehoboth church it took the form of an improvement to the church property. The church has been treated to a new coat of paint with certain other improvements which has added much to the appearance of the building. Brother C. M. Compher of Winston-Salem assisted in this meeting. Nine individuals joined the church by confession of faith and baptism.

The noticeable improvement at Mt. Carmel church is in the Sunday school. The attendance shows a steady increase with certain improvements in the activities of the school. Last Sunday through the initiative of superintendent, Mr. Taylor Garrett, nine individuals subscribed to the Herald. The expectation is to place the paper in the home of every member of the school. Brother R. C. Stubbins of Enfield, assisted in the meeting at Mt. Carmel. Three additions to the church.

At Union Chapel it is the Christian Endeavor Society that best reflects the influence of the meeting. Miss Pattie Coghill of the Christian church led the meeting last night with thirty-five present. This is a fair index to the attendance for the last two or three months. Brother J. D. Williams was with us in the meeting at Union Chapel. Brother C. W. Bates of Asheville was present for part of the meeting and preached one of the sermons. Eight individuals have joined the church thus far during the year.

The most hopeful thing from the charge as a whole is the amount collected and paid in on the General Conference budget—$715.00. This already exceeds the amount paid on any former year. The secret of this success is to be found in the activities of the two Missionary Societies at each of the churches plus the happy response which the churches have given to the programs as prepared and rendered on the special days—Christmas, Easter, Children's Day, and Rally Day.

The fifth Sunday District Rally will be held at Mt. Carmel church October 30th. This includes all the Methodist Protestants in Vance county. H. F. FOGLEMAN.

Orange Charge.—Official Notice: The fourth quarterly conference will meet Saturday before fourth Sunday in October, 2:00 p.m., at Chestnut Ridge church.

Please be on hand promptly at 2:00 p.m. Important business.

Sincerely,
B. M. WILLIAMS.

Concord.—Yesterday was a good day. It was observed as Rally Day both in the Sunday school and preaching service. In the morning some 300 were in attendance upon the Sunday school. This was 100 short of our goal which had been set at 400. The weather was rainy and inclement, however, which hindered some. At the close of the Sunday school Col. L. T. Hartsell spoke for several minutes to the delight of all present. At the close of his address he presented Mr. R. P. Benson with a beautiful Loving Cup from the Baraca Class which Mr. Benson has taught for more than eleven years. This was Mr. Benson's last Sunday with the class. He is moving from Concord, and it is with deep regret that the class gives him up. He will be missed by the entire church.

The eleven o'clock service was well attended, the house being filled with the membership who answered to a roll call. The children of the Sunday school under Mrs. P. H. Scarboro, Mrs. Carl Honeycutt and Mrs. Hendry rendered a program at 7:30 p.m. which took the place of the regular night service. A capacity house attended this service. The offering for the Board of Education amounted to $160.00.

Our new Educational Building is going forward. The outside is now complete. The plaster work is going on now. We had hoped to be able to enter formally into it before conference, but it now appears that we will be unable to enter it so soon as that.

All of our claims are paid except G. C. B. and we are now about raising that. We owe about $400.00 on that, but it will be paid. Yes, and the one per cent for Superannuates is to be paid. I have been away assisting in evangelistic meetings most all summer. But the work for the fall and winter is going forward in a most heartening manner.
G. H. HENDRY.

Porter Church.—Our work has been moving along finely all the summer.

We have recently painted our church inside and out and everything is looking real nice.

Our pastor has filled all his appointments and has brought us real good messages each time. We always look forward to preaching day as we enjoy having him and his wife with us.

Mr. Solomon Simpson and wife united with our church yesterday, October 9th. We are very glad indeed to have these good people with us.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held next Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock. We hope every member that possibly can will attend.

Brother Hill will preach for us again the fifth Sunday in this month which will be his last appointment before conference, but we are hoping he will return to us after conference, for we have all learned to love him and his good wife very much.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.
REPORTER.

West End, Greensboro.—We are closing a very successful year's work at the church. The two revival meetings that we have held this year have been very helpful to the church and there were many professions and reclamations. We have received fifty-one members this year and others will join soon.

West End church has been handicapped for some time because there has not been room sufficient to take care at our growing Sunday school, but now the long-hoped for is about to be realized.

Work will begin in a few days on the lot preparing for the erection of large and adequate rooms that will accommodate all who may come for many years.

There is a great future for West End if all will pray and work together, for it is located in one of the growing sections of the city.

This has been a very pleasant year for the pastor, for the people have been exceedingly kind and thoughtful of our interest. They have made us feel that our services were appreciated. The ladies of the two missionary societies remembered the pastor on his birthday with cash and other valuable presents. The Junior Christian Endeavor remembered us also with a very valuable book.

Just after the closing of our last revival the pastor was presented with a handsome suit of clothes and hat as a token of appreciation from the church and friends of the pastor.

We will have a good report to take to conference this year. All claims will be paid.

May the Lord abundantly bless all who have in any way contributed to the success of this church this year in the sincere desire of the pastor. J. D. WILLIAMS.

Fountain Place.—Our Sunday School is still growing in number and interest. We had a very good attendance yesterday for Sunday school and our pastor brought us two fine sermons. At the 11 o'clock service he preached on "Christian Education." And the evening subject was "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

The Christian Endeavor is doing very good work in the Senior and Junior Societies. We are looking forward when they will wake up and be bigger and better Endeavorers. The Ladies' Aid Society and the missionary society held a joint meeting at the church Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Both of these societies are doing some very fine work. The officers for the next year will be elected next Sunday morning at the 11:00 o'clock hour. REPORTER.

Halifax.—The fourth quarterly conference of Halifax charge will meet with Bethesda church on Friday, October 21st, 1927, at two p.m. We want all the officials to be present and any others who can come.
C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Cid, Denton Charge.—It is with sad thoughts we think that our conference year will soon be to a close. But feel thankful to say that we like our minister, Rev. M. C. Henderson, better every time he comes, and we are truly hoping that the conference will see fit to return him to this work. Brother Henderson delivered a forcible sermon on the first Sunday. Also he gave us a very excellent discourse on last night. He preached with great power.

The members and a few others on last night nearly paid out his salary. We expected to come out victorious.

The fourth quarterly conference will be at Denton on the 21st at seven o'clock. President Dixon is expected with us.

Mrs. J. D. Wright, one of our members, has been sick for over two weeks, but is now convalescing.

The cottage prayer meetings are still in progress. Some of our members have taken more interest in church work this year and paid more than in several years. We are expecting to get another member. Our Sunday school is doing very well, but could be lots better. We have not had as large attendance this year as before because an other Sunday school was organized last spring. We wish them well in their new work. We still have a faithful number at work in His vineyard.
MRS. N. W. LANIER, Reporter.

Bethel, Alamance Charge.—The church work has been progressing very nicely. Our pastor, Rev. J. A. Burgess, always preaches instructive and edifying sermons. He was ably assisted in the special meeting by Rev. S. W. Taylor. His preaching was fine and greatly enjoyed. Weather conditions were unfavorable, yet we trust great good was accomplished.

The attendance at Sunday school has not been up to the average during the summer months, but we are expecting it to increase. We observed last Sunday as Rally Day. Judge Walker of Burlington, delivered a fine address using as his subject, "The Watchman." Rev. G. W. Holmes spoke on the "Model Scholar." We are having a contest between the classes for best attendance. The winning class will receive a reward.

Officers of the Sunday school were elected for the coming year as follows: Lou McPherson, superintendent; Herbert Foust, assistant superintendent; McKinley Bailey, secretary; Geo. Robertson, choir leader; Bessie Holmes, organist.

The officers of the church were elected for next year, Mrs. J. M. Foust was elected reporter for the Methodist Protestant Herald.

On the fifth Sunday of this month the missionary societies will hold their Thankoffering meeting. Besides the regular business Rev. J. E. Carroll of High Point College will speak. Every one is invited to attend. In the afternoon a meeting will be held to organize a memorial association.

BESSIE HOLMES, Reporter.

High Point.—The members of the First church congregation have been greatly refreshed and awakened spiritually under the appealing and forceful sermons of Dr. Leonard B. Smith, which they have enjoyed for the past two weeks. He was compelled to return to his home and work Friday evening, after delivering his farewell sermon on "Why I am a Christian and What it Costs." He endeared himself in no small degree to our people while in the city, and every one parted with him with much reluctance. As a result of this evangelistic campaign, we were delighted to receive on Sunday morning thirty accessions to our membership. Mr. and Mrs. Ross H. Davis, Mrs. Fred W. McPherson, Mr. C. E. Bulla, Mrs. Elizabeth Gibson, Prof. N. P. Yarborough of the College faculty, and Mr. D. D. Broome were received by certificate, Mr. Shuford Hilton on confession of faith, and the following children from the Junior church united with us: Robert M. Andrews, Jr., Etta Lee Bencini, Robert Bondurant, Julia Elizabeth Coe, Charles Craven, R. G. Bondurant, C. D. Dickinson, Lane Craven, Howard Garmon, Joseph Gray, Virgil Hinkle, Leonard Koonce, Roy Guest, W. C. Koonce, Kenneth Lamar, Clyde Markland, Milton Vuncannon, Aileen Vance, Martha Moffitt, Vera York, Clyde Bass Jr., and Richmond Guice. A unique feature of this service was the baptism by Rev. E. Lester Ballard of a number of these children, who had not received the rite before, with water from the Jordan river, which he brought home with him from his tour through the Holy Land nearly two years ago. Mr. Ballard is a great lover of children, and has been a faithful, effective worker with them in the Junior church, and it was a joy to him to baptize so large a number and receive them into the fellowship of the church. It is always an impressive and inspiring scene when adults and children surround the altar, confess faith in Jesus, and pledge their allegiance to Him and His cause by uniting themselves with His earthly church. We felt that God was present and smiled approval on this beautiful and sacred service.

At this Sunday morning service Rev. P. E. Lindley delivered an earnest and forceful sermon on "Walking the Path of Life," which was very appropriate to the occasion. The choir rendered a beautiful anthem with Prof. Dan W. Smith at the organ, and Mrs. J. Hobart Allred sang a beautiful solo, "In My Father's House Are Many Mansions," in her usual charming manner. At the evening service Rev. Mr. Ballard brought a timely message on "Rejection of God," the anthem by the choir was "The King of Love," always beautiful and appropriate and the men's quartet gave a lovely selection. There was a sentiment expressed by many members that the meeting should continue a few days longer, but it was decided that Sunday evening's service would close the series.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its monthly session in the church Monday afternoon at three o'clock with the following hostesses: Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., Mrs. J. G. Snipes, Mrs. H. T. Hancock, and Miss Blanche Burgess. There was a large attendance, and three new members were gladly welcomed into the society. After the business session, delicious refreshments were served.

Capt. A. M. Rankin continues to improve, we are glad to announce. The many friends of Messrs. J. W. Hinkle and D. A. Neese rejoice to see them out again after being ill.

FORSYTH TIDINGS

On next Sunday, October 16, a full and great day is being planned for Forsyth charge. At the morning service the new Mt. Carmel church is to be dedicated. Dinner will be served on the grounds and in the afternoon service the corner stone will be placed with appropriate services. At six o'clock in the evening the corner stone service of the remodeled Maple Springs church will take place and just following the corner stone service the Maple Springs church will be formally reopened. President Dixon will preach the sermon in both churches and others have been invited to take parts. All pastors who have ever served either of these churches or who have conducted revivals at either place are invited to be present. We trust old Forsyth will be remembered by all our friends on this good day and that the day might be one long to be remembered.

GEO. L. CURRY, Pastor.

A True Story.—Some years ago when Rev. T. M. Johnson lived in Asheboro as pastor of the M. P. Church two boys borrowed his buggy to drive to a swimming hole some miles out of town. After they had satisfied themselves with swimming they noticed a dog comfortably asleep in the back part of the buggy and decided they would make him the victim of a practical joke. They laid hold of the shafts of the buggy to back the vehicle down into the water deep enough to awake the sleeping dog. But the hole was deeper and the bank steeper than they thought and the buggy in spite of their efforts to stop it continued to roll back and sink until the top of the buggy was only an inch or two above the surface of the water. The dog of course took care of himself, promptly waking up and swimming out to land. But the dog had the laugh on the boys as they struggled in vain to pull the buggy out. It seemed for a time that they would have to leave it in the water and return to Asheboro and report the facts, but at last by tying the lines to the buggy they succeeded in drawing it out. Those two boys are now young men, both living in Greensboro, one of them a distinguished printer and the other a successful physician.

—Vance Garrett, son of Rev. J. N. Garrett, is afflicted with some internal trouble which may require a surgical operation. His friends are anxious.

—Greensboro Furniture Company has in the personnel of its management three members of Calvary Church; W. F. Medearis, L. W. Jobe, and John W. Dixon.

WHICH ROAD ARE YOU TRAVELING?

It seems today that people are neglecting the church more than anything else. The roads are full of people all the time, going and coming, but where to and where from? we don't know. They are that way six days to the week, seeking pleasure, I guess. And on the Sabbath it is still the same. When we get to church there is hardly more than enough there to take an ordinary bee hive. But say, if some one should ask the question, Where are all the people? what could our answer be, for we don't know; they are every where except where they should be on the Sabbath. The Sunday schools are quite small everywhere I go, and there are people enough in the surrounding communities to have large attendance every Sunday, if they would make an effort to go. God has given us six days to the week for our work and pleasure and it seems that we might give part of our time on the Sabbath in the service of God. But there are lots of people that I know, they don't spend thirty minutes in the Sunday schools and seldom do they come for church services. Some of those people that I am speaking of live in sight of the church, and others are close enough to attend each service, and yet they stay at home or elsewhere and neglect their duty. Matt. 5:16—Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven. It is right to have pleasure and visit our people and friends on the Sabbath, but let's give God part of our time and not neglect him for ever. Let us all stop and think which road are we on, the one that leads upward or the one that leads downward to everlasting ruin. But by God's help, let's try to be followers of Christ. Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us. Looking unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith.

—Rev. Ronald J. Tamblyn, for the last three and a half years pastor of the Bellevue Methodist Protestant Church, Pittsburgh, has been called to Grace Methodist Protestant Church, Greensboro, North Carolina. Rev. Mr. Tamblyn is a graduate of Adrian College, class of 1919; and, after one year in the Westminster Theological Seminary, he entered Yale Divinity School, from which institution he graduated in 1924. And Yale has recognized Rev. Mr. Tamblyn in a signal manner by selecting him to represent the Divinity School, November 15, at the Centennial Celebration of the Western Theological Seminary in Pittsburgh. He has accepted the call to Greensboro, and leaves Pittsburgh November 16 to enter his new field of service. The Bellevue Church has prospered under the excellent preaching and the wise and faithful ministry of Brother Tamblyn among the people; and we predict for him a very happy and successful career as pastor of our splendid church at Greensboro.—Methodist Recorder.

—Rev. J. D. Williams is regretting the loss of a good family from West End Church—that of W. A. Smith. They move to Philadelphia for business reasons, Mr. Smith being in the employ of Vick Chemical Company.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING, W. F. M. S.

In response to the kind invitation of Mrs. C. L. Whitaker to meet in her home for the second Executive Committee meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Woman's Home Missionary Society, a goodly number met in due session on Tuesday, October 4, at 10:00 a.m.

The meeting opened with Mrs. George R. Brown, President, in the chair. Mrs. A. G. Dixon, in a very effective manner, led the devotions, reading the 17th chapter of John. This was followed by sentence prayers.

The Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. M. P. Harrell, made her report which showed good work done in the societies reporting, but a great many did not send in reports. Mrs. Harrell asked for suggestions as to the best method of getting the corresponding secretaries of the auxiliaries to give reports in full each quarter. The report blanks are sent out regularly each quarter, but Mrs. Harrell's work is greatly handicapped if these blanks are not filled out and mailed to her. She has no other way of knowing what the auxiliaries are doing.

The secretary read a letter from Rev. J. Clyde Auman, in which he thanked all the auxiliaries and individuals for their very generous gifts. Mr. Auman said in part, "Please express our gratitude to all those who had a parf in the splendid gifts."

The matter of Dr. Roberta Fleagle's visit to North Carolina for Annual Conference was discussed, and Mrs. George R. Brown, Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mrs. C. W. Bates were elected a committee to arrange for engagements for Dr. Fleagle during her stay in the state. This will be a good opportunity for District Chairmen to secure her services, and they are asked to communicate with some member of this committee if they can use Dr. Fleagle in their District meetings.

A committee appointed at the Weaverville meeting in July to confer with Mr. V. W. Idol, Treasurer of Annual Conference, as to the best method of getting receipts for the money raised by the various auxiliaries into his hands, reported that Mr. Idol said if Mrs. S. W. Taylor and Mrs. H. A. Garrett, treasurers of the respective Missionary societies, would sign the last report of Dr. Dixon published in the Herald before Annual Conference, he would accept this as a receipt. The signatures of Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Garrett indicate that they have checked the published amounts with their books and found them correct.

A committee appointed to decide whether or not a secretary should be elected for the joint session of the Woman's Home Missionary Society and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society recommended that such officer be elected, and Mrs. D. S. Coltrane was chosen.

An invitation from the Reidsville auxiliary to hold the February meeting there was accepted.

The meeting adjourned for lunch in the College dining hall, after which the Home Missionary Society held its business session.

MRS. E. LESTER BALLARD,
Recording Secretary.

THE ATTIRING OF WOMEN

I will therefore that men pray everywhere lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting; in like manner also that women adorn themselves in modest apparel with shamefacedness and sobriety not with braided hair or gold or pearls or costly array but which becometh women professing godliness, with good works. Then again, 1 Cor. 11:15, But if a woman have long hair it is a glory to her, for her hair is given her for a covering. The attiring of women, a subject entirely too large for us to attempt to speak of but at the same time we feel and know that some one is out of line, very badly out of the Christian line, and in getting out they have led many weak ones astray and led them away from God. Would to God we could picture the sadness of this particular going away from right to wrong. Dear people, where are we and where are we going? This is not the Christian land the heathen countries have been hearing about, surely not. Let me say if time goes on as it is today it is only a matter of time when we will have to have missionaries come and teach us about God, for many have already forgotten God. Now we do not think that some of us are so strong but still some of us have kept presence of mind sufficient to want to be attired with that which becometh women professing godliness, with good works. What real Christian women do you all think set a fashion that would cause us to give up all of our modesty? What has become of the refined women? We know most assuredly that it was not a real godly woman that set the fashion for the length of the dresses. Will a Christian mother follow the world and suffer her precious daughter to disgrace her self going out dressed in a way that will cause her to have slighty expressions said about her? No, a thousand times no, but where are the Christian mothers? We may fool lots of people but we never can fool God. But some one says, there's an other old fogy. Yes, when Noah built the Ark how foolish he seemed to be and such an old fogy, but he saved himself while the smart aleck was lost. So it will be again; the ones that know so much find out when too late they were the most foolish of all. We ask when and how this awful condition of the attiring of women is to be corrected. Some one is to lead out in this and seems it will surely fall on the Christian mothers of our land; but where are they? will they arouse to a sense of their duty and set the attiring of Christian women by making their own girls' dresses as Christians should wear. If the church of God will come back and be Christians we shall have a heaven on earth and the nearer you get to God the more sinful you will see your self to be. My heart is pained to see the going away from God and it is not any wonder we have so much crime committed in the land when we as Christians have followed the fashions of the world as we have. Return unto me, saith the Lord, and I will receive you and heal all your back-slidings. Who will come to the rescue of this fallen condition and help correct the attiring of our dear girls? We can not afford to follow in this wicked fashion that is leading us downward day by day. There is nothing uplifting about the fashions of the world we want to be elevated and then we must draw the line. Will we Christians do that or will we go on careless and at last come up condemned? We certainly will if we do not correct our own ways and our own household. Deuteronomy 6 5-7: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy might and these words which I command thee this day shall be in thine heart and thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way and when thou liest down and when thou risest up.

MARTHA PARSONS.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of expressing our heartfelt thanks and appreciation of the kind helpful service rendered us by the good people of Greenville Circuit, neighbors, friends, from Lawrenceville, Emporia, Roanoke Rapids, who so kindly and sympathetically assisted us in every way possible; no greater kindness could be rendered by any people, during the days of our sore bereavement and distress and the interment of our little daughter Francis Elizabeth. A large funeral procession accompanied us from the parsonage door 72 miles to cemetery at Flat Rock, Vance circuit. Our most sincere appreciation to those who presented so many beautiful costly flowers that literally covered the grave in which her little body rests.

May God abundantly bless each and every one.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett is to fill the pulpit of Calvary Church next Sunday morning and evening. Pastor Gerringer is taking his vacation, though we believe he is resting by preaching to another congregation.

—Community church, Thomasville, has an equipment for presenting moving pictures. Dr. Maier, the pastor, say they use this in the evening service about one third of the evenings and that the use of it increases the attendance. He is not willing to use it unless they have films that are quite suitable for a Sunday service. He feels that it hurts rather than helps to present pictures that do not carry a worth while message. This equipment cost about $750. Brother Finch has spared no expense in his effort to equip this great church plant for service.

The Asheboro Conference of 1894

Thirty-three years ago the Annual Conference met in Asheboro. Many changes have taken place since then, both in the Annual Conference and in the Asheboro church. The church was then young and small and was worshiping in a building that has been removed to give place to the present commodious and handsome structure. The membership of that first Asheboro church has of course greatly changed in the third of a century that has elapsed, though quite a number of the members of that time are still members. Some have moved away to other communities or departed on that journey from which no traveler returns.

The roll of Conference ministers of that day differs greatly from the roll of the present. In 1894 there were 55 ministers enrolled. Only 15 of these are now members of the Conference, and of these 15 three are listed among the superannuates, leaving only 12 in active work. Only six of the 12 have had pastoral charges the present years.

Dr. T. T. Ferree was elected president of the Conference in 1894 for his second year, he having been first elected in 1893 at LaGrange, N. C.

In his report the president stated that Rev. H. L. Powell had been assigned to Albemarle circuit immediately after the last Conference. Also that Rev. J. R. Betts, of the M. E. Church, South, had been assigned to Buncombe circuit.

The number of church members in the district reported that year was 16,300. The largest salary paid any pastor that year was $642, paid by Henderson church. The next largest was $638, paid by Flat Rock circuit. Rev. T. M. Johnson was pastor at Henderson and Rev. T. J. Ogburn was pastor on Flat Rock. Greensboro and Winston each paid $500 to pastor that year. Rev. J. S. Williams was pastor at Greensboro and Rev. L. L. Albright at Winston. The total amount paid on salaries was reported to be $12,903.22. The president received as salary $964.67; collected for home missions, $248.30; for church extension (then called N. C. Missions), $332.04.

The subjects engaging the attention of the Conference that year were for the most part such as still engage attention every year. There were two special subjects, however, that year. One of these was a proposition to form a union with the Christian churches and the other was the proposition to establish a Conference paper. The proposition regarding union came through Rev. J. W. Wellons (who died in Greensboro this year at the age of more than 100 years), and Dr. W. S. Long, former president of Elon College. The Conference responded by appointing or authorizing the president to appoint a commission to meet with a like commission from the Christian church to formulate terms of union. This joint commission afterwards had a meeting, but could not agree upon any practical basis of union.

The proposition to establish a Conference paper was made by the present editor of the Methodist Protestant Herald. The Conference heartily approved this proposition, and the Methodist Protestant Herald started on its career, then and for some years bearing the name of Our Church Record.

In the third of a century since that Asheboro Conference, under the blessings of our Heavenly Father, our church in North Carolina has made great progress in many ways. This should hearten us, but there is so much yet to be done that none of us should feel like resting on our oars. We have a mission peculiarly our own. Nobody else can do our work for us. The fields are white unto the harvest for us. We should hear and heed the divine call that is ever coming to us Methodist Protestants in North Carolina. When we hear this year in the Asheboro Conference reports that are better than the corresponding ones of 1894, let us thank God and take new courage.

A Man From Maine

When I was a boy my father was engaged in interstate commerce and had to have a license from the Federal Government. I recall one time when in Bennettsville, S. C., an officer from Maine came to my father's camp and asked to see my father's license. I also recall something of the feeling aroused in my breast by the incident. My father manifested no sentiment and perhaps felt none; but to me the thought of having to submit to a man from Maine was very humiliating. The man was a good-looking man, even a kind-looking man, and showed no signs of haughtiness, gave no evidence of a domineering spirit, but to me he was "a man from Maine," and I rebelled against the necessity of having to deal with him. It would not have been near so bad if he had been from Virginia or Tennessee. It would not have been quite so bad if he had been from New York or Massachusetts, but he was "from Maine," and that seemed too much to bear.

I now see how foolish and wrong was my judgment. Instead of disliking that man as an intruder or interloper, I should have considered how good he was to leave his home and people in far-away Maine and come to South Carolina to help serve the people of the South. He was not an enemy, but a friend. He was making sacrifice of his own comfort that he might help us to a better state.

That prejudice of my boyhood was perhaps natural, though it was foolish. It is so with all prejudices against strangers. It is contrary to the scriptural injunction which bids us be not forgetful to entertain strangers, and encourages us to do so by the consideration that some have thereby entertained angels unawares. Yes, the stranger may be an angel, a messenger from God. He may come with important messages from God, messages upon which our success and well-being depend. How suicidal it would be to reject the Lord's messengers and refuse to receive the Lord's messages. Maine is not far away as it was in my boyhood days. The American people has become one people, and there is so much in common between us and the "man from Maine," that we can entertain him gladly and find with him good-fellowship.

It is not spatial separation that should alarm us, but moral distance. Good and bad are as far part as ever and can never be brought together.

METHODS OF EVANGELISM

We hear quite an amount about "Methods of Evangelism." Appoint Committees on Evangelism &c., &c. We did not use to hear anything about "methods of evangelism," but sinners were converted just the same, and a larger percentage than today, it seems. The whole thing, to our mind, is proof of a loss of faith in the real, and only "method of evangelism" that has ever been effective, or ever can be, that announced by Jesus himself, in Matt. 28:19, 20, and in Mark 16:15, to "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

What other method do we want? Can we improve on Jesus' method? The method he practiced himself? The whole thing smacks of "modernism" and a weakening of faith in God and his method. Or course preaching does not preclude personal touch and personal appeal. It never has and never can. Neither can personal appeal take the place of the public proclamation of the word. Paul in his last epistle, in expectation of martyrdom, said, "I charge thee therefore, before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word." II Tim. 4:1, 2. This has all the pathos and solemnity of a dying request and an oath. He was "ready to be offered and the time of his departure was at hand," and recognizing the fact that he was in the presence of "God and the Lord Jesus Christ" he makes this earnest, solemn, and last appeal to his son in the gospel. And then for uninspired and often unspiritual men, to be talking about methods of evangelism! The method that the church has used all down the ages is being belittled. The method of Christ and Paul, and all the apostles. Of Luther and Wesley and Spurgeon and all the host of great reformers, evangelists and soul-winners of the present and the past. As a certain member of Congress said, more than 50 years ago, in reference to the resumption of specie payment, that the way to "resume is to resume." So the only way to evangelize is to evangelize. Man has been playing the fool all down the ages in thinking to improve on God's Word and God's methods. As man loses spirituality he loses faith, and as he loses faith he begins to employ all kinds of trivial humanisms to try to save himself and save the world. And the thing is always an egregious failure. The Inter-Church Movement was a great big failure. A great big human "programme" with God left out, or practically so. These things have always failed and always will fail. It requires men and women "full of faith and the Holy Ghost" to bring men to Christ. It requires something more than intellectual conviction to bring persons to repentance and salvation. Nearly everybody is intellectually convinced that he is a sinner. The devils know this. But over and above all intellectual conviction there must be that added spiritual conviction by the Holy Spirit that causes persons to feel that they are in danger of eternal perdition. Often causing persons to quake and tremble and even fall. But all this modern, nice, dry-eyed, decision-day, "programme" business never causes this deep conviction, because there is little or none of God in it. Just read in the Acts of the apostles—and what was their method? In Jerusalem, in Samaria, and "all the region round about?" Just the simple, plain, unadulterated gospel, preached.. That is, announced, "cried out," publicly proclaimed. So of Paul in all his missionary, evangelizing journeys. He was "not ashamed of the gospel" in its inadulterated simplicity at Atheus, Ephesus, nor any other city or place he visited, not even at Rome. And he established churches everywhere he went, so far as we know. The point we make is that Paul succeeded by the method announced in the Great Commission. And he formed new churches by this method, and this method alone, that were able to stand and continue after he departed. And it is so still. The real missionary—not the medical missionary, nor mere school teachers—but the real preacher of the gospel, that goes among the most debased in South America, Africa, India, China, and the most "out-of-way" places, succeeds in bringing hundreds and thousands to Christ by the "foolishness of preaching" the pure, simple word of God in faith and in the power of the Holy Spirit. This is the only effective method. It is God's method. He's given us no other method, and we as his professed followers have no right to depart from this method. And when we do, it only shows that we have departed from the "simplicity that is in Christ," "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." Paul foresaw and spoke of these days.

Of course when persons lose their spirituality, if they ever had any, of course their faith declines, and they lose the power to preach sermons having the unction of the Holy Spirit, having the power to "convict of sin, righteousness, and judgment," and in their desperation they begin to resort to "methods," like Saul, in his desperation, resorted to the witch of En-Dor. The whole thing is pitiable. What is needed is fasting and praying, and not seeking new methods. In memory of this scribe this used to be done, and there were results. There would be results still if this were done. Occasionaliy there is a preacher of this kind left. We have one man in mind now who would spend the forenoon in his room in prayer and study of the word. He did not spend his time out of the pulpit in a "social" way, and on the street in talk not relevant to a revival. We heard this man more than three weeks, and the result was more than 400 conversions of the old type. Went to the altar and got on their knees and prayed through in the old-fashioned way. We attended this meeting and studied it, and it was the only meeting of the real old-time Methodist type that we've seen in many years. No sensationalism. No undue "excitement," but occasionally a real old-time shout. What was the "method?" Nothing spectacular. No waving of handkerchiefs, nor concerted hand-clapping and slapping of books while singing &c. But simple, plain, orthodox sermons of "ye old time kind," singing and prayer. But not waltzes and jiggs, but real gospel hymns and songs, led by a real Holy Spirit filled organist, that made no attempt at display. God's method was followed, and the result glorious. The preacher preached four or five days before an altar call was made. And during this time the preacher did not "wear the people out" with all kinds of little hand-raisings, and standings-up and sittings down. But just let the people take in the word and think. And when the first call was made about a dozen deliberately arose and came to the altar and knelt down and prayed, and were saved. And this was just the beginning: For about three weeks this was repeated at every service save one, only it was twenty, thirty, forty, and even fifty at the altar, of all ages, but mostly adults. Middle-aged men and women—old men, hardened men, all kinds of men—and, were converted. This the result of using God's simple method of evangelism—preaching the word and prayer, without any human additions. No time was used in having persons to raise hands, stand up, sit down, &c., &c., ad infinitum, as is often done, until the people do not know what to do, for fear they will be misunderstood or tell a lie.

Another notable illustration of God's method of evangelism, was Rev. R. A. Pearson, the Cumberland Presbyterian evangelist. He preached. He preached the word, an hour at a time, and the people listened spell-bound. He was not oratorical—no attempt at oratory—but the people forgot the preacher, being absorbed in his message. No light jesting and joking, attempting to be funny and entertaining. Results: Hundreds were saved, wherever he went. This was before jazz had captured the church, and of course the singing was of a high order, spiritually. His sermons were orthodox and evangelical, wholly free from any cheap, sensationalism.

Like the first named preacher he spent much time in his room in prayer. He did not "go from house to house" in a succession of social rounds. In the beginning of his meetings he told the people publicly that he could not accept miscellaneous invitations to dine and take tea &c., that he appreciated their kindness, but had learned that whenever a preacher attempted to do this, the result was that the "preacher went to the pulpit with a full stomach, an empty head, and a cold heart," and, of course, there was little, or no success. When will preachers ever learn, that in order for the word to carry conviction, it must be accompanied with that mysterious something called unction. It cannot be seen, but it can be felt. It is not intellectual, but spiritual. The most able, profound sermons in the world fall flat without this. We repeat, when will the great mass of preachers ever learn this? The church's faith in this age is too much "in the wisdom of men rather than in the power of God." That is the reason that there is so much "sending off" for some "big" preacher, rather than using "home talent." And it is generally a failure, so far as any great awakening is concerned—few, or none, saved. And the sum of the report of the meeting usually is, "the results were not what we hoped for, but we believe great good was done." We always feel in reading such reports that there is a feeling of disappointment running through the whole, and well there may be, and why? The preacher was capable and intellectual, but lacked unction; his sermons, for this reason, did not affect the heart and carry conviction. If the intellectual is all, or the principal thing needed in preaching, why not just buy a volume of sermons, as Wesley's, Whitefield's, Stockton's, or Spurgeon's, and read them? As to the tricks of the stage, and the jester, and all clownishness, they are all utterly unworthy of a minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Well within the memory of this writer, up to about 25 or 30 years ago, our revivals were conducted by the pastors, with another pastor to help, with local preachers and supernumeraries and superannuates even. It would be a method of exchange—you help me and I help you—and the meetings were far more spiritual than today. There was no such a thing as getting one man to do all the preaching as today, and all other preachers who might chance to attend, ignored and kept silent. There was a freedom, a brotherliness, existing in the church, and among the preachers, that does not exist today, and the result of all this modern, straight-laced program method is, that the Holy Spirit is grieved, and the meeting is cold and ineffective. Often a burning message is laid on the heart of some local minister, preacher, or visiting one, but he has no opportunity to deliver it. He's often saddened and depressed, and the Spirit is grieved, and the meeting suffers because of it, but those who are under the delusion of this modern, nice, "cut and dried" plan never suspect the trouble. The younger preachers have never seen but one plan at work—the one preacher plan—and are innocently of the opinion that it is the only plan, perhaps; but some of us who have been attending "big meetings" for 60 years have seen both plans at work, and are sure that the old plan was more effective. God does not call some men to preach, and then call some other preachers to put a gag on them.

In the 14th chapter of I Cor., verse 31, is a statement of Paul that covers the whole ground, to which the church should give heed: "For ye may all prophesy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted." Prophesying in the sense of the above verse, and in this 14th chapter, is the equivalent of preaching: "He that prophesieth speaketh unto man to edification, and exhortation, and comfort. " (Verse 3). We would not infer that all meetings should be conducted just precisely like the apostle's injunction for Corinth; but the same principle should be observed, "all" should have a chance, or "showing," not just a few.

At the funeral of an aged minister last year, we heard this: The minister who was past four score, had spent the most of his days in the town where the funeral was held. Part of his life had been devoted to the pastorate, and part not. During one of the intervals in which he was local, though not a "local preacher," a meeting was in progress in his home town, had been in progress about a week, and not a "grunt" as one old brother used to say. And this minister met the pastor and his help on the street, and he inquired about the success of the meeting, and was told—no success—and he seemed much moved, tears came in his eyes, and he said "something must be done." Perhaps he said that he had a message he wanted to deliver; any way, he was asked to preach at the next service, and he did, and the fire fell, and there was a glorious outpouring of the Spirit, and the meeting was a success from that time on. Who knows how many meetings fail because some man who is not in the pastorate, to whom God has given a message, is ignored, overlooked, treated with indifference as a minister of Jesus Christ? This does mean that just anybody and everybody is to be put up to preach; but that men in good standing and of at least fair gifts and qualifications should be given some recognition as a minister of Jesus Christ. These proper courtesies used to be extended, not only to our own ministers and preachers, but to those of sister denominations also, when orthodox and evangelical. And there was a brotherliness, a richness, a graciousness pervading our meetings in those days that is sadly lacking today. But now too often our meetings are nice little affairs, cut out by pattern—not methodistic, however—made up of little sentence prayers, jazz songs, raising of hands, shaking hands, and some times other little performances "too tedious to mention," that get nowhere. Some of these may be all right in a way, but they sustain about the same relation to a real revival that three inch guns would be on a battle-ship, when 8, 10, 12, and 16 inch guns are needed.

Instead of seeking "new methods" of evangelism we need to get back to "the simplicity that is in Christ," and give his own simple method of preaching the word—all the word, fearlessly, uncompromisingly, in faith and in the power of the Spirit—a fair trial, as in others days, accompanied by earnest, importunate prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and earnest, wise personal appeal. These are the only effective means in bringing real revivals. And we'll never have any other.

When God's method fails it's folly to resort to any other. Everybody is not going to repent and be saved, it matters not who preaches. It never has been so and it never will be so. There were some persons who heard Christ and the apostles who never repented. It's been so all down the ages and it will continue so until Jesus comes. Some persons "do always resist the Holy Ghost," and, of course, will be eternally damned. But it's by God's method—the "foolishness of preaching"—that people are saved, if saved at all, and when this fails there is no hope. Saves those that "believe," and no others. (Of course this does not preclude personal appeal, as has already been stated. Christ used this in addition to preaching.)

So when preaching fails, the only remedy is for preacher and people to fast and pray as in other days, that the power of the Holy Spirit may be present, the power of Pentecost. This never fails to "save some," and usually many. There needs to be humiliation, confession, and prayer, as with Israel after the defeat at Ai, many times. A "golden wedge or a Babylonish garment" sometimes needs to be brought to light, and it requires earnest, agonizing prayer to do this.

The simple preaching of the word has been belittled until we need not be surprised if the young people "do not stay for preaching." For the last forty years we've been hearing on the Conference floor, by both preachers and laymen, statements like this: "O, we don't care so much about preaching, just so a preacher is a good visitor. So he gets out among the people &c., &c." We've talked this kind of thing in Conference and out of Conference, both publicly and privately, until it had its effect. We're reaping what we've been sowing. We've spoken depreciatingly of preaching—giving it a secondary place, until our young people, in many places, it seems, are "taking us at our word," and are absenting themselves from preaching. Need we be surprised? If visiting, and the social touch, and all kinds of entertainments are emphasized more than the preaching of the word, need we be surprised at the situation today? And this is precisely what we've been doing for a third of a century and more; and it will require another third of a century to undo it, if it is ever undone. Heart aches and tears will not undo it. There must be a radical change of attitude and teaching. Preaching must be given its God-given place—first place. And in order that the preacher "preach the preaching" that God would have him preach, "with the Holy Ghost send down from heaven," he must have time to pray—"tarry until he's endued with power from on high." This is an absolute necessity. Of course the unspiritual do not see, know, or understand this. But they are not to be listened to. We've done that too much already which has gotten us where we are. This is a case in which it is "blessed is he that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly."

There are other things, such as personal touch, personal appeal, and teaching that have their place, but they are all secondary to "preaching the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven." We are not talking of mere intellectual dissertations and disquisitions and essays minus the unction of the Holy Spirit, but the real Spirit-accompanied word of God that melts and burns and pierces the conscience, enlightening the understanding, bringing Divine conviction as at Pentecost, and at thousands of other times and places. This is the preaching that God would have preached. This is the "method of evangelism" that is to bring the world to Christ if it is ever done. Tarry, tarry—"until," you are endued. Don't go without it. But few heed this Divine injunction, and, of course, fail; and then liable to become a prey to every kind of will-o-the-whips of the world, modernism, and the devil.

J. F. Dosier.

WHY I SHALL NOT VOTE FOR UNION

If I could see how the cause of missions, or any other activity of the church would be benefited; if I could see how the union of the two foreign Boards, or of all four Mission Boards, would result in larger sums of money for use in the spreading of the Gospel and in the work of the Kingdom; if I could see how the union could arouse interest in those now indifferent, or educate those now ignorant of the general benevolences of our Church, then I would vote for union. But so far I have been unable to see how any of these much-desired results will be brought about by the union. While much has been said and written lately about the wonderful advantages that will come to the Church from such union, nothing definite has been told as to what those advantages will be. Nor are the sponsors of the union any more clear about the benefits that have come about from the tentative union under which we have been working since last General Conference. More than a year ago I asked the Recording Secretary of the Union Board what some of these benefits were, and her reply was that if I could not see them for myself no one could tell me. Well, I have not seen them, and no one has told me what they are.

On March 15th, 1927, I wrote Dr. Broomfield, President of the Union Board, as follows:

"For the annual meeting of the W. F. M. S. this coming May I want to strike a sort of balance sheet, with arguments pro and con, in regard to the Union. When you have time, will you write out the arguments you would like to have presented in favor of the union of the two missionary boards? I want to be perfectly fair to both sides."

He did not answer, though I know he received the letter, for he replied to other items contained in it. If the advantages of the union are so apparent, why are they never enumerated?

In the churches which have united their mission boards, it has not been an unqualified success. I have talked with a number of women in the Congregational, Christian, and Presbyterian Churches, and they all agree that their women have lost interest since they work just for a certain budget, and no longer have the definite personal touch with the missionaries and the work which they formerly had. The money does not come in so freely since they no longer know where it is going. Some stations have had to be closed and some missionaries brought home because of lack of funds; the union has not increased the income of the united boards.

It is often said that "Union is in the air," but if so, it has not "taken" on all who have been exposed. The great M. E. Church still has its four mission boards, and the leaders do not want a union. In the annual report of the M. E. Church for 1925 we read: "The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society spent more than $2,250,000 in 1925 in missionary work; it has 700 missionaries in service in all parts of the world; it has a membership of 600,000 in the United States." If the M. E. Church feels that a society with a membership of 600,000 women, spending a million and a quarter dollars a year, can do better work alone, can not our ten thousand women be trusted to do as well?

The United Presbyterians, a small denomination with a membership about the same as our own, has but one Woman's Board. They publish the following in their last report: "The Woman's Board was given the highest recommendation by the Assembly." (A body like our General Conference). "In the report it was noted that the women had no deficit, and that a thank-offering of $170,000 had been received." The headquarters of the woman's board are in Pittsburgh, and the women meet every week and spend a whole day in prayer and in plans for the work! is it any wonder they have missions in every continent, and can raise a thank-offering of almost three times as much as our women are allowed to raise for all their work? These women have a State charter much like our own; their money does not count on the church budget, and they are responsible to no other Board for their spending of it. They use their thank-offering to help out whatever branch of the church work is most in need.

It has long been a dream of mine that in our own church we might have a larger society of church women, broader in its scope than just a missionary society, which would include all the women of the church, perhaps automatically by virtue of their church membership. In every church we find some women who do not believe in missions and who never give anything toward either home or foreign missions. Latest statistics give the membership of the Methodist Protestant Church, in round numbers, at 188,000. Presumably one-half of these are women; ministers agree that this is a conservative estimate; yet counting both missionary societies there are only 18,000 members, less than one-fifth of the women church members. In what are the other four-fifths interested? Some perhaps hold dear in their memories some old loved pastor, under whose preaching they were converted; they would probably be interested in and work for and give toward the Fund for Superannuated Ministers. Others with little children in their homes would likely see the need of adding to the fund for the Children's Home at High Point, and still others might be more generous in giving toward the funds for the Old Folks' Home at West Lafayette. There are a number of these General Conference interests, totalling 11 per cent of the budget, which have no Boards to work for them. Instead of taking away from the few missionary women the work they have done so well, why not try forming a larger Woman's Society which would include all the women of the church, and give them added responsibility and a bigger task? If each of the 94,000 women church members would pay ten cents a month dues, they would have $112,800 a year. How much good they could do with that.

The present division of the "Budget Dollar" is:

Board of Foreign Missions	25 cents
Board of Home Missions	23 cents
Board of Education	23 cents
	71 cents

Give to the women of the Church the task of raising the other 29 cents. I believe they would do it, gladly and willingly; let's try it. FLORA B. STURGEON.

No Scripture of Private Interpretation

Peter wrote in his second epistle that no prophecy of scripture is of private interpretation. What did he mean? The meaning is by no means clear.

The Concordant Version renders it—"No prophecy of scripture is becoming its own explanation." This throws little light, if any, upon the meaning of the apostle. Referring to the original of the word interpretation, the word explanation may be regarded as a fair equivalent in our language. We believe the meaning hinges on the meaning of the word translated private. Considering this word in the original language of the New Testament, we believe that it could be rendered arbitrary. Then the statement would be, No prophecy of scripture is of arbitrary interpretation. Peter goes on to tell how the prophecies of scripture came into being. They were written by men under the influence of the Holy Spirit. They therefore bear a meaning given to them by God. It is the reader's duty to seek for the meaning of God and not arbitrarily read into the prophecies a meaning of his own. It is in our power to do this. We may wrest the scriptures to our own destruction. We may transform the Bible entirely by this process of injecting our own thought instead of accepting under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Many of the schisms in the church have been due to arbitrary and false interpretations of the scriptures. Men have made the passage mean what they wished it to mean rather than seek honestly to know what it does really mean. How outrageously wrong it is to meet God's attempt to reveal to us the truth with an attitude that would replace God's will with our own—arbitrarily bend the revelation to suit our preferences.

FOREIGN MISSIONS—THE NEW CHINESE CHURCH

Much is being said and written today about the new Chinese Church that is to be. Reports from our own missionaries are to the effect that a new day is dawning for the Church in China; that a great change in Church administration and Church organization is both apparent and imminent. minent.

In the August 1927 number of The Chinese Recorder is an article entitled "When We Go Back." In the very beginning of this article the author writes "Before ever we (shall we say) 'silver star missionaries' left our stations, we felt the change in the air and knew that when we went back things could not be the same." And, I think, most missionaries and those who have first hand knowledge of the situation believe that Church conditions in China after the war will not be the same as they were before the war.

Again, the Chinese, especially the younger and more aggressive group fully believe that there will be a change in ecclesiatical life. They are expecting it. They are clamoring for it. They are demanding it. They want a Christian Chinese Church. Their desire for independent nationalism in the political realm has entered likewise into the ecclesiastical realm.

But do they want what they think they want? Will they be satisfied with what they think they want after they have it? If they get what they think they want will it abide? Will it endure?

The Chinese, in general, seem to have a very inferior conception of what the Church ought to and must be in order to survive. For instance, in the Chinese Year Book for 1926, one of the ablest and most trusted young Chinese leaders speaks of the Church quite plainly as the contribution which the religious genius of China is to make to our conception of the Christian Church. These are his words: "Religion should be left to individual initiative and achievement without organized propaganda and public worship of any kind or sort." In this same Year Book the editor also writes: "In spite of the comparative lack of cohesion in the Christian movement as a whole there is a slowly growing desire and effort to promote Christian fellowship as distinct from and above the claims and efforts of ecclesiastical, denominational or theo logical unity. It is felt by some that this higher and freer Christian fellowship is possible even though intellectual and ecclesiastical unity is hardly a practical question at the present time."

Well does Dr. Robert E. Speer, Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. and one of the best informed missionary secretaries of our day, reply by saying, "There is a measure of truth in this, but the danger is the broadcast conception of the Church in China, that it can dispense altogether with local congrega tional organization, that it need be nothing but a tendency pouring through national life, content to express itself in this and the other form of national movement and without any definite, coherent, congregational unit, such as we know is absolutely, biologically essential to the Christian Church. We cannot have Christianity in the world unless it is built on a great cellular organization of definite and vital and living congregational units scattered through mankind, visible and gathering together Christians of this, that and the other community in a tangible, actual local Christian society. If Christianity has no corporate expression, if it is to be left to pure individual initiative without any organized propagation and without any public worship of any sort, why, you know how soon it will evaporate and disappear as a force even in the life of individuals. The kind of a Christian Church that it is our business as missionary agencies to establish in China must be an embodied organization. It can't be just a vague influence floating out across the land. The doubt of this is one of the difficulties in the Church in China today."

EDUCATIONAL NEWS ITEMS

Dickenson College, Carlisle, Pa., has for years limited its enrollment to approximately 500 students, although accepting at the opening of the school year 550 or 560, expecting that a number would drop out.

Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio, places the limit at 1,000, admitting not over 400 to the freshman class. Her facilities are sufficient so that the maximum class is kept at 30 and the average is much below this.

Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, has set their enrollment limit to 325. Due to the plan followed of a student studying five weeks and then working five weeks they serve around 750 students each year.

In the great universities much of the teaching is done by young and inexperienced instructors. In the smaller church college this is very seldom done so that the student has immediate contact with older, more nature and experienced teachers.

Dr. Lucious C. Clark, chancellor of American University, in his address to the student body at the opening of the school declared there is a tendency for students to get a "smattering" of many subjects without mastering any. Proficiency alone will enable one to do something practical with the knowledge gained.

Dr. F. C. Eiseln, president of Garrett Biblical Institute, on the other hand points out the dangers of specialization and technical training. "The aim of education," he asys, "is to fit men and women for an active part in practical life but the emphasis on practical has some dangers. There is a danger in the modern emphasis of creating a lot of machines and forgetting that first emphasis should be placed upon making a real man who can enter into the complex of life and because of a well-rounded personality can make worthwhile contributions." He also declared that physical and social training as well as spiritual reliance was necessary.

"Freshman Week" was observed by more colleges this year than ever. The purpose is to accustom the first year students to the routine and customs of the institution before the return of the upper classmen. The experiment seems to be wholly beneficial.

Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Iowa, has established a new variety of "savings clubs." The new or prospective student deposits some of his weekly earnings with the college. No matter what the amount it draws interest at six percent payable on the day the student enters the college. This money may be withdrawn at any time but no interest will be paid unless the holder enters Cornell.

A sum of $25,500,000 was earned last year by students in 408 colleges and universities in the United States, and of the entire enrollment in these institutions, 39 percent were partially or wholly self-supporting, according to a recent study made by the Bureau of Education. Interior Department, of students in co-educational institutions, 44 percent are working their way.

The will of Elbert H. Gary, former chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, includes eight trust funds of $50,000 for the establishment of "Elbert H. Gary Scholarships" in small colleges and universities. These scholarships are to provide for the education of students who in the opinion of the various Boards of Trustees, are morally, mentally and physically worthy and competent, and least able to pay their tuition.

Cigarette smoking by women students at Ohio Wesleyan University will be followed by their expulsion from the University, President J. W. Hoffman has announced in a letter he sent to parents of all students who expected to enroll last September. A ban on automobiles and on student marriages is also announced to the parents. Students who do not approve of the school's rules are invited to begin their higher education elsewhere. Co-eds will be permitted to dance if they file a written request from their parents. No student is permitted to attend out of town dances. While smoking by women students has never been a serious problem the more drastic statement has been issued to insure that the practice will be entirely eliminated.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Protestant Church is considering the advisability of recommending to its colleges the placing of a limit of 500 on the enrollment of each. This would apply to the number of fully accredited literary students only. This step is contemplated because the resources of our schools or of the Board of Education are not sufficient to warrant increasing the responsibility of our institutions until they are fully equipped to give adequate instruction to the number suggested. Adrian College has officially set 350 as the limit at which her enrollment will be paid.

It is to be hoped that, in so far as possible, the chairmen of committees will have reports drafted before going to conference. If the other members of committees have suggestions, and will immediately write to the chairmen and give those suggestions, that will help.

SPECIAL NOTICE

We are meeting this year in the one hundredth annual session of the North Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church. On Thursday evening, November 3rd, at 7:30 we will hold a special service in the Conference church in Asheboro celebrating that fact.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Conference historian, will read a brief history of the Conference, and Rev. Roby F. Day, D. D., president of the Eastern Conference, will preach the sermon, bringing to us fraternal and congratulatory expressions.

Plan to attend the services that evening and participate in this golden anniversary.

Faithfully,

A. G. DIXON.

The WORK and the WORKERS

Tabernacle

On Thursday afternoon, October 13th, I drove with Rev. W. F. Ashburn to Tabernacle for his fourth quarterly conference. This splendid charge is making good progress under the new plan caused by the division of the old Tabernacle charge, at last Conference, into two charges.

The Tabernacle end is paying the same salary this year that the entire charge was paying, and the promise is that the salary will be paid in full. They have already made substantial payments on the budgets, and will pay more yet. They paid their college assessment early in the year. Brother Ashburn has done a splendid year's work.

Kernersville

On Saturday afternoon I was with Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk and his people in their fourth quarterly conference at Sandy Ridge. These good people are considerably behind with both pastor's salary and budgets, and they seemed a bit discouraged about it. However, they have done a good year's work, and both pastor and people have reasons to be encouraged when they compare results with those of the last two or three years. The people seem to appreciate the work of Brother Lowdermilk, and we are hoping their reports for Conference will be considerably bettered during the next two weeks.

Forsythe

On Saturday evening I met with Rev. George L. Curry and his people in an adjourned quarterly conference at Maple Springs. Their financial reports for the year are good, and will be better by the time two more weeks roll around.

Brother Curry and his people had a great day Sunday. We had the pleasure of participating with them in the corner-stone-laying at Mount Carmel, and also of preaching the dedicatory sermon and then dedicating this splendid new church plant. It is one of the most splendid country church plants in the Conference. A new church has been built to the end of the old church, with a basement under the entire new part, and with the old church converted into Sunday school rooms.

Then in the evening I preached at Maple Springs, and took part in the corner-stone-laying for this reconstructed plant. This church has been moved and placed over a splendid basement for Sunday school purposes. It was so elevated that the basement is a good day-light basement. Great improvements have been made here. Brother Curry and his people have done a very fine year's work. Rev. N. M. Modlin, of Lincolnton, was present at both churches and took part in the services.

Fourth Quarterly Reports

Blanks are going out this week to all pastors for fourth quarter reports. Pastors will be anxious to have important facts from their fields mentioned in the president's report to Conference. This will be done provided the facts reach me not later than Monday, October 31st.

Pray for Conference

The Annual Conference is to meet so soon. November 2nd, at 9:30 a. m., we meet for the opening session of Conference in the Methodist Protestant church in Asheboro.

The Conference has never in its history met when there were problems more grave confronting it than this time. We will need all the patience and all the grace possible, and we will need very clear divine guidance. So once more I am asking every praying person, who reads this, to join us in most earnest prayer that God Himself may have right of way in all Conference actions. And that His guidance in it all may be so clear that we will all be happy in the results, knowing that His will has been done. Pray that His will may prevail.

LOOKING AHEAD FOR HIGH POINT COLLEGE

Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of High Point College, favors a co-operative plan of education similar to that at the present time being used by the University of Cincinnati, according to an interview given by him for a recent number of the Hi-Po, the college weekly newspaper. "Such a system," he declares, "gives the student an opportunity for alternate study and practical training. For instance, he may attend classes for a period of two weeks and then work for a like period in some industrial plant."

President Andrews believes that High Point offers a great opportunity for such a system of education to be worked out here. With its many industrial plants the city of High Point alone could in all probability employ a large number of students to work in alternate shifts. Half of the group would work for two weeks while the other half attended classes. Then the two groups would exchange places. Close proximity to Winston-Salem and Greensboro, both large industrial towns, would make it possible for many more students to find employment. Such a plan would of course mean a longer school session and at least five years for graduation, but it would at the same time mean that after graduation those students, having had the advantages of practical experience in industry, would be better fitted to meet the competition of industrial and professional life.

While favoring such a plan for High Point College, Dr. Andrews says that it cannot be put into effect at an early date because of the fact that it would call for more equipment and a larger faculty than the present financial resources of the college can take care of. He further stattes that the present plans of the administration of the college call for the enlargement of Roberts Hall, the administration building, the duplication of dormitories, and the erection of a library and gymnasium. When these things have been accomplished and the endowment of the college has been raised, the college president will favor the adoption of the co-operative plan for those students who find it necessary to earn their college expenses while in college. Other students will of course continue the regular college work.

THE PRIZE

Jean and Marion were quite excited, and they could scarcely wait until they got home from school to tell their mothers about the prize.

"There is to be just one, and I hope I'll get that," exclaimed Marion eagerly. "Of course, if there were two, I'd like Jean to have the other one. The prize is to be given by our teacher, Miss Ferris, to the one in our school room who is the most polite, and the most thoughtful of others for a whole week. Of course, she must be there every single day, and not miss one of her recitations."

"That's fine," approved Marion's mother, stroking the yellow curls of her little daughter, and tying the loosened bows on her shoulders a little more snugly. "If you should get the prize, we will all be very happy, although if your little cousin Jean gets it, we shall be almost as glad."

Marion looked thoughtful a minute.

"I'd rather have it myself," she insisted, "but if Jean gets it, I'll be gladder than if anybody else does."

At that very moment, Jean was telling her mother all about the wonderful prize.

"I hope I'll get it," bubbled Jean, "for I'd like so much to write to my grammy and to say, 'I am the politest and the thoughtfulest child in our school room.' But Mummy, you'd have to tell me how to spell those big words."

Jean's mother nodded.

"I'd be glad to do that," she said, "but don't set your heart too much on the prize, dearie. Do the very best you can, but if Marion should get it, you'd be pleased, wouldn't you?"

Jean frowned and hung her head.

"I'm 'fraid," she returned with a half pout, "that Grammy and my daddy 'neverbody would like Marion better than me then."

"Oh, no they wouldn't," protested her mother. "You mustn't get any such idea as that into your head, for that is what we call jealousy, and jealously isn't a nice thing to have in our mind. Just to be jealous alone is enough to make people dislike us, or at least wish we were different. Naturally you'd like to win this gift, Jean, but after all it isn't the gift which counts. It's being courteous and kind and getting your lessons well and doing the very best you can—and you can do all that anyway. But if someone else does a little better than you do, you must be generous enough to give that boy or girl credit."

"I see," said Jean soberly, "and Mummy, if somebody else does better than I do, I'll just try and try and try to learn to do as well as he does."

"That's the right idea," beamed Jean's mother. "Always do the best you can, my dear, and we shall be very proud of you, and people will love you always."

Jean and Marion had much to say to each other about what they would do to please Miss Ferris, for they were fond of her.

"I shall say 'Good morning' and smile just as nice as ever I can when I go into the school room," said Marion.

"I'll do that too," declared Jean, "and perhaps I'll take her a pretty flower, or some of Mother's nice fudge, or ask her if she wouldn't like me to mail a letter for her."

"I made Kitty Dean laugh in school yesterday," said Marion, "and I'll not do that again."

"And I think I'll help Sammy Brown with his number work," decided Jean. "He never gets it right, and it would be polite I think, to help him with some of his 'zamples."

Of course, there was a good deal of talk about what the prize would be. Sammy Brown said he hoped he'd get it and that it would be a gun. Kitty Dean wanted a plum cake. Marion said probably it would be a book. And Jean said if she got it she hoped it would be a canary bird.

Miss Ferris sometimes overheard the talk, and although the children didn't know it, she made a list of all the things they mentioned wanting in a little book.

"I don't see how Teacher is ever going to know which one to give that prize to, because we have all been so good," mourned Sammy Brown. "And we have just today and tomorrow to go. Then next week we needn't be polite any more."

"There was a chorus of "Oh, the very idea!" And "Why, Sammy Brown!" Then the bell rang and the children slipped into their seats.

Jean was writing very carefully in her exercise book, and every letter was beautifully even and well made, when suddenly something gave her elbow a shove. Her pen went flying off to one side, and there was an ugly blot besides! Then a soft little tongue was trust against her cheek, and Jean heard suppressed giggles all around her.

She knew even before she looked, that Taxi, her pet puppy, had followed her, sneaking in and found her. He was all wet too, for it was raining outside.

"He may stay until recess," Miss Ferris decided, "then Jean must take him home."

When the spelling class was called to the recitation benches in front, Taxi trotted right at Jean's heels, and when Sammy forgot himself and whispered, "Taxi! Taxi!" Jean scowled him angrily.

Once when Miss Ferris asked a question and held up her hand as though she had something in it, Taxi hopped right up in front, sat up on his hind legs, and begged, at the same time giving a sharp "Yip!" The children were convulsed with mirth, so it was a good thing that recess was very near.

But it was raining harder than ever, and so Jean couldn't go out. Miss Ferris said that the children could play games in the big school room, and have the school house doll, Lady Susie, to play with.

Then Taxi was right in his glory. He ran and jumped and caught hold of skirts and pulled, and he tore Sammy Brown's new coat, and he nipped at heels and stockings, all in fun, but some of the children were afraid and cried.

The rain was stopping, so the teacher told Jean to put on her slicker and take the puppy home. When she got there, the house was locked. There was nothing to do but to take Taxi over to her Aunt Barbara's, and that was still farther. The tears came into Jean's eyes, for she knew she couldn't possibly get back for her geography class. She was back at the school house at last, and as she came out of the cloak room, a strange odor greeted her. She listened and heard a dull roar and a crackling. Surely something was burning.

The basement door was open and she went and looked down. The heat came up in a great rush from the direction in which there was a big bin of waste paper.

Jean was off like a flash! Miss Ferris was writing something on the blackboard. Jean pulled her over and whispered something in her ear. Then Miss Ferris laid down her chalk quietly, stepped to the door a minute, came back, and gave quick, crisp orders. It was none too soon!

There was no more school that day, but the next everything was all right again, for the fire laddies had got there so quickly that the fire had been put out without much damage.

And when it came time to award the prize, Miss Ferris said that they were to vote on the one who deserved it most.

Jean took her pencil and wrote the word "Marion," but every other child in the school room wrote the name "Jean." And when Miss Ferris came forward with a lovely canary bird in a golden cage, everybody clapped and clapped and clapped, and who should come running in at the door but Taxi who joined the applause by barking just as though he knew that he had a part in it all!—Selected.

The W. H. M. S. report did not reach us in time to be included this week.

Notice, pastors and people, this is very special. Please report when you have paid in full on the "Special 1 percent fund for Superannuates." No one will be able to tell when that is paid in full unless so reported. We are making a separate column of this fund and trying to report it accurate, and will in so far as it is reported either to the Treasurer, Mr. V. W. Idol, or myself.

One thing please specially note. The treasurer, Mr. V. W. Idol, has stated that he will take the last report of the W. H. M. S. and the W. F. M. S. published in the Herald for his final report for these Societies. Please get all the money into the treasurers of these Societies in time for their treasurers to report to me for the Herald that comes out next week. As the one that comes out during the Conference will be too late for him to make his report from.

Yadkin College charge goes over the top on all budgets, and special 1 percent.

Mebane goes over the top on the A. C. B. while Asheboro goes over on the G. C. B. On this Asheboro at present stands alone, as the others who have paid out have gone over the top on all. Fine, Asheboro, Yadkin, and Mebane.

Winston-Salem moves up and takes the honor of standing first on the G. C. B. from Liberty-Siler City. Now Siler City, race them for over the top on everything. Several other good gains were made this week. We are glad but are hoping for great gains in these last two weeks. A. G. DIXON.

NOTICE, NOTICE!

There will be all day services at Bethel Methodist Protestant Church, Alamance charge, on Sunday, October 30. A Thankoffering meeting will be held in the morning and a meeting to organize a Memorial Association in the afternoon. All people who have relatives or friends buried at that place are urgently requested to be present and take part in the organization.

DISTRICT MISSIONARY RALLY

Thursday, October 13, was a red letter day for District No. 2, as well as Flat Rock church (Vance), being the date and place of the Missionary Rally.

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 o'clock a.m. by District chairman. After singing, "The Morning Light is Breaking," Rev. J. L. Nichols conducted the devotional service, which he made very impressive.

Roll call showed ten societies of the eleven in our district represented, six home, and four foreign.

The reports were very encouraging financially, each society having paid about half of yearly apportionment. Few societies reported any young people's work. This was somewhat stressed by chairman and each society urged to elect a secretary of Young People's Work and try to get our young people lined up.

All were delighted to have with us six such splendid leaders and teachers as Rev. Clyde Auman recently returned missionary from Japan; Rev. J. R. Nichols of Cressville, Md.; Rev. L. W. Gerringer of Greensboro; Rev. H. L. Fogleman, Rev. R. A. Hunter, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, all of this district.

Rev. J. Clyde Auman gave an address at 11:15 on his work in Japan as well as interesting facts about that country, also explaining conditions of the terrible earthquake. He sang for us "Nearer My God to Thee" in the Japanese language.

After lunch Rev. R. A. Hunter conducted devotionals.

Rev. L. W. Gerringer delivered an address on The Three Reasons For Missions. It was filled with information and inspiration.

Rev. H. L. Fogleman spoke on The Necessity of Organizing Our Young People. He made it very plain and am sure it will result in a great effort being put forth to organize the young people of our district.

We were glad to have Mrs. Auman and little son with us also. Wish they could have remained longer.

Members of the district gave the ministers a rising vote of thanks for making our program so much worthwhile. The ministers in return gave the ladies a vote of thanks for the bounteous lunch that was served.

Miss Mary V. White will serve as district chairman again. The district was very reluctant to give up Mrs. Clarence Finch, our able secretary, who has served since this organization was formed, but she thought some one else should be elected, so it resulted in the election of Mrs. R. W. Harris from Rehoboth church, as secretary. Am sure she will make a splendid one as she is very interested in all missionary work. Miss Katie Cooke of Henderson church is assistant secretary.

Next district rally of missionary workers will meet with Mt. Carmel societies early in the new branch year. REPORTER.

NOTICE, AUXILIARY TREASURERS, W. F. M. S.

All money to be counted on the budget of the local church should reach me not later than October 31. This is necessary in order that my report to the conference treasurer, Mr. V. W. Idol may not be delayed. This is very important, and it is hoped that all auxiliary treasurers will co-operate with this plan.

No money received after October 31 can be counted on the 1927 budget of the local church

Why One Report Is Late.—It was written for last week but appears this week. It was mailed last week without a postage stamp on the envelope and with nothing to indicate who mailed it. The postmaster wrote to us about it, asking us to send two cents for it. We sent the two cents, not knowing whether it was worth two cents or not. The post master then forwarded it to us, but by the time it was received last week's paper was printed. It is a good report, well worth the postage, but it would have been more satisfactory in last week's paper. The moral is that you should see before you mail a letter that it has a stamp on it of sufficient strength to carry it where you want it to go.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

High Point.—At the Executive Board meeting of the two Missionary societies held October 4th, with Mrs. C. L. Whitaker at her home on Circle Drive, the name of Scholarship Loan Fund in High Point College was changed to High Point College Student Loan Fund, which is more definite as to meaning. This is a very worthwhile project of the Woman's Home Missionary Society and each auxiliary is apportioned 13 percent of its budgets for this purpose. Since we have a College, the women of our denomination can engage in no more worthy work than this means of helping our worthy boys and girls to help themselves to obtain an education. October is Pine Ridge month, and November with its fine opportunity for contributing to the happiness and welfare of our children in the Home by the annual Thanksgiving offering will soon be here. And let us not forget Bethel Home and its inmates, who so much deserve our support and appeal to all strong, robust men and women, who have been blest with the most desirable of earthly possessions, good health. 14 percent of our budget is apportioned for this cause and it is earnestly hoped that the auxiliaries will busy themselves, and arouse more interest in this beautiful benevolence.

At the Sunday school hour on Sunday morning Mr. Carey Davis' Orchestra, which was recently organized, delighted the members with some beautiful selections. At 11 o'clock Rev. P. E. Lindley delivered an impressive sermon on "The Choice of a Master." He told his hearers to choose a master and guide for life, one to whom can be entrusted our allegiance and leadership, and one that will cause us to outlive ourselves. The choir rendered a lovely anthem, "Angel Voices Ever Singing," by Shelley, and Mr. Clarence Schultheiss sang in his usual splendid voice "Great Peace Have They." Mrs. J. C. Whitsell is a recent valuable addition to the choir, and her lovely mezzo-soprano voice is a delight to the audience. The flowers in the church at this service, gorgeous yellow chrysanthemums, were placed there in memory of the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus H. Bodenheimer, who lost his life in the World War. This was a lovely tribute by these devoted parents to a worthy son. At the evening service the message on "Seeing Things Differently" was presented by Rev. E. L. Ballard, the Anthem was "In Thee Will I Put My Trust," and a mixed quartet sang "Some Blessed Day" with fine effect.

The members of the C. E. Society motored to the convict camp Sunday afternoon, and conducted services, a very commendable undertaking on the part of these splendid young people.

The Foreign Missionary Circles met Monday afternoon as follows: Circle no. 1 Mrs. L. J. Diffee chairman, at Mrs. J. A. Gray's on Lindsay street; Circle no. 2, Mrs. J. H. Walker, Jr., chairman, with Mrs. D. E. White on Lindsay street; and Circle no. 3, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt chairman, with Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, Circle Drive.

The Fourth and last quarterly conference will convene next Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the church. At this time written reports from the Sunday school, the different societies and organizations of the church will be expected, and the presence of every member of the conference is urgently requested, as it is imperative that the year's work in all phases may be reported in full to annual conference at Asheboro, November 2. Mr. H. A. Moffitt is the delegate from this church.

Rally Day will be observed by the Sabbath school next Sunday, October 23rd. The objective is two-fold; to have 100 percent attendance of members, and to raise an offering of $100 for the Board of Education, of which High Point College will receive its proportionate share.

The A. M. Idol Philathea class will hold a meeting Wednesday evening with Miss Lucille Pickens on W. Broad street. Miss Frances Montgomery is the associate hostess.

We are much gratified to see Mrs. W. P. Pickett out again after an illness of a few weeks.

Randleman Charge.—The Home-Coming service at Mt. Lebanon last Sunday was largely attended and was enjoyed by those present. The principal features of the day's program were several vocal selections by a Lexington quartet, two selections by the Worthville M. P. choir and an inspiring address by Prof. P. E. Lindley of High Point College. While everybody was asked to bring a light lunch, a feast fit for royalty was spread.

Next Saturday at 2:30 at Mt. Lebanon the fourth quarterly conference will be held. Dr. A. G. Dixon will preside. All officials are urged to be present promptly.

A great treat is in store for us at Mt. Lebanon Sunday , 11 a.m., Rev. J. Clyde Auman will preach. Everyone is invited to worship with us.

The pastor will fill his regular appointment at Level Cross at 3 p.m. Sunday and at Worthville 7 p.m. WM. H. NEESE.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our Sunday school is improving in attendance and interest. We have had several new members to join us recently. Officers for the Sunday school were elected yesterday as follows: E. T. Ellington, superintendent; W. J. Gallaway, assistant superintendent; Mr. Olli Knight, secretary; Mrs. W. E. Knight, pianist. All of the teachers of the Sunday school were re-elected. We will elect officers for the church next Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock service.

Our pastor has but one more appointment with us before he leaves for conference. We are hoping that conference will send him back to us, for we have all learned to love him and his wife and we feel like we can't let them leave us. We are behind on pastor's salary, but we hope before conference it will be paid in full.

The Woman's Missionary societies met in the home of Mrs. Alfred Gardener on Tuesday p.m., October 11, whith the president, Mrs. C. L. Spencer, presiding. Mrs. W. A. Ellington led the devotional after which the roll was called by the secretary. We were glad to have visitors with us. We were very sorry our pastor could not be with us owing to the illness of his son. We are using the programs prepared by the Board in our societies and we find that they are very helpful to us. We are going to have a bazaar at the home of Mrs. W. A. Ellington on Friday night, October 28, for the benefit of our missionary society. We are hoping to have a large crowd present for this occasion. May God bless the conference and may His will be done in all things. REPORTER.

Spencer Church.—Pastor Madison filled his last appointment for this conference year Sunday. But the fourth quarterly conference unanimously ask for his return next year. Our delegate to annual conference, Mr. J. W. Redding. We feel this has been a good year for us. And we are hoping for a better year next. We have taken in 12 new members, paid all claims in full and elected officers for coming year.

And I do hope we can have a church of our own soon. Our Sunday school doubled in numbers and we need more room. We hope to have our good pastor with us again soon.

MRS. CLYDE MAYES, Reporter.

Mebane.—Last Sunday morning we had a good attendance for Sunday school and Rally Day service. The program in charge of Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, Mrs. Hyfill Jobe and Mrs. George Wyatte was very interesting and instructive, and all who had parts in the program rendered them well. Reports as to the progress of the different departments of Sunday school and church work were given, aside from the children's program; these were indeed encouraging and helpful. We have some live organizations in our church and it should be encouraging to our membership to know what they as organizations are doing for the advancement of the Kingdom. At the evening hour a pageant, "Jehovah-Jireh," was presented to a large congregation; this too was an impressive service. Total collection for the day, $37.48.

The October meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society was held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Jobe with splendid attendance. During the social hour Mrs. Jobe served ice cream, cake and lemonade. Mrs. Frank Jobe will be hostess to the November meeting.

Monday evening of last week at 7:30 the Home and Foreign Missionary societies met in joint session with Mrs. Hyfill Jobe. All members and honorary members were urged to be present. The Home society had charge of the program and asked everybody to bring a penny for every year old they were. When the birthday money was counted it was found we had $12.51. The regular collection amounted to $6.35 for the Home society and $6.55 for the Foreign. During the social hour sandwiches and hot coffee were served.

Monday afternoon the William Nicholson Mission Band met with Lois Wilkerson, with nine members present and 25 cents collection.

REPORTER.

Rockingham.—On the fourth Sunday in September Dr. and Mrs. Dixon were with us throughout the day. We had three services that day. In the morning at 11 o'clock Dr. Dixon delivered a very touching and inspiring sermon. At the close of his sermon our church was dedicated by Dr. Dixon. At 2:30 on this day Mrs. Dixon gave a very interesting and helpful talk on her work as a missionary in Japan. Mrs. Dixon's talk pictured to us a striking contrast between our own American conditions and those over in Japan. At night at 7:30 Dr. Dixon again preached to the full interest of the people. We were so glad to have these dear folks back with us again. We always appreciate their visits.

On the first Sunday, October 2, our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, filled his appointment. His sermon was very inspiring.

On Wednesday night, October 5, Rev. C. E. Phillips was back with us again. Brother Phillips delivered a very touching sermon. We had one reclamation. At the end of the sermon Brother Phillips and his dear wife sang the song we all rejoice to hear them sing, the song "Forty Years Ago." We appreciate their visits and wish it possible for them to come more than they do. We are at any time glad to have them with us.

Our Sunday school is doing very well. The collections are good. Our Sunday school was off some on Sunday, October 9, due to the condition of the weather; but we hope for an increase on next Sunday.

The Phillips Evangelistic Club is still doing good work. They hold a meeting with the people in Honeytown every week. We feel that if this organization continues to work as it has, great good will be accomplished. We are pleased with such an organization.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held on Wednesday night, October 19. We hope to have all debts and church business straight by this time.

We are going to install a furnace in our church this fall. We are preparing to do this now. The Sunday school gave $5.00 on it yesterday, Sunday, October 9. The cash collection for the furnace on this day was $22.25, and we had several pledges. There were but a few there to pay on it at this time. We are sure when the weather clears up and our people get back to church, we can raise enough to pay for it at once. We are sure that almost every one of our members will want to take part in this event.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers,

(Miss) BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

Henderson.—Our Sunday school is making splendid progress since our Rally Day services, and October 2nd was Promotion Day in the lower departments. October 9th will be election day for the officers of the Sunday school. A nominating committee was appointed by Mr. Hunter, and we hope that after their installation our work will continue with increasing interest and service for the coming year. We feel very fortunate now in having Mrs. Blaine Hight as Sunday school pianist and Miss Maxine Taylor assisting as leader of the singing.

A special collection was taken at the Sunday school October 2nd for the purpose of purchasing 50 more song books. We are also delighted to report that the much-needed piano for the junior department has been bought, and only a small sum still due on it.

The W. H. and F. M. societies held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. C. F. Tanksley, Sr., September 19th. Mrs. L. R. Gooch, the president, called the meeting to order, and Mrs. J. J. Taylor conducted the devotionals.

The business session was as follows: Roll call, reading of the minutes, collection of dues, reports from various circle leaders, and reports from Sun Shine Circle, Mission Band, and Young Ladies' League. The program was on home missionary work, which was very interesting. Mrs. S. R. Harris read an account of the origin of our Children's Home and the splendid progress it has made. Mrs. S. R. Watson finished this by relating a self-experienced visit to our present Home. How favorably impressed she was by the true home-like atmosphere and pleasant conditions existing there! Mrs. Henry T. Powell then read an article on the work at the Pittsburgh Mission, showing the need of the true mission workers there among the poor immigrants. A very interesting account was then given by Mrs. F. R. Harris of the work being done at Pine Ridge, Ky. This was followed by the Question Box, conducted by Mrs. Clyde L. Finch. The meeting was then dismissed by prayer. Delicious refrshments were served by the hostess.

September 27th at 7:30 p.m. the officers and teachers of the Sunday school met at the home of Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Hunter for the purpose of solving some of the problems which might help to increase interest in that work. Owing to the illness of Mrs. Baity, our superintendent, Mr. J. M. Baity feels that it will be best for a new superintendent to be elected at once. We regret so much the sickness of Mrs. Baity and trust that she will have a speedy recovery. We also regret the loss of Mr. Baity as our Sunday school superintendent, as he has been most faithful in that office. Other matters of importance were discussed and plans made for cottage prayer meetings to be held the week preceding our revival meeting. Tuesday night, October 4, a prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Clyde Finch. Wednesday night the regular prayer meeting service will be held at the church. Thursday night a prayer service will be held at the home of Mrs. L. R. Gooch. Sunday, October 9, our revival services will begin and continue for ten days.

The Philathea class held a very interesting business meeting in their class room on Thursday night, September 29th. Mrs. Anne Mae McIntosh, Mrs. Howard Thorne and Miss Gracie Greenway as hostesses. The president, Mrs. A. B. Young, presided. Reports from all outstanding committees were given. There being no program for the evening, the meeting was closed by the class platform. The hostess then served refreshments.

MRS. C. FINCH, Reporter.

Calvary—As our reporter did not find time to report our services on Rally Day, I will make a brief report.

In spite of the rain a fair-sized congregation assembled for the children's part of the Rally Day program which was given at the Sunday school hour. The little folks did well, and the committee that had the program in charge is due the thanks of the church and congregation.

At the 11 o'clock hour we had the regular preaching service. A good sized congregation was also present for this service, perhaps the second largest congregation we have had this year. The Sunday before was the largest congregation for the year.

It was at the evening hour that we had the largest congregation and a very fine program. The main auditorium of the church was comfortably filled and quite a goodly number were seated in the gallery. The pageant, written by Miss Dorothy Elderdice, "Jehovah-Jireh," was well rendered by some of the adult people of our church, mostly young people. This was the finest thing, I think, that we have ever put on at Calvary church. Not only is it a very splendid pageant, but it was also presented well by those who took part. All those who took part and worked so faithfully in preparing for the service have the hearty thanks of the pastor.

I do not know just what the offering will amount to. The total brought in during the day was much larger than last year, but some expenses are to be paid out of that. However, I am quite sure we will be able to turn into the General Conference budget a considerable increase over that of last year..

This will possibly be the last time I will write to the Herald during this conference year, so I want to say that we have had a splendid year at Calvary. The work is in good shape, I think. We have received into membership a larger number this year than in either of the two previous years I have served the church. All finances will be paid, I think, so that we are expecting to turn in a 100 per cent report at conference time. All the different organizations of the church have done good work. In this public way I want to express my appreciation of the fine spirit of co-operation that has made possible the good work of the year.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Oak Grove.—Everything seems to be moving along very nicely. The attendance in Sunday school has been good, from time to time. We now have over a hundred on roll who attend very regularly, and we are hoping to reach the goal of 150 before long.

The first Sunday in October there was an old-time singing at Moriah. There was a large crowd present, all of whom seemed to enjoy the day. Brother George Gold from Virginia was present to do the leading of the singing.

On the second Sunday of October was our annual singing at Oak Grove. There was a large crowd present to take part in the singing.

We were glad to have with us at our singing one of our good members, Mrs. E. O. Peeler, from High Point, to hear the good singing. Everybody seemed to enjoy it.

Our Christian Endeavor society is still progressing nicely. We have a good attendance every Sunday evening. REPORTER.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—Yesterday was the last regular service of the conference year. The class roll was revised. Officers were elected and installed. The financial condition could be improved; the pastor's salary is nearly paid, but the budgets are behind. Owing to the business the pastor did not preach, and many people were disappointed; they look forward to his sermons. Many are now anxiously awaiting the actions of the annual conference to know if he is to return to us next year. They were glad to learn that the last quarterly conference instructed the delegate, Mr. J. D. Payne, to bring him back.

The Junior C. E. has put on a membership campaign; they had on their badges yesterday and seemed quite busy.

The fifth Sunday at 3 o'clock the pastor will preach at Mt. Hermon at the request of some of the people. The doors of the church will be opened. Communion will be observed.

REPORTER.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Sunday, 16th, was a most beautiful day. It being the third Sunday, Brother Hunter was with us to fill his regular appointment. His message was a very inspiring and helpful sermon, which was enjoyed by all present.

Sunday school attendance is encouraging and some good work is being done in school. Sunday was the regular day for election of officers of the Sunday school. C. W. Allen was elected superintendent, S. T. Lane assistant superintendent, W. E. Jones secretary. Teachers will be elected later.

Owing to the fact that most of our children are in day school and don't get time to practice, our Rally Day exercise is postponed till the fifth Sunday night in October at 7 o'clock.

Our fourth quarterly conference was held at Pilot church Saturday, October 15; it was well attended.

Conference unanimously voted to have our delegate, J. A. Allen, ask for Brother Hunter's return to this charge next year.

We feel very hopeful of a great year since conference voted for Brother Hunter's return after hearing him present a program to conference which he hoped and aimed to carry out should he be on this work next year. The program was as follows: Pinnacle to build four Sunday school rooms; Pilot to build or curtain off Sunday school rooms; Shoals church to be newly covered and four new Sunday school rooms added, and Mt. Zion to build a new church out-and-out with sufficient Sunday school rooms and heating plant built in. We certainly hope that the stationing committee of our annual conference may see fit to send Brother Hunter back to us; we need all these improvements and we also have the utmost confidence in Brother Hunter's ability to put over work of this kind. He is known throughout the North Carolina conference as a church and church choir builder.

Brother I. O. Hauser, circuit steward, talked to Mt. Zion folks Sunday in regard to financing general interests of our church; he insisted that all members and especially stewards put more persistence in getting finances for general interests.

Mrs. E. S. Stone is still confined to her home, but it also still improving and we are eager for the day to come when she may be able to fill her place in church.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Allen of Forsyth county came and worshipped with us Sunday.

Brother Floyd Culler has moved his family to Rural Hall for the school term this winter. We miss them very much in Sunday school and church work. C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Henderson.—As the conference year is drawing to a close there arise many duties which must be completed. We have elected our new Sunday school officers for the coming year, and we have also promoted all Sunday school pupils eligible. Mr. Jasper Hicks was elected superintendent, Mr. Baity resigning, due to the continued illness of his wife. Mrs. W. Blanie Hight was elected pianist, with Miss Maxine Taylor leader for the Sunday school music. The other officers elected are as follows: Assistant superintendent, Mr. W. R. Trogden; secretary and treasurer, Mr. T. J. Evans; assistant, Eugene Rodgers; librarian, Mr. Roy Dickerson. The superintendents of the lower departments were not elected at this time.

The meeting of the fourth quarterly conference will be held October 26 at the church. This is a very important meeting and all members of the official board are requested to be present.

We are now enjoying one of the most spiritual blessings possible in the wonderful series of meetings at our local church. Rev. L. W. Gerringer came to us last Monday evening and has been conducting both morning and night services with splendid results. The revival seems to have gripped the people of the church and community as well, and many have been brought into the saving grace of their Master. By his simple, yet forceful and truly gospel sermons, Mr. Gerringer shows the sinner the great need of a Saviour. His morning services are especially interesting and of great help to the confessing Christians. Sunday morning we felt the most powerful evidence of the Spirit, when sixteen boys and girls of our Sunday school made their decision for Christ. Also at the 11 o'clock services five persons came forward to accept their Lord and Master. We are so thankful for this splendid work and Mr. Gerringer, but to God we give the praise. We are hoping that before the meeting comes to its final close others may come into the saving fulness of their Lord.

The missionary societies will hold their business meeting with Mrs. Bowling and Miss Katie Cook tomorrow afternoon. A full report of the meeting will be given later.

MRS. CLYDE L. FINCH, Reporter.

Reidsville.—We had all regular services today, and our pastor preached splendid sermons at both morning and evening services. We had a good attendance at Sunday school.

Our special meeting was held in September. Our pastor preached earnest, forceful sermons for two weeks. The congregations were composed largely of Christian people, therefore the unsaved were hard to reach, but we hope and feel that good was accomplished anyway.

This is a busy time with our churches, for we are getting ready for our Annual Conference, which is so nearby. We hope to have all claims paid in full at that time and be able to go up with a clean record.

MRS. H. S. DIXON, Reporter.

Bessemer City.—We are still on the map, although there hasn't been a report from here in some time. Our Sunday school is still growing in number and interest. We have reached the goal of 150. Our C. E. society is still good. We enjoyed a fine talk from our president, Mr. F. B. Lutz, Sunday night. We elected or re-elected officers and teachers Sunday, October 2, and are hoping for a good year's work next year by the Master's help.

LUCY BLANTON, Reporter.

Liberty, Davison Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, preached for us the past Sunday; there was a very good attendance. He gave us an interesting sermon as he always does. It seems that he preaches better every sermon he preaches. He is also planning to be with us again the fifth Sunday night.

Our revival meeting was held in August; there was not the good done that we had hoped for, though there were some few conversions. The meeting also did the church members much good. We were very glad to have with us again Rev. B. M. Williams, of Efland charge, for the pulpit help. He did some good preaching for us. We hope to have Rev. C. E. Ridge with us another year.

Our Sunday school will be at 2 p.m. Everybody is welcome to come.

ANNIE HILL.

Second Church, Charlotte.—Our meeting came to a close after 15 days' success. We were glad to have with us the last week Brother Phillips; he brought us some good sermons. Our pastor, Brother Furr, preached for us on Sunday the closing sermon. We had 44 conversions and nine new members were added to our church list; four of those were baptized. We are glad to announce that we have raised enough money to cover the expenses of our tent, which amounted to at least $200, and we are also glad to say we have raised our payment on our new lot, which was $130. We have our new lot in shape so we can start to building on it soon. We would like to sell our first lot and Tabernacle so we could apply it to our new church. If any reader of the Herald would be interested in this property we would be glad to sell it at cost. The old lot and tabernacle is located on 31st street, North Charlotte, lot 50 x 185 feet, with building 20 x 30 feet; lights already in; price $700 with terms. For any information, see Mr. S. W. Yandles, just out behind the tabernacle.

We held our fourth quarterly conference October 5th with good reports; 27 present. Some new officers were elected and some old officers were re-elected. We are looking forward to a much better year for 1928 than we had in 1927, but we thank God for what he has done this year. We wish to thank everybody that has helped in any way for the upbuilding of the Second M. P. church, Charlotte. We greatly appreciate anything you may do yet. We were glad to have in our midst Sunday, August 25th, at the 11 o'clock service, Rev. D. A. Braswell. He made a short talk which was like old times to us. May God bless him.

We were fortunate to have with us Tuesday night, August 27th, Dr. A. G. Dixon, of Greensboro, N. C.; he gave us lots of good advice, which was greatly appreciated.

Friends and readers of the Herald, we ask an interest in your prayers. REPORTER.

Denton Church.—Our pastor filled his appointment here yesterday morning and last night.

Our Sunday school has had a good year's work this year. Last year on roll, 152; this year, 169; average attendance last year, 70; this year, 94; total collection last year, $120.45; this year, $163.58; paid out to M. P. Sunday school for literature last year, $69.12; this year, $103.77; paid out to Children's Home last year, $36.33; this year, $50.15; in treasury last year, $7.40; also due on literature last year, $12.40; in treasury this year, $9.40, with all claims paid.

The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: Superintendent, R. C. Powell; assistant superintendent, W. E. Hill; secretary and treasurer, Robert Loftin; assistant secretary and treasurer, Sallie Maie Frank.

This being my last report to the paper, I wish all a happy year.

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

The contents of this short notice should be of deepest concern to the youth and the leaders of youth in our conference, especially those within a fifty mile radius of Asheboro, N. C. The committees who arranged the program for the One Hundredth Annual Session of the North Carolina Conference, Methodist Protestant church, designated Saturday night, November 5th, as young people's night. As president of the Board of Young People's Work, I am sure that I speak the sentiment of the heart of every youth in our Conference, when I say that we appreciate this fact. We are grateful to have one night of this one-hundredth session as "Our Very Own." Of course, we are welcome to attend every session, but this is our own.

Now, young people, and leaders of young people, I am asking this request of you: Please be present on that night. We are exceedingly fortunate in having Rev. P. E. Lindley of High Point College, High Point, N. C., as the speaker of the evening. He is a friend of youth. He understands youth! He loves youth! Don't fail to hear him! All Christian Endeavor societies, members of Sunday schools, all youth and leaders of youth within fifty miles of Asheboro should hear him.

Remember the time and place: 7:45 Saturday, November 5th, Asheboro, N. C., and please be present.

FRED. W. PASCHALL.

CONFERENCE TRANSPORTATION NOTICE

This is to say that we want to do everything possible for the convenience of the Conference, not only while in Asheboro but on the way both coming and going. Therefore, those coming by automobile from the East had better follow Highway No. 10 from Durham to Graham and take No. 62 at Graham, coming by way of Liberty as the Highway between Chapel Hill and Pittsboro is under construction.

Those coming by train to High Point can take bus at 8:00 a.m., 10:30 a.m., 2:00 p.m., 4:00 p.m., and 6:30 p.m. Those coming by train to Greensboro can take bus at 8:15 a.m., 10:30 a.m., 2:00 p.m. and 5:45 p.m. It takes approximately an hour to make the trip either from High Point or Greensboro by bus.

A QUESTION

We wonder how many families in the N. C. Conference of the M. P. Church own an M. P. Constitution and Discipline? We further wonder how many persons owning a Discipline ever read it? And further, among those reading it, how many regard it as the real law of the church? We wonder how many know that in Article 10, section 7, of the Constitution is the following prohibitive statement: "No rule shall be passed to abolish an efficient itinerancy." This being the fundamental law of the church as to the method of pastoral supply, where is the legality of some churches "calling" their pastors? How can such procedure harmonize with the above statement of the Constitution? Also, can it be made to harmonize with the following item in section 11 of Elementary Principles: "She has no right to create any distinct or independent sovereignties?"

A QUESTIONER.

LOCAL MINISTER ENDS PASTORATE NEXT SUNDAY

Rev. C. B. Way, of this city, will finish his year's work as pastor of Jerusalem Methodist Protestant congregation with the services at New Jerusalem church next Sunday morning. That will be the last appointment for the charge before the meeting of the Annual conference which will be held at Asheboro beginning Wednesday, November 2.

At the service next Sunday morning the pastor will preach and following the sermon the Lord's Supper will be administered. Immediately after the service ends a business session of the church known as a quarterly conference will be held. An alternate delegate to the Annual Conference will be elected and also the regular church officers will be elected for the coming year.

It is not known whether Rev. Mr. Way will be assigned to the Jerusalem church for another year, as appointments are made for one year by the Annual Conference and the conference year will end with the services next Sunday. The local pastor has conducted services at Jerusalem church twice each month during the past year and his service with the church has been very satisfactory, it is said. —Lexington Dispatch.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Mabry

On Friday night at 3 o'clock, a. m., the spirit of Mrs. S. D. Mabry was released from a body of pain and carried to that home beyond the sky where the weary find rest and suffering is no more. She was 62 years of age. She is survived by her husband and five children. She was a patient sufferer for many years. She had a host of friends and was loved by all. We extend our deepest sympathy to the husband and children and ask God's blessings on them.

She is gone, our precious mother,
To her home beyond the sky,
But we know if we are faithful
We shall see her by and and by.

She has gone to live with Jesus
In that home there is no pain,
Though we miss our darling mother
Yet our loss is heaven's gain.

She has gone to that far city
Where the weary can find rest.
Help us, Lord, to e'er remember
Jesus doeth all things best.

We would not recall our mother
To this world of sin and woe.
Though we loved our mother dearly,
Thou, O Lord, didst love her more,

Thou didst give Thy life a ransom,
Thou hast shed Thy precious blood
That the poor and heavy-laden
Migh find peace and rest above.

Farewell, mother, we may never
See thy face on earth again,
Yet we have the Master's promise.
Up there sometime we'll understand.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to call unto her long home our friend and beloved co-worker, Mrs. J. E. Vaughan, therefore, be it resolved:

First, That we, the Ladies' Aid Society of Welch Memorial Church, do feel a deep sense of loss, both to ourselves and to our church, in the removal of this faithful Christian, who served so loyally;

Second, That, humbly submitting ourselves to Him who doeth all things well, we would remember always her sweet and gracious disposition, her gentleness and willingness to serve, and we would follow her example, as she followed Christ.

Third, That we would extend to her family our tenderest sympathy and commend them to Christ, who alone can comfort.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Society, a copy sent to her loved ones and a copy to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

REGARDING REV. D. A. BRASWELL

Rev. D. A. Braswell requests that I write an article for him explaining his financial condition. He says a wrong impression is current. That he owns some property here in Concord is true, but for a long time he has had it on the market for sale, and is now trying hard to sell. When it is sold and the indebtedness paid off there will be nothing left. He tells me that he is in need, and being a personal friend of his I happen to know something as to the approximate truth of this statement.

His physical condition is such that he can earn no part of a living and I am sure that any help you can give him will be appreciated.

VOLUME XXXIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., OCTOBER 27, 1927 NUMBER 50

Rights and Wrongs of Church Finances

Prior to the General Conference of 1896 it was the law of the Methodist Protestant Church that the pastor's salary should be fixed by the First Quarterly Conference. This seemed to involve a wrong to the pastor and it was changed, making it incumbent on the Fourth Quarterly Conference to fix the salary for the following year. Under the old law the pastor went to a charge not knowing what support he would receive, and at a disadvantage because he had scarcely any alternative but to accept what was offered him. The new law seems better, and we are not ashamed of the fact that we advocated the change before the Committee on Revision in the Kansas City General Conference of 1896.

But we have seen other inequalities in church finances.

Since the budget system was adopted and apportionments made to the Annual Conferences and the churches, we have seen men who should have done a large part for foreign missions do nothing at all because the quota for the church had already been paid by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. This is clearly wrong. Whose wrong it is? Certainly it is the wrong of the man who fails to contribute. The fact that the quota has been made up does not excuse him from making a contribution. It is the duty of all who can to aid in sending the Gospel to the heathen. When a man fails because others have met a man-made goal, he is recreant to his duty to a God-made goal. "Apportionments" made by Conference committees must not be set up above the law of Christ.

It is also a question whether the wrong is not partly in the system which leads to such a result in the conduct of the man who fails to contribute. Instead of leading a man to do nothing, should not the finances of the church be so managed as to encourage every man to do his best? Who has any right to say to a group of Christians, When you have done so much, you need do no more—you have done your full duty. It is true that there are men in the church who wish to have a goal set for them by the Conference—quarterly, annual, or general. They wish somebody else to do their thinking for them along religious lines, or they believe that a man-made goal will be easier for them to reach than the goal set by Christ. We know there are some arguments in favor of the budget system imposed by a conference, but when this system serves to substitute a lower human standard for the divine standard, it is evidently doing moral injury. There needs to be some close and clear thinking done on this question as to the manner of determining what churches are to pay.

In the past thirty years we have heard a number of discussions in our Annual Conference as to how to apportion to the charges the budgets of the Annual and General Conferences. It is a difficult problem to solve with equity and impossible to know when it has been equitably solved because of a lack of information. Sometimes there have been those who have advocated an apportionment pro rata with the pastor's salary. But this rule, while easily applied, may work great injustice to some charges. A small church has great difficulty in supporting a pastor but strains itself up to the point of paying a living support. It is manifestly unfair to such a charge to apply the rule referred to in making out its apportionment. Another rule proposed and we believe adopted by one Annual Conference bases the apportionment partly on ability and partly on willingness to pay. Both of these factors are difficult to measure. The difficulty of arriving at any result of which you can say, This is at least approximately correct, raises the question whether the problem is not simply unsolvable in the way undertaken. Is there not some other mode of approach that would be better and more satisfactory and more productive of revenue?

Why not try the honor system here as we try it in our individual churches? We believe a church will pay more and pay more cheerfully when the members are left to their honor as to how much they shall pay. Why is not the same thing true of a group of churches in an annual conference district? We believe it is true. At any rate the plan would put the responsibility where it belongs—upon the individual member. And the individual member would become more intelligent as to the objects of his giving if he had to consider and decide how much he should give. When a man gives simply to a "budget," he may not know what he is giving for, and there may be little love in his giving. He gives because he is asked, because he may excuse himself and be excused by others, rather than that he may accomplish some good in the lives of others. The budget system as administered tends to reduce our people to the rank of givers in the Roman Catholic Church. How much better it would be if our money were contributed out of a rational regard for the good it may do. Instead of the pressure of an arbitrary assessment, there would be the intelligent benevolence of Christian minds as a motive to action.

If the voluntary principle were universally adopted in our church, the Finance Committee of the Annual Conference would not have to wrestle with the problem of raising revenue, but would deal with the problem of disbursing money to the various causes for which it was contributed freely by the churches. How much more pleasant a task that committee would then have. The same thing is true of the Finance Committee of the General Conference.

Of course both General Conference and Annual Conference would have to inform the people of the churches as to the enterprises demanding their support, but that would be received more readily than appeals for money without information. Let us consider well our financial plans and try to make them conform to reason. We believe the right method, when found, will prove to be the most practical and fruitful method.

Another financial wrong that we have seen under the sun is that of a charge which agrees to pay its pastor so much and then stops short of what it agreed. You would not treat a man hired to work in your field or shop in that way. He might sue you and get judgment against you, but the pastor is too kind to do that; therefore you treat him so. Aren't you ashamed of it? Of course you are, and this is not done now as formerly. Let us be glad that there is a higher and truer sense of honor regarding this matter.

The Word of God will stand a thousand readings; and he who has gone over it most frequently is the surest of finding new wonders there.—J. Hamilton.

LISTEN TO THE MOCKING-BIRD

By Rev. Luther K. Long

The Creator certainly made a wonderful provision for us when he placed these three things in our cup of happiness—little children, flowers, and birds.

In order to get the most possible joy out of these gifts, intelligent appreciation and wise care and management are necessary; though it frequently happens that persons who are reckoned as shiftless concerning many other matters fall into the way of getting much pleasure out of these delightful gifts of nature.

I had greatly enjoyed the birds in several states—Illinois, Michigan, Georgia, and others east and west. That southern Maryland would have a considerable variety of desirable sorts I felt quite sure, and I have not been disappointed. The past summer has been a good season for birds here, and they have been thoroughly appreciated.

Fortunately for our location there are large trees about our house, with a good number of fruit trees and shrubs. Within a short distance are grown-up fence-rows and open fields, not far away in every direction forests may be seen, while the waters of the Patuxent river and of the Chesapeake bay are also within sight.

The first bird's nest I saw in the spring was that of a robin in the cedar at our front gate. Later there was another robin's nest in the white oak tree near the front porch. These birds are not so plentiful here as they are in Michigan, nor do they seem to be quite so vociferous in their singing, but they are always loyal to their young and constant in providing food for them.

The soft, penetrating call of the bluebird, with the happiness-suggesting color of its graceful body, is a most welcome harbinger of approaching spring. A pair of these cheery insect-eating birds examined two little houses that were designed for their convenience but, though they did considerable work on a nest in one of them, they finally decided to make their home in a big old cherry tree with hollow limbs, just beyond our grounds. They were excellent neighbors and made frequent visits to our garden and trees, sometimes bringing the whole family.

I cut two sections from a hollow ash fence-post and made them into wren houses—the openings being the size of a silver quarter. One of these I placed on the side of the hen house and the other on the south-east corner of our dwelling. Both were occupied, and the industrious parents fed their growing families on countless insects from the garden. Jennie Wren abounds in curiosity and is not always easy to live with. She peeks into every bird-house on the premises and wants to appropriate all of them for herself. She is fussy, at times, with her husband. He carries into the house perfectly good material for her nest, but for some unknown reason it does not meet her approval. I have seen her laboriously take out long sticks, slam them to one side, scold her man, and then bring in something else that, for some unexplained reason, better suited her taste.

The liquid notes of the wood thrush were frequently heard at some distance, but the less shy brown thrush lived with us. Cardinals and goldfinches flashed their brightness in our presence, and we heard the boyish whistle of the bob-white, occasionally catching sight of its clean-cut attractive form—but all these nested some distance away. An orchard oriole built an exquisitely beautiful nest in a pear tree at the south-east corner of our front yard. A pair of English starlings—my heart doesn't yet open much to them—were seen about our grounds but nested elsewhere. Bee martins, chipping sparrows, and numerous other birds made their nests in plum trees and bushes about the place. Catbirds—I wrote recently of the doings of a pair of them—were with us in considerable numbers and, as always, were a constant delight.

Humming-birds were numerous and active the past summer. They found my Glad Gardens and made full use of these attractive flowers. Friends often spoke of the many humming-birds seen plunging their long beaks into the well-filled nectar cups of the glad flowers. These tiny birds are some scrappers amongst themselves; and I have repeatedly seen one of them strike its sharp bill into a bumble-bee that happened to cross its path when both were out after nectar.

Many sorts of birds make such considerable contribution to the sum of my enjoyment that I never like to express a preference for any one bird above all others; but I am perfectly willing to speak of my great satisfaction in finding a fair number of mocking-birds here in southern Maryland—especially am I delighted to have a fine pair of them living and singing on my premises.

During my childhood days in south-central Illinois I occasionally saw a mocking-bird, and once in later years when visiting my old home in the spring-time I caught sight of one as it passed across a field. The years I spent in southern Georgia were made memorable by intimate association with these friendly and entertaining singers.

Last spring a pair of mocking-birds started a nest in a lilac bush at the back of our house. A pair of catbirds that had nested there the year before objected, making quite a fuss, but finally built their own nest in another lilac bush near by at the east side of the house. The mocking-birds completed their nest but never used it, evidently not liking the cattish ways of their neighbors; they spent much time, however, in the trees and on the ground about the house.

Now, in the latter part of October, robins, wrens, catbirds, thrushes, are gone; but the mocking-bird is still here, and evidently intends to remain with us all winter. His songs are a constant delight—clear, clean, varied, and highly musical. He will, in all probability, be silent during the coldest winter weather; but he will be on hand to greet the spring and to cheer us with a song as we start working in the garden.

SEEING THROUGH BLOOD

A father and his little son were looking through the window of a hotel and watching some soldiers marching along the street. The soldiers wore at that time bright red uniforms, and the band marched ahead of them playing a military air. When the father spoke to his little boy about the fine-looking, red-clad soldiers, the boy answered, "But, father, the soldiers are dressed in white and not red."

The father was quite concerned for his little son, thinking he must be color-blind, when he noticed that the boy was looking through red glass. He was not tall enough to reach up past the border glass on the window. When anyone looks at anything red through red glass, the object looks to be white. God views the sinner through the blood of Jesus. Thus the sinner's filthy rags become robes of righteousness, and scarlet sins become white as snow.—William Miller.

THE WORST DEFORMITY

We have seen a man crippled in both lower limbs drag himself down the aisle of God's house on the Lord's day, and the worshipers looked upon him as an object of abject pity. But I have seen more pathetic appearances in the same house and aisle. There was that fine-looking man, six feet two inches tall, tipping the scales at two hundred pounds, straight in body and handsome in face. But, alas! for his soul! I have seen that—bowed down, shriveled, diseased, dying! I tell you that it is better to be crippled in body than in soul.—Selected.

The WORK and the WORKERS

This is my last repart of this kind for the HERALD as president of the Conference, having served in this capacity for the full limit of the constitution of the Methodist Protestant Church. My message through the HERALD for next week will be my fifth annual report to the Annual Conference.

The One-Hundredth Annual Session

We meet November 2nd, 1927, in Asheboro, N. C., in our one-hundredth annual session. We plan to celebrate that fact on Thursday evening, November 3rd, at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Roby F. Day, D. D., of Inwood, Long Island, will bring us a congratulatory message at that hour. Come and hear him.

Davidson

Last Friday, in company with Rev. N. G. Bethea, I attended the fourth quarterly conference of the Davidson charge at Chapel Hill church. Brother Bethea preached at 11 a. m. and after dinner on the grounds we held the quarterly conference. It was a good conference, with good reports. And they showed a progressive spirit by increasing pastor's salary for next year by $250. This charge will bring the best report to Conference it has ever done.

Denton

At night we were in Denton with Rev. M. C. Henderson and his people for the quarterly conference of this charge. The reports were fairly good. Pastor's salary, it seems, will be paid in full, and they have made substantial payments on the budgets. There was a splendid attendance and the people are anxious for better developments on this splendid charge. Pastor's salary was fixed the same as last year.

Randleman

Saturday afternoon I was with Rev. W. H. Neese and his people in their quarterly conference, which was held at Mount Lebanon church. This was a good conference. Pastor's report was fine, and the finances will all come up fairly well.

High Point College

Sunday evening, October 23rd, I had the privilege of speaking to the college students and a few friends gathered in a Christian Endeavor meeting. It was a genuine pleasure to speak to these young people, who gave earnest heed to the message.

Fourth Quarterly Report Blanks

If you did not receive your blank, please let me know, and I will mail another. If you did receive it, then please return to me as quickly as you can get it filled out correctly. Your promptness will greatly help us in this office. Surely 100 per cent of pastors will report for the fourth quarter. Why should anyone fail?

Pray for the Conference

Every faithful Christian heart who reads this is asked to stop and offer an earnest prayer to the God of us all for His divine guidance in all Conference actions. Someone has well put it, "Let us labor and pray for a Conference that will greatly promote the work of our church everywhere and retard it nowhere."

There are problems to confront, but problems should add sharpness to our courage. They will if first we pray. Pray that in every move God's Spirit may have a right of way.

Appointments

I have engagements to meet some committee or board almost every day this week.

October 27, Moriah, 7:30 p. m., quarterly conference.

October 29, 11 a. m., Hickory Grove, Chatham, S. S. Convention.

October 29, 2:30 p. m., Liberty-Siler City, quarterly conference.

November 1, 11 a. m., Meeting of Budget Council, M. P. Church, Asheboro.

November 1, 3 p. m. Meeting of Board of Church Extension. If you wish your case considered please put your request in writing and mail at once to Mr. M. A. Coble, Burlington, N. C.

November 1, 7 p. .m, Boundary Committee meeting, M. P. Church, Asheboro.

If there are boundary changes you wish considered write fully at once, if you have not written.

November 2, 9:30 a. m., Opening session of the Annual Conference, M. P. Church, Asheboro, N. C.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

SPECIAL NOTICE

We are meeting this year in the one hundredth annual session of the North Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church. On Thursday evening, November 3rd, at 7:30 we will hold a special service in the Conference church in Asheboro celebrating that fact.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Conference historian, will read a brief history of the Conference, and Rev. Roby F. Day, D. D., president of the Eastern Conference, will preach the sermon, bringing to us fraternal and congratulatory expressions.

Plan to attend the services that evening and participate in this golden anniversary.

Faithfully,

A. G. DIXON.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

"I think a Christian can go anywhere," said a young woman who was defending her continued attendance at some very doubtful places of amusement.

"Certainly she can," rejoined her friend, "but I am reminded of a little incident that happened last summer when I went with a party of friends to explore a coal mine. One of the young women appeared dressed in a dainty white gown. When her friends remonstrated with her, she appealed to the old miner who was to act as guide to the party.

"Can't I wear a white dress down into the mine?" she asked, petulantly.

"Yes'm," returned the old man. "There's nothing to keep you from wearin' a white frock down there, but there'll be considerable to keep you from wearin' one back."

There is nothing to prevent the Christian from wearing his white garments when he seeks the fellowship of that which is unclean, but there is a good deal to prevent him from wearing white garments afterward.—Selected.

WHEN SHE PRAYED

A man had decided to leave his wife, although he had no just cause. He had a sister who knew how to lay hold upon God in prayer. After hearing what her brother was planning to do, she went to his office to see him. Fearing that he had given orders that she was not to be admitted, she did not ask to see him, but simply walked straight into his presence. She tried to persuade him not to do the thing he had planned, but in vain. As she left the office, troubled and sorrowful, he said to her: "Now, for goodness' sake don't go home and pray about it! If you do I may as well give up." She did go home and pray about it, and he did "give up."—Selected.

There doubtless will be changes in the "Church to be" in China as well as in all the Church organizations of all other Foreign mission fields. Certainly all who are interested want such changes. Changes in administration, changes in personnel, changes in support, where each church organization will be just as distinctively Chinese, Japanese, African, etc, in the respective nations as the churches in America are distinctively American.

Now what will make them such? Dr. Robert E. Speer says, Two things, chiefly—Self-support and Self-propagation. And herein the Chinese have hitherto been wanting.

Take self-support, for instance. Dr. Speer terms it "economic self-dependence" and then goes on to say that this is not an imposition of missionary policy; it is not something laid on from outside. It is absolutely inherent in the nature of things. A man has to be economically self-dependent or he isn't free. A nation has to be economically self-dependent, i.e. can't occupy a servile relationship to any other nation and be free. Economic self-dependence is an inescapable necessity of the Christian Church in every land and there is no use of our evading it and there is no use of the Church in China or any other land trying to ignore it or go around it,—it can't be done. The fundamental issue is not as to whether missions are ready to turn over the administration of funds to the Churches on the field; they are more ready to do that than the Churches are able to take over the transfer. The fundamental issue is as to whether the Church itself will be a real Church or whether it will be a parasitical or nominal Church. It will never be a full and real Church until it is economically self-dependent."

Now this the Chinese Churches are not, as a rule. Take the Presbyteiran Church as an example. In all of China there are only 32 self-supporting Presbyterian churches, according to the very highest estimates, while in Japan there are 99 and in Korea 537. Then in the city of Peking at the maximum in all denominations, it is said that not more than four self-supporting Churches can be found, and one of those is questionable; and there are denominations that have been working there for fifty or sixty years that have not one bona fide self-supporting Church.

This is a very grave problem and one that must be overcome if a real Church is to survive in China, be that National or what not. And such condition does not yet prevail.

Again, take the self-propagating proposition. Certainly that is the very first essential of Christianity. The moment a man receives Christ into his own life it is his immediate business to share Him with some one else. How essentially true that was of the beginnings of the early Church, started on the day of Pentecost. And how the Church began to grow and spread immediately. Two very important factors in the extension of the Christian Church seem to be woefully lacking on the part of the Chinese in the past-initiative and aggressiveness. After careful investigation it has been discovered that in not more than one-twentieth of the villages in the field allocated to him has the native Chinese Christian preacher gone as often as once a year. If left alone to the native workers at such rate centuries upon centuries would it take to carry the gospel to the millions of China.

When, however, these conditions are met not only in China but in any and all nations, then will missionary effort among them cease only as it is carried on among themselves within their own borders and they, in turn, endeavor to carry it on to others, even to the "uttermost parts." Certainly for that glad day we are all praying, we are all working. But until that day China will still need foreign missionaries. And I am wondering when that glad day will come?

WHY SHOULD WE CELEBRATE OUR HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY WITH A GRATITUDE GIFT OF $100,000?

By Roby F. Day, President of the Eastern Conference

1. Because the history of our Church justifies it. Among the speakers at a Methodist Protestant pastor's reception recently was a young pastor of a Methodist Episcopal church. He said that while he was in the Seminary he became very much interested in church history, especially that of Methodism and the Methodist Protestant church. He said he had learned that every significant change that had been made in the government of his church during the last hundred years was a step towards the principles of democratic Methodism for which the Methodist Protestant church fathers stood. He added that history had justified the contention of those early reformers. Now I had heard such statements made by Methodist Protestants, but it was refreshing to hear this statement made by a Methodist Episcopal minister who had been reared in a Methodist Episcopal parsonage. Besides the good effect the Methodist Protestant church has had upon the government of the Methodist Episcopal Church the multitudes who have been saved at her altars, the thousands who have been educated in her schools, the throngs whose spiritual lives have been enriched by her ministry of the Word justify a Great Celebration and a Great Gratitude Gift at her Hundredth Anniversary.

2. Because the institutions of our church need it. After the World War and as a result of the Million Dollar Campaign our denominational institutions extended their work by laying broader foundations and beginning a bigger structure. During the closing years of our first centenary our church leaders planned for larger things than the rank and file of our membership furnished the funds to complete. A Gratitude Gift, such as is contemplated, as the consummation of a great Centenary Celebration will add strength and beauty and nobler proportions to the structures so splendidly begun by our denominational Boards, and will start them on the new century rejoicing that they have not laid their foundations in vain.

3. Because the members of our church desire it. I have found that Methodist Protestant people when they are instructed in the Word of God and in the history and polity of their church form a peculiar attachment for their own denomination and a pecular pride in her principles. When these people become acquainted with the fact that their church is in need of the financial assistance that the proposed Gratitude Gift will supply, and that she cannot accomplish the work that has been committed to her without such a Gift, I believe our people will gladly respond, and we shall be able to present to the General Conference at its next session in Baltimore $1,000 for every year of our denominational life. Anything less than that would be unworthy of the church of which we are all so justly proud. Let every pastor of every Conference see that his people are fully informed of the Celebration, the Gratitude Gift, and the needs of our Institutions that will thus be supplied.

—Whatever our private views about particular amusements, most of us agree that recreation is essential in healthy life, and that we work better if we have occasional play and pastime.—Margaret E. Sangster.

THE KANSAS CITY UNIVERSITY SETTLEMENT

By action of the Board of Education, the Methodist Protestant Church has sold its equity in Kansas City University to the Church of the United Brethren in Christ. For a dozen years these two Churches have conducted the school jointly, the United Brethren having been invited by Dr. D. S. Stephens to become a part of the enterprise. The hopes then entertained of larger support and a bigger and better school were not realized. In many ways the merger was a success and in some ways it was not. No serious friction resulted and yet the situation was such that no great success could be expected. Each Church did the best it could to make the school go, but for various reasons it would not.

Soon after becoming Executive Secretary of the Board of Education, it became apparent that the Methodist Protestant Church as a whole was not interested in the enterprise. A careful investigation revealed that the members of our church in that area were no longer interested, and even though they had been they do not have the means to make a college a success. Their resources alone are not sufficient to support a college. Furthermore, the income of the Board of Education was insufficient to give to six schools the financial assistance needed to maintain them.

It was recommended that we enter into negotiations with the United Brethren looking toward our withdrawal. These negotiations were consummated in due time. They resulted in an outright sale of the Methodist Protestant equity so that the United Brethren conferences in that area came into full possession of the names, equipment, buildings, campus and athletic field. They also assumed responsibility for certain debts, mortgages, etc., while the Methodist Protestant Church surrendered all rights and interests for certain considerations.

For their equity the Methodist Protestant Church receives title to Mount Hope Cemetery valued at $12,000; title to twenty-two lots lying near the University, valued at $5000; two mortgages on property in Colorado totaling $6300; and $36,700 in cash payable at the rate of $5,000 a year with interest at six percent, no interest charged the first year. The first $5,000 was paid ahead of time, the payments being due August 7 each year. The Board assumes responsibility for obligations totaling approximately $1700 besides certain annuities costing nearly $1200 each year.

In addition certain other properties come into our possession to which no value has been given such as mortuary notes, wills, and the interests in Riverside Park and Riverside Cemetery. These latter are so encumbered that they have little, if any, present value. The properties to which value is given approximate $60,000, of which $28,000 has been paid.

The question is sometimes asked as to what will be done with these funds. It is the belief of the Board of Education that their final disposition rests with the General Conference. It is probable the Board will make definite recommendations but the General Conference has final authority.

In almost every feature of our transactions with the friends of the United Brethren Church we have been treated with utmost courtesy. Good will and friendly relations have been the rule. It has seemed a pity that we could not go on hand in hand with this great work. Since it was not to be so we wish for our friends of the sister church the largest possible success. With their larger constituency and greater resources and the school entirely their own, the probabilities are much in their favor. It will be a pleasure to give whatever influence we can to that end that they may succeed in a large and splendid way.

FRANK W. STEPHENSON,
Executive Secretary, Board of Education.

M. P. C. G. G.—ITS OPPORTUNENESS

REV. J. C. BROOMFIELD, D. D.

I have been requested to say a few words through the columns of the church press concerning the opportuneness of the proposed Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift. Special occasions, marking divisions of time, such as birthdays, anniversaries, jubilees, etc., suggest doing special things.

It would be strange indeed to pass from one century to another as informally as we pass from one year to another. We have witnessed many times the coming of New Year's Day, but only ONCE can we witness the closing of the first, and the opening of the second, century of our denominational life. The coming of our first centennial provides a psychological situation that ought to be taken advantage of.

The proposed Gratitude Gift of $100,000.00 is opportune in that it meets the expectations of our people. Folks have been expecting something of this sort, and the announcement of the plan has been received enthusiastically on all sides. Their expectations have provided an atmosphere and an opportunity that fully justify the centennial campaign now in progress.

Again, the opportuneness of the proposed gift is set forth in the fact that it provides a common medium through which as a denomination we can express to Almighty God our deep gratitude for the privilege of living and serving for a century.

To know that we are doing things together on a nation-wide scale has an inspirational value peculiarly its own. Only as we succeed in such efforts will we develop the habit of co-operation, so essential to success.

In asking for $100,000.00 we are not over-estimating the ability of our people. We have individuals in our communion who could give that amount, and have lots left. Some gifts are ornamental, but not this one.

It will meet a great need and enable the Boards of the church to begin the new century to splendid advantage. I am looking forward to the presentation of the $100,000.00 in the great mass meeting in Baltimore as a time of great spiritual refreshing, and my appeal to all who read these lines is to believe in the Gratitude Gift whole-heartedly; adopt it enthusiastically as your own; and give yourself to the task of enlisting your church therein.

Be Perfect as God Is Perfect

This injunction of Jesus seems to demand an impossibility. What man can be perfect as God is perfect? Possibly we have been misunderstanding the meaning of Jesus. He cannot be charged with unreasonable teaching, though many of his utterances surprise us. Taking the context into view, together with the various meanings of the Greek word translated "perfect," we believe that another English word would better render the precise meaning of Jesus. That word is impartial. The passage would then read: Be ye therefore impartial as your Father in heaven is impartial. He sends rain upon the just and the unjust. He treats all alike without regard to their deserts. He shows no partiality. This, of course, does not imply that God does not pass moral judgment on men or that there will be no distinction between the good and the bad in the final judgment, but it means that in the sphere of God's providence in this world God treats all alike. Jesus calls on us to do likewise—to be as impartial as God is impartial.

If we abide by the principles taught in the Bible, our country will go on and prosper; but if we and our posterity neglect its instruction and authority, no man can tell how suddenly a catastrophe may overwhelm us and bury all our glory in profound obscurity.—Daniel Webster.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE LOST SWEATER

"Look here, sis," called Jack Barlow to his sister, Mary Ellen. Mary Ellen came out on the porch.

"See how well your doll's sweater fits Buster. Doesn't he look slick?"

"Oh, Jack," exclaimed his sister, "you oughtn't put it on him. He'll get it all dirty." But she smiled when she saw the pride and pleasure of the little dog, standing on his hind feet with his fore paws on his master's knee.

"Look at him! Buster is a good-looking dog, he is," replied Jack, slapping the dog gleefully. Buster reached up and licked Jack's face and then rushed over to Mary Ellen, jumped up and gave her cheek a dab with his tongue, circled around with an ecstatic bark, and then rose again to his hind feet and looked about importantly. The children laughed, and Buster seemed to grow more excited.

"Now, I'll take it off," said Jack, but as soon as the little garment was removed Buster caught it in his mouth, danced about and raced down the driveway with it.

"Here, here, come back, sir," called Jack; and Mary Ellen wrung her hands while the tears ran down her cheeks.

"He'll just ruin it," she exclaimed, "that lovely little sweater. Aunt Annie was so good to make it for me, and Alma looked so sweet in it. Oh, dear!"

Jack ran down the steps along the driveway and the little dog kept just ahead of him, looking back with one ear lifted roguishly.

"Come back here," called Jack impatiently, almost reaching him and putting out his hand to take the sweater from him; but the naughty little fellow gave a short bark and ran out into the field. He dropped the sweater and ran away in a circle while Jack followed. Just as he was almost to the sweater, Buster got it again and ran off, shaking it up and down, making the strings and tassels bob about. Mary Ellen joined in the chase, but Buster refused to come near, and ran far out into the field.

"Naughty dog," scolded Jack.

Clang! Clang! Clang!

"Oh, Jack, the school bell!" sobbed Mary Ellen.

"We'll have to run or we'll be late. Here, give me your hand. We'll have to leave the sweater now, but he'll just drop it out there and we'll get it at noon. Don't cry, sis."

The two children ran swiftly down the road and reached their places in the line just as the last bell rank.

Mary Ellen wiped her tears away, but it was a sad-faced little girl who read and wrote and spelled all that long morning.

When noon came Mary Ellen sped down the road into the field, but early as she was, Jack was there ahead of her. Up and down the field, behind every little bush or tuft of grass, down by the brook which babbled and sang through the meadow, the children went. But no little fawn-colored sweater trimmed with brown could be found; and no frisky little dog with expressive brown eyes came at their call.

Then mother called them in to dinner, and they told her of their loss.

"It is likely Buster will bring it to you by and by. You have been teaching him to fetch and carry, so now you will have a chance to see how well he has learned his lesson," she said.

The children went to school again and when they returned Buster lay curled in a round heap under a shrub on the lawn, but he did not bring it to them. Neither could they find it, though they looked long and earnestly in every place where a mischievous dog might stow the little garment; but all in vain.

"I'll buy you another with the money in my bank," promised Jack; but Mary Ellen shook her head sadly.

"It was so pretty, and Aunt Alice made it for Alma. Another would not be half so good," she said.

For several days the children continued to look for the little sweater, but without success.

"Mary Ellen," called mother, one evening after school, "Eva Lake is taking care of baby, so I am going to visit the new family who have come to live in the house by the mill. Daddy says that they have a dear little baby."

Mary Ellen ran for her hat and walked by her mother's side down the lane and across the field till they came to a small, low cottage near the stream.

As the day was warm their hostess, Mrs. Jenkins, seated them on the piazza and they talked pleasantly till a little cry was heard.

"Excuse me, please," said Mrs. Jenkins, "while I get my baby. She is just waking from her nap."

In a few moments she returned with a fair-haired baby in her arms.

"O-oh-h!" exclaimed Mary Ellen softly, and mother turned and smiled at her little girl, whose eyes sparkled with excitement.

Mrs. Barlow held out her arms for the baby, who nestled into them as if she had found a friend.

"What a tiny thing she is!" exclaimed Mrs. Barlow. "Mary Ellen came to play with her."

"Yes, she is very small," replied Mrs. Jenkins, "and just after we moved here she did not seem well and looked so blue all the time. It is colder here than where we used to live, and I believe she was not warm enough, but I thought she was ill and I felt so discouraged. I used to carry her out into the sunshine, as it seemed to make her feel better, but she fretted a great deal and I did not know what to do for her. And then we found this dear little sweater hanging on a bush. I put it on her, and it fits as if it was made for her. She's worn it ever since and has seemed to feel better. I will have to get her some all-wool flannels."

"Oh, and may I help make 'em?" asked Mary Ellen eagerly.

"I haven't any cloth to make them out of yet. I will have to send for some," said the baby's mother.

"I have some little pieces left from my baby's clothes, and I will cut them out and Mary Ellen will bring them over when they are finished," said Mrs. Barlow, knowing how much Mary Ellen would like to work for the baby.

"To think, mother," exulted Mary Ellen as they walked homeward, "that Buster carried Alma's sweater to that darling baby, a real, live baby. Isn't it precious?"

"She is a darling," agreed mother. "We will fit the clothes on Alma, only we must make them larger so that the baby can wear them for some time to come. After a while she will grow like a little weed."

And Mary Ellen ran home as fast as she could to tell Jack what Buster had done.—Junior World.

HEAVEN A REALITY

A great many persons imagine that anything that is said about heaven is only a matter of speculation. Now there would not have been so much in Scripture on this subject if God had wanted to leave the human race in darkness about it. What the Bible says about heaven is just as true as what it says about everything else. The Bible is inspired. What we are taught about heaven could not have come to us in any other way than by inspiration. No one knew anything about it but God; and so if we want to find out anything about it we have to turn to His Word.—D. L. Moody.

BLACK SHEEP VS. PERSISTENCE

Persis came straight to her aunt's room after the Thanksgiving recital in the high school auditorium.

"I must be a black sheep," she said, dropping wearily into a chair. "I don't seem to be of much use anywhere."

"You are tired. You worked pretty hard all day, didn't you, decorating for the recital?"

"Oh, I helped some, but it wasn't work that counted for anything; any of the grammar-grade children could have done what I did. I mean it, Aunt Lena, I'm an utter failure. What a big old stupid I looked like tonight at the recital. I just sat there. All the other girls in the junior class took part. Avis sang, Dolly played, Louise and the others were in the play, and I—well, I just sat. I am a black sheep, am I not?"

Mrs. Morton gave a quick glance of sympathy toward the girl's drooping figure. There was certainly nothing attractive about her sallow face and dull eyes. A lump swelled into her throat.

"They say everybody has some talent, Persis," she said brightly, after a moment's silence. "I think you just haven't discovered yours. Isn't there some one thing that you can do a little better than anything else? There must be. Think!"

Persis shook her head slowly, and her eyes filled with tears. "I can't do anything well," she said. "I'm a dub in my lessons. I just do manage to get through. And next year I'll be a senior, and after that they'll probably want me to go to college. What is the use? It seems to me that educating a mind like mine is like 'planing the under side of a barn floor,' as father would say."

Mrs. Morton's heart ached in sympathy, but she dared not show it too plainly. This, she felt, was not the kind of medicine Persis Ware needed. The sight of a vase of chrysanthemums on the table gave her sudden inspiration.

"I thought you told me you raised those flowers," she said with a little reproachful note in her voice. Persis lifted her head at once. "Why, of course I did, Aunt Lena," she said, "although they are not much to boast of. I can raise much, much finer chrysanthemums than those."

"Then you can't tell me that you haven't a talent," said her aunt, with finality. "As for me, I can't make anything grow, much less bloom."

Persis shook her head. "Making a pretty flower garden isn't anything," she said, "that is only doing something nice and pleasant. What sort of a future would there be in digging in a flower bed, for instance?"

"If you would just think a little I think you would see that it has unlimited possibilities," said her aunt. "If you learn to raise finer plants and flowers than anyone else, you have achieved a triumph. And it has a financial value, too. Now, if I had your talent, with all this land lying idle about this place, I don't think I'd sit moping in a corner and say I was a black sheep, with life not worth the living. I—why, I'd get out and dig."

Persis' face flushed and she bit her lip. Then she gave a long sigh. "You've at least given me something to think about," she said.

"Just a year later Mrs. Morton returned to the Ware home for her annual autumn visit. As she entered the front gate she gave an exclamation of pleasure. The bare spaces along the front of the house were now ablaze with scarlet sage. Petunias rioted along the front walk, sweet alyssum and nasturtiums trailed from trim boxes on the railing of the porch. To the left, one caught a glimpse of a gay flower garden. Could this be the staid and rather uninteresting Ware home? The new-comer fairly gasped.

"It's all Persis," said Kitty Ware, nodding her pretty head excitedly, "but you don't know half—here she is now."

"Why—why, child!" More gasps from Aunt Lena. Expecting a dull-eyed, drooping, pale-cheeked Persis, she was naturally not prepared for the sight that met her eyes. Here were glowing cheeks and sparkling eyes, a trim, straight young figure in a white middy suit—but this was not all. There was a change in the girl that could hardly be described. All through the glad exchange of greetings Mrs. Morton's glance kept wandering back to Persis—this wonderful Persis, this transformed Persis. Just before sunset the circle about the fire in the living room scattered, and it was then that Persis claimed her aunt. By common consent they went to the flower garden. Standing in the glory of autumn coloring of leaf and blossom, they faced each other, smiling. "Why didn't you write me of this?" asked her aunt, looking straight at Persis.

"I waited because I wanted you to see it. Isn't it pretty?"

"It is all wonderful, and you are the most wonderful part."

They sat down on a little sheltered seat under an arbor covered with clematis vines—the day was mild—and Persis clasped one of her aunt's hands in her strong, brown ones.

"What you said about my learning to do some one thing well simply stuck in my mind," she said. "I couldn't forget it. Then the idea came, little by little. I have always loved flowers, but I had simply planted and raised them blindly. Just at Christmas I got hold of some book on floriculture, and I subscribed to some magazines. I read every spare minute I had. I saved my allowance—oh, I cut out candy, I did—and as soon as possible I put that money into the land Dad gave me. He and mother just looked indulgent at first, and thought it was merely a whim, but soon they learned that I was in earnest. Oh, but I have worked! I had to give up morning naps, and lots of nice, lazy little habits that I was so fond of, for this business of raising flowers seriously is no baby job. I never dreamed that I could stand such hard work, such long hours of it. But then, the results began to come—sweet peas, oh, such beauties! Pansies, poppies, lilies, roses, and asters, Aunt Lena, and chrysanthemums! Those are not half. The garden has been full of flowers since early spring. And I have sold them again and again. Why, I made ten dollars on my asters alone. But that is not the best part." She paused suddenly.

"What is the best part, Persis?" asked her aunt.

"The way people look up to me now," she said; "they don't consider me a failure any longer."

"No, the best part is something deeper than that, my dear. It is not merely that you have found health and happiness and friends; you have found yourself. And you have done it by adding one syllable to your name, Persis-tence."—Edith Taylor Earnshaw, in Kind Words.

WHAT KIND DO YOU CHOOSE?

"About ten years from now you'll meet a man with whom you'll have to live all the rest of your life," said a thoughtful teacher to his class of boys. "He will wear your clothes, eat your food, and answer to your name. What kind of fellow will he be? That all depends on you. Whether you want to or not, each one of you is deciding every day the kind of man he is going to live with a few years from hence."

Furthermore, it is an arresting fact that if the fellow you are going to live with does not turn out to be the kind of man you like, you are going to have a hard job getting away from him. If you do not like your neighborhood, you can move. If you do not like the man across the street, you can let him alone. But if you find that you do not like yourself, what are you going to do about it? Right now is the time to decide whether you will live with a man who is pure or impure, truthful or dishonest, religious or irreligious, a man who is ashamed of himself or a man who holds his head high—Selected.

Porter and Winston, First, go over the top on all budgets this week making seven charges that have paid all the budgets. Melton's Grove goes over on the A. C. B. making seventeen charges that have paid the A. C. B. in full. Lawndale on Fallston goes over on the A. C. B. making five churches that are over besides those where the whole charge has gone over. What fine work it would have been for every church on every charge to have begun early in the year and have gone over. Then every charge would have been over by now. On the G. C. B. Asheville, and Calvary go over the top, while on the college we have a fine list of those who have paid up in full, Mebane, Melton's Grove, Granville, Forsyth, West Thomasville, and Enfield, Saxapahaw, making thirty-nine charges that have paid this budget in full. There are also six individual churches that have gone over. A goodly number of the other charges are near the top on this budget and we feel sure that everybody will make a special effort to raise this assessment in full. The need here is very urgent as my letter to pastors stated. To let anything stand in the way of raising this assessment will be exceedingly detrimental to the Kingdom in this Conference, and each charge and pastor so failing must accept their share in this great responsibility. The greatest gains made by any charge that did not go over the top, were made by Concord—the largest amount sent in was from this charge—going to the top on the G. C. B. while splendid gains were made by a number of others.

This report as it is completed at Conference will be the Honor Roll for the Conference Journal. The Honor Roll in the Journal means much but this Roll means infinitely more—it means our year's work as we have done it for the Lord.

Notice

We do not have the definite information about the Special Fund For Superanuates that would enable us to make out this Roll properly. Some pastors have been definite about it and some have just stated "All budgets in full," and have not stated whether that includes this special assessment or just the budgets. Please let me have definite information on this point.

Yours for full reports of what we have done,

A. G. DIXON.

—Plans for participation in the Eleventh Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross, to be held from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving, will be mapped by State workers in cooperation with national officers at three regional conferences this week in North Carolina. North Carolina conferences are scheduled as follows: Wednesday, October 26, Hickory Hotel, Hickory; Friday, October 28, Memorial Community Building, Goldsboro; November 1, Baptist Church, Burlington. One hundred and twenty-five chapters in the state have been invited to send delegates, 44 to be represented at the Hickory Conference, 53 at Goldsboro and 28 at Burlington. Both national and state officers will speak.

Notes and Sundries

—Prospects that the apple crop this year will be the smallest since 1921, and, excepting that year, the smallest in twenty years, are reported by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, in a special summary of the situation.

—Don't wear silver dresses. A little chorus girl in France lost her life by wearing one and coming in contact with a live electric wire.

—Rev. T. F. McCulloch recently found stowed away in an attic of the Wesley Coe home what was once a splendid long sword. It is in a good state of preservation, being kept from rust by its scabbard. It was used in the recent pageant at Calvary church by the angel of Jehovah as a symbol of his terrible power. It is supposed that this sword belonged to an ancestor of the Coe daughters, perhaps Colonel Wood.

—Members of the Hastampatti Christian Endeavor Society, India, regularly visit the local jail and preach the gospel to the inmates. The women of this society held a week's evangelistic campaign during the summer holidays. They visited five villages, speaking to the women about Christ.

THE OTHER SIDE OF WINE DRINKING FRANCE

"A baby carriage containing two children of perhaps one and two years of age. The older one is crying softly and monotonously. The smaller one, at the foot of the carriage, is asleep; its neck, at an acute angle, hangs over the edge of the carriage swaying, and the hot sun beats upon its bare head. The woman pushing the carriage, a young slattern, makes desperate efforts to remain erect, using the carriage as a prop. She leads another child of perhaps four years, who can walk. But the mother, as she sways, keeps constantly upsetting and almost stepping on it, stopping and dragging it up before she staggers on. A few paces behind comes the father. After every dozen steps, he falls flat, then collects himself for another effort.

"Another picture: Two old people, perhaps each seventy years old, always together. During my years at X, I never saw them sober. Their home was across the river, and they would totter, arm in arm, across the bridge, carrying a package of clean clothes—the old woman is a laundress. Singing and laughing shrilly, they would stop at a cafe not far from our house, where the woman would stay while he went off to deliver the clothes and return triumphantly with a few francs. Then laden with several bottles, they would go back across the river, still tipsily singing and laughing shrilly.

"Still a third picture: Children, half a dozen, living with their parents in one room on the village street. The older children are constantly on the quay side, rolling on the grass, begging, or watching the eldest girl wash at the water's edge. The babies covered with grime and vermin, have, like the others, infinitely wise eyes in old faces. The father and mother are both usually dead drunk on the floor by noon. Neighbors help the children, and the eldest girl—twelve—'carries on.'"—Ladies' Home Journal.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Draper.—I am closing my third year at Draper, and God has wonderfully blessed our work here. We have witnessed about five hundred conversions since we have been at Draper, and have received into the church about seventy-five members; twenty-three of these joined the church this year. The church has been repaired and new Sunday school rooms added.

So as we look back to the three years in the service of this church, we can say with Paul, Our labor is not in vain in the Lord.

The church and Sunday school is getting along fine. We have a Young Men's Evangelistic Club here and they are doing fine work.

The church is behind some with the pastor's salary but are working hard to raise it.

As we are expecting to be sent to a new field next year, pray for me that the Lord will bless our work there.

Your brother in Christ,
J. S. RIDDLE.

North Davidson Charge.—We have been with these good people for three years. We have tried to serve them, we have not done all we had hoped to do. We have had to leave some things undone; but these three years have been pleasant, because they are all an appreciative people. It is a real joy to try to preach to these folk. I have tried to preach the gospel and they appreciate it.

We held our last quarterly conference last Saturday. Everything went off fine, and they unanimously instructed the delegate to ask for my return for another year, and I guess I will come back, for I have sowed my turnip patch; provided however, it meets with the approval of the stationing committee. Brother Protus Koontz is our delegate and I am going to take him with me. I guess you see the point.

In the main we have had a good year's work, wish we could have done more for these people; we see things that ought to be done, I guess when we come to the last mile of the way we will see some things we wish we could do, and regret that we did not do more. All the year these people have been good to us. Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Berrier have been exceptionally good to us, for as long as their pantry has anything in it the preacher and family will get their part, as long as the smokehouse has any meat, we will get a part. As long as the wheat holds out we will have flour, for they send us ham to fry, side to boil, and flour to make biscuits and $15.00 in cash.

Brother Ed. Waitman never forgets us, for he brings by a nice sack of flour when he thinks we need it, and tells us when that gives out just let him know, also five pounds of oats for chickens.

We want to thank the ladies of Shiloh church for filling up our empty cans, also Friendship for a real good pounding.

At the close of our revival meeting at Mt. Pleasant, we had a real surprise. Brother J. L. Trollinger was doing the preaching; at the close of the service he asked me to go into the Sunday school room, and there to my great surprise they had lots of good things to eat. We put all in our car; but we had a load, not much room for family; but we got home safe, and filled up the pantry. We thank all for what they have done and pray God's blessings upon them.

Not long until Annual Conference. Let us pray for a good Conference.

Yours in His service,
R. L. TROXLER.

Alleghany, Davidson Circuit.—On the fourth Sunday after holding a funeral service at Chapel Hill at ten o'clock Brother C. E. Ridge came to Alleghany at twelve and preached us another good sermon. New officers were elected as it was the last appointment before Conference. New officers: F. M. Cook, Sunday school superintendent; Paul Fine, class leader; the others were the old board. We still have some sickness in this community. Brother Bunch Lanier is very sick; we hope that he may soon be out again; he is a faithful hand and is missed badly at church. The writer has been sick but was able to be at church Sunday by the help of the Lord who is our help in time of need if we look to Him.

The appointments have been changed from morning to evening; they will have the morning and we the evening for a while. We are expecting Brother Ridge back another year if it is the Lord's will. Pray for us.

ABIGAIL COGGIN, Reporter.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Charge.—Brother Ridge preached for us the third Sunday; his message was a very inspiring and helpful sermon. We love to hear Brother Ridge preach and will be disappointed if we don't get him back another year. Our camp meeting began on Saturday night before the third Sunday in September with Brother Morgan as pulpit help. We had a very good meeting; there were 19 converts and people were made to praise God aloud. But there were sinners that would not yield to the good preaching.

There were large congregations on Sunday and at night. They will organize Sunday school next Sunday. Prayer meeting the first Sunday night. Quarterly meeting at Chapel the 21st. Brother Dixon was there and Brother Bethea and Brother Henderson. Brother Bethea preached at the 11 o'clock hour and quarterly meeting in the afternoon, held in brotherly love. LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Circuit.—Our revival meeting which commenced Sunday, September 16th, came to a close Sunday night. Our pastor had for his pulpit help Mr. W. M. Pike. Brother Pike was at this place about forty years ago, and helped in a revival meeting. Several people remembered him. He delivered some very helpful and interesting sermons. I heard much compliment of his sermons. Although we did not see the results we had hoped for we feel that some good was accomplished.

A week preceding the meeting cottage prayer meetings were held. At different homes each night with very good attendance.

The last communion service of the year was held last Sunday, a large number participating. The attendance of our Sunday school is very good but is not what we would like to see. Four girls from the junior class gave a special selection yesterday morning at Sunday school. A few Sundays ago. Prof. W. B. Speas was elected superintendent of the Sunday school due to the fact our former superintendent, Mr. Elwood Hunter, is attending college at Chapel Hill.

The Christian Endeavor Society meets twice a month at the church. They have made plans for a social Thursday night to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Holder.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary societies will meet next Tuesday evening.

MRS. ARZIA DAVIS, Reporter.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Circuit.—Our pastor filled his appointment fourth Sunday afternoon. The attendance was good and Brother Williams preached a good sermon. The text was: The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved.

After the sermon the communion service was held. We were glad to see the large number of the congregation partake of the Lord's Supper.

After this new officers were elected for the coming year. They are as follows: Class leaders—J. S. Faucette, J. F. Holmes, W. A. Pender, W. S. Sykes, Mrs. C. A. Sykes; trustees—W. S. Dodson, S. N. Hayes, D. M. Pender, C. A. Sykes, D. M. Sykes, P. F. Tapp, J. E. Thompson; stewards—J. C. Dodson, S. E. Holmes, C. H. Jones, O. F. Jones, J. M. Minnis, W. A. Moore, D. A. Pender, Annie Bell Sykes, E. C. Sykes; Sunday school superintendent—John T. Hobbs; church secretary and treasurer,—C. H. Jones; assistant—Mrs. C. A. Sykes; Reporter—the writer.

We sincerely hope that conference will send our pastor back to us.

ANNIE SQUIRES, Reporter.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Our pastor preached his last sermons for this conference year the third Sunday. After the morning service we had a church conference. Officers were elected for the coming year or mostly re-elected; only a few changes were made. The fourth quarterly conference met last Saturday and unaniously voted for the return of our pastor. Brother Williams has served us faithfully for three years and we hope conference will be good enough to send him back again.

The Ladies' Aid and the W. H. M. S. met at the parsonage last Wednesday evening and quilted two quilts for the Children's Home. Every one present seemed to enjoy it very much.

The Christian Endeavor society has reorganized and taken on new life so to speak. We wish the society much success.

Our Sunday school is well attended and the regular members seem to be very interested in the work. May God add his blessings to all our efforts.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Harris Chapel, Vance Charge.—We had Rev. M. P. Chambliss to preach his last sermon before the Annual Conference convenes this p.m. at three o'clock. He preached a good one as usual. Hope the Conference will see fit to return him to this work again next year as he is liked by 'most everybody. At the conclusion of his sermon we proceeded to elect church and Sunday school officers for next year as follows:

Trustees: E. S. Glover, H. G. Ellington, E. R. Boyd, C. S. Burroughs, L A Wells, S A. Greenway, J. A. Wells; Stewards: C. S. Burroughs, E. R. Boyd, S. A. Burroughs, C. C. Nuckles, J. B. Glover, Jr.; Reporter: Mrs. C. S. Burroughs; Class Leader: H. G. Ellington; Secretary Treasurer: L. W. Burroughs; Pianist: Mrs. H. W. Glover.

Superintendent, E. S. Glover; assistant superintendent, M. S. Robertson; secretary treasurer, C. S. Burroughs; pianist, Miss Arline Harris. Teachers to be elected by each class next Sunday. REPORTER.

South Lexington.—One more Sunday and the faces of pastors and delegates will turn toward Asheboro for the 100th annual session of the North Carolina Methodist Protestant Conference. The months have swiftly passed and we are near another annual conference where we will review the year's work.

Services at South Lexington church last Sunday were well attended. There was an increase in the Sunday school attendance of nineteen over the previous Sunday, there being 165 persons present. At the annual election of church officers held on the third Sunday morning Brother H. C. Koonts was re-elected superintendent of the Sunday school. He has served four or five years as superintendent of the school and has been a good officer. Besides being a good superintendent he has maintained an almost perfect attendance during the four or five years, being present every Sunday except in cases of unusual circumstances.

The Lord's Supper was administered at the morning service last Sunday following a good sermon by Pastor Ridge. The sermon text was St. John 19:30, "It is finished." The sermon was a discourse on the seven sayings of Jesus on the cross and was an impressive message concerning the events just preceding the death of Christ. This writer was called on to assist in administering the Lord's Supper.

For forty-five minutes preceding the Sunday night service the church met in business session and revised the church register. The church service which followed was well attended and another good sermon by the pastor was heard.

At the annual election of church officers held at the morning service on the third Sunday the following were elected to serve during the coming year: Trustees—J. H. Yates, J. A. Easter and David Brooks; Stewards—A. F. Huneycutt, Chairman; Phons Bean, G. A. Barber, Frank Forshee and W. C. Gibson. W. C. Gibson was re-elected treasurer of the board of stewards. He has served in that capacity for many years and is an excellent treasurer.

The fourth quarterly conference for the South Lexington charge was held at Mount Carmel on Saturday, October 15, with twelve representatives from the Lexington church and seven representatives of Mount Carmel church present. The business of the conference was transacted in a spirit of harmony. The pastor presided as chairman and C. L. Hedrick the secretary, occupied his place in the conference. After the devotional part of the conference a motion prevailed that all persons present be made honorary members of the conference. Reports were made, first by the pastor. A summary of his report is as follows: preached 101 sermons on the charge, made 259 pastoral visits, received 19 new members into the two churches on the charge, baptized eight adults and one child. Stewards made reports which showed finances behind some but hope was expressed that all of the pastor's salary would be paid and some paid on the budgets.

One important action of the quarterly conference was to increase the pastor's salary for next year to $1,416.00. It is explained that the increase is to take care of parsonage rent which is to be paid by the pastor next year. A unanimous vote of the conference was to instruct the delegate, Brother C. L. Hedrick, to ask for the return of the present pastor for another year.

The services on the charge next Sunday, the last Sunday before the Annual Conference, will be as follows: Mount Carmel 11 a.m., South Lexington 7:30 p.m. Pastor Ridge will deliver his final sermons for this conference year. C. B. WAY, Reporter.

Jerusalem.—We held our last services for this conference year on the third Sunday morning in this month. The usual size congregation was present for the service. The pastor was afforded the rare privilege of having his mother, Mrs. Mary E. Way, of Burlington, worship with the congregation and lead the opening prayer. Perhaps not many pastors in the North Carolina Conference have had the same experience.

The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed at the last appointment and the usual number participated. After the close of the service the fourth quarterly conference convened for a brief meeting and the alternate delegate was elected. He is Brother H. L. Hedrick. Brother W. J. Ward is the delegate from Jerusalem charge to the Annual Conference.

It has been a pleasure for this pastor to serve the Jerusalem church the past year. The congregation is small but there are some faithful and devoted Methodist Protestants among the membership of the church and there are some others who are not so faithful and devoted as is the case in all churches. The pastor's salary was paid in full. The Annual Conference Budget and the College Assessment were also paid in full. Jerusalem lacked only $20 of paying all claims in full for the year. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Orange Charge.—The fourth quarterly conference met at Chestnut Ridge Saturday, October 22nd. This conference was attended by 30 or more of the official members and several who were not official members. The business was transacted harmoniously. Brother M. P. Efland was elected alternate delegate. Pastor's salary was increased from $1,800 to $2,000 for next year. The delegate was instructed to ask for the return of the present pastor for another year. We appreciate this vote of confidence. May God direct in all that is done in our approaching Annual Conference.

Sincerely,
B. M. WILLIAMS.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—As I have been away for five weeks and went back to my home church I will try make a short report. The Sunday school is moving along nicely. My assistant teacher seems to be handling my class nicely. I found practically all them at Sunday school. I was real glad to be back with them. But seemed as sadness filled the whole church. Our pastor, Rev. J. T. Sisk, is critically ill. His blood is clogging around his heart. The last time I heard he was able to sit up a little. But I fear he will not be able to attend the Annual Conference. I don't know how about financial business of the charge now. The fourth quarterly conference will be held at Dulin's next Saturday, October 29.

Just a few words in the behalf of Dulin's church. We have appreciated having Brother Sisk with us four years. He is a splendid preacher, singer, and worker. We all enjoyed working with him. I feel he has done some splendid work for the charge which will not be forgotten as soon as he turns his back. We are glad that conference sent him back to us each year. We'll be glad if conference sees fit to let him stay one more year with us.

Want you all to pray for him to be restored to health.

Best wishes to Herald and its readers.

High Point.—A Christian Endeavor Institute, sponsored by the City Union, of which Arnold J. Koonce is president, in conjunction with the Northern District, composed of twelve counties, was held in the First church on Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Hoyt F. Cunningham, All-South Secretary, was prevented from attending by illness, but Rev. Lawrence Little of Concord, field secretary of the denomination, was present and delivered an address on Saturday evening. Another interesting feature of the program was an address on "Leadership," by Miss Creola Hall. Talks were made by Rev. E. Lester Ballard, associate pastor of the First church and Mr. Stokes S. Rawlins, State President of Christian Endeavor Union. Leaders of simultaneous conferences were Mr. Ballard, Mrs. L. W. McFarland, Miss Anna Mendenhall, Mr. Rawlins, and Miss Mary Sheppard. Prior to the session of Saturday evening, supper was served by our Ladies' Aid Society to fifty Endeavorers and their friends. Another session was held at 2:30 p.m. when Miss Hall spoke on "My Answer to the Missionary Challenge" and Mr. Paul Rawlins, President of Northern District, and Mr. Stokes S. Rawlins both delivered addresses. At seven o'clock a vesper service was conducted by Rev. P. E. Lindley, and at 7:30 Rev. J. Clyde Auman spoke on "The Young People's Attitude Toward Japan," which was quite interesting since Mr. Auman is fresh from the field and work.

A delightful communion services was held at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday morning, conducted by Rev. Messrs. Lindley and Ballard. A very large number, in fact almost the entire congregation, joined in this sweet and sacred celebration of the Lord's supper, and we were especially pleased to have so many members of the Junior church to commune with us, many of them for the first time.

The Junior Mission Circle is meeting this (Monday) afternoon at 3:45 o'clock at the church with Mrs. R. M. Andrews, Superintendent.

A very harmonious quarterly conference was held last Wednesday evening and interesting reports of the year's work were read by the acting pastor, Rev. P. E. Lindley, and the associate pastor, Rev. E. Lester Ballard. Fifty-four members have been received during the Conference year, but three have been claimed by death and five have been transferred elsewhere, making a net gain of forty-six. The membership now totals 677. Ladies' Aid Society reported that the debt on the carpet in auditorium has been reduced to $300. Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies made an excellent report through the president, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker. The total amount raised during the year was approximately $850, while the Home Missionary Society sent in $543 through Mrs. Pickens, Secretary-Treasurer. Mr. J. A. Gray, Chairman Committee on Beautifying the Grounds, gave a splendid report. Concrete drives have been laid, the lawn has been sown in grass, which made a fine stand, and shrubbery has been ordered from Hickory. The sum of $1160 has been contributed for this purpose by private contributions. Much praise is due Mr. Gray for his faithful work and attention extending over a long period of time, which has resulted in a great improvement in the appearance and attractiveness of the church and surroundings. Mr. Lindley reported that the general condition of the membership is good, and there has been a marked improvement in the solemnity of services and the attitude of worship of the congregation. The outstanding new feature is the organization of the Junior church by Rev. Mr. Ballard; its congregation now averages 80 or 90, which is quite remarkable. Another new organization is the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, which is doing excellent work under the leadership of Miss Myrtle Davis.

Sunday was observed as Rally Day by the Sabbath school; more than 400 were in attendance, and the offering amounted to $77.00.

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society will enjoy a masquerade Hallowe'en Social on Monday evening, and all in attendance are expected to wear costumes appropriate to the season of All Saints' Day.

Next Sunday morning church officers and a superintendent of the Sabbath school for the coming year will be elected. A committee has been appointed to select names for the various offices. A number of new members will be received into the church at this time.

Scout-master J. D. Hardy is very anxious to build up his troop of Boy Scouts, which meets every Friday evening from seven to nine p.m. The support and co-operation of all parents of intermediate boys is earnestly desired.

We are much pleased to note the improvement of Egbert Fogleman, little son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Fogleman, who has been seriously ill of diphtheria and membranous croup.

The numerous friends of Captain A. M. Rankin throughout the state will rejoice to know that he continues to improve, and hopes to be able to attend Conference at Asheboro.

Orange Charge, Hebron.—Yesterday was the last regular service of the conference year. Brother Williams preached a splendid sermon as he always does. The class roll was revised. New officers were elected, or the old ones re-elected, rather, with the exception of the Sunday school superintendent, Mr. W. B. Jones was elected superintendent.

Probably an installation service will be held later.

The last querterly conference was held Saturday p.m., all churches represented. Pastor's salary was raised to $2,000. The conference voted for the return of the present pastor and we hope the Annual Conference will see fit to send him and his family back to Orange.

Our Sunday school is moving along very well, but the attendance could be lots better. The Christian Endeavor is still progressing under the efficient leadership of Mr. W. B. Jones. We have a good Junior Christian Endeavor at Hebron. Mrs. J. A. Nicholson has charge of this department.

The ladies recently served supper to the Mebane Kiwians Club, and raised $35.00. This goes on the church, which we hope to complete in the near future.

A sign will be placed in front of the church soon. This gives the name of church and preaching hours etc.

Best wishes to the Herald and readers.

MRS. LELIA GILL, Reporter.

Enfield Charge.—Our Conference year's "sun is sinking fast, our race is nearly run," but there remain a few days for good work. Enfield charge, we believe, will do her best to meet all obligations. Our church at Enfield has long been burdened with debt for the new building, but the principal has now been paid and by taking care of all floating indebtedness through the Building and Loan Association of Enfield the church is now ready for dedication.

Our adjourned conference will be held next Monday at 10 a. m., and we hope to close up the best year possible under the conditions.

Hope this will be the best Conference we have ever had. Asheboro is a good place to go and we are "rearing to go" on the first caravan west.

R. C. STUBBINS.

Forsyth Tidings.—On Saturday night, October 15, the adjourned session of the quarterly conference of the Forsyth charge convened in the Maple Spring church. President Dixon, being present, presided over the meeting. Among other things, Mr. R. M. Cox was elected alternate delegate to the Annual Conference. It was found that finances were yet behind, but that more money had been raised by these churches this year than during any other year in their history. The Annual Conference budget is all paid, the college assessment will be paid, but the General Conference budget will not all be paid. But with the possible deficit on G. C. B. it was found that with some weeks yet to go on more money had been collected on budgets than ever before in any full year.

During the year six revivals have been conducted on the charge, one church having two revivals, while each of the others had one. There were accessions at every one of the churches. Bros. Gerringer, Taylor, Lindley, Millaway, and Troxler, were the evangelists in these revivals. Each of them did most excellent work and each of them has the thanks and appreciation of the pastor and people.

This is winding up a four-year sojourn of this pastor among this people. During this time much has taken place that has filled our souls with sadness, but in the midst of it all there has much taken place that has brought never-to-be-forgotten joy. During this time three churches have either been rebuilt or remodelled, the remodelled churches being made as good as rebuilt. Three new pianos have been bought, and electric lights have been extended to three churches. One hundred and thirty-seven members have been received. During the four years the pastor has traveled by automobile more than 40,000 miles, preached more than 600 times and administered the Lord's Supper 88 times. During the four years 24 revivals have been conducted and most of these revivals have been continued for at least ten days. The pastor does not take credit to himself for all the work done here during these four years. Much is the result of foundations laid by former pastors. And surely the work could not have been done without the co-operation and the willingness to follow on the part of the people and, above all, the help of God. These figures are not given to boast, but to express an appreciation and with the hope that these statements might make interesting reading for someone.

May God richly bless the Forsyth people and whoever might be their pastor in the future.

GEO. L. CURRY.

Henderson.—On last Wednesday night we closed our annual revival meeting, which was, according to statements by members, the best meeting in many years. There were thirty-five professions, including conversions and reclamations. Twenty members were received on profession and two by certificate. This makes the total number of members received during the Conference year twenty-five. Three members have died and one has transferred to another church during the year, making a net gain of twenty-one.

Rev. L. W. Gerringer, pastor of Calvary church, Greensboro, did the preaching throughout the ten days' campaign. His sermons were earnest and forceful, making a lasting impression upon the members of the congregation. We think that it would be hard to find a man anywhere in the denomination who could and would render better service in a revival.

The Conference year is closing up well for Henderson, and the pastor will go to Conference with a good report. This has been possible by the good work of the faithful membership. We wish to thank all who have had a part in it, and pray God's richest blessings upon them.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held Wednesday night of this week, at which time we are expecting the church treasurer to report everything paid up in full.

R. A. HUNTER.

Rockingham.—We held our fourth quarterly conference on October 19. The reports of the officials were fine. We had almost paid our pastor in full. We elected, or re-elected, officials for the coming year at this meeting. Our same superintendent, Mr. Holmes Collins, was re-elected. The same board of stewards was re-elected. It is as follows: Mr. R. F. Gardner, chairman, Mr. Holmes Collins, Mrs. D. E. McKenzie, Mr. Horace Covington, Mr. Hal Sneed, Mr. Guthrie Taylor, and Mr. W. M. Connell. The board of trustees: Mr. Holmes Collins, Mr. D. E. McKenzie, Mr. W. M. Connell, Mr. Hal Sneed, and Mr. Robert Gardner. Class leaders are Mr. R. F. Gardner and Mr. W. M. Connell. Our church treasurer also remains the same—Mr. D. E. McKenzie. We also have an assistant superintendent. He is Mr. Elvie Cox. We elected our alternate delegate to Conference at this meeting. Our alternate delegate is Mr. Hal Sneed.

We are progressing very nicely with the furnace preparations. We hope to have it installed in a very short time.

Our people have been very good and liberal in helping us.

Brother C. E. Phillips promised to come back and be with us again before Christmas when we installed the furnace. So, Brother Phillips, you had better decide on your date that you will come; we are going to soon have the furnace in if nothing else prevents.

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, delivered to us a very fine sermon on the third Sunday of the month, October 16. He will also be with us on the fifth Sunday. At this time he will also administer the Lord's Supper.

We want to thank our good pastor for his faithfulness and good service rendered us during this year. He has indeed been faithful. He has been with us on every one of his regular appointments except one, when he was off in a revival meeting. He has performed his full duties here this year. He and his dear wife have been a great blessing to us and our community.

Our Sunday school is improving some. We had a very good attendance on Sunday, October 23, and a very fine collection for the past two Sundays. On Sunday, October 16, our collection was $12.35.

We have one week left on this year and we hope at the end of this week to have the best record yet in the history of our church.

Pray for us that we may succeed in our work for our Lord.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

(Miss) BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

Friendship Station.—As we are nearing the close of another year, I will make mention of just a few things concerning this year's work. It has been one of the best years of my life. I have grown in the last twelve months. The people have stood by us with their prayers, and in a way to make us happy. They say the church is in as fine a shape as they ever saw it spiritually. They have made improvement in the church, such as stoves for comfort, and other things to beautify the church. This people have church pride. They believe in standing by the pastor and his family. The Ladies' Aid has done nice things to beautify the parsonage, and to make it comfortable. We haven't the words with which to thank them for the many kind acts they have shown us. It has not just been our own church, but the Baptist and M. E. people all have shown us many kind deeds. They have all been on hand when the pantry had to be replenished. And there was one man who was not a member of this church, Mr. James Lowder, who made Mrs. Hill and myself a present of five dollars each, and Mrs. Hill's was gold. We could not tell him how much we appreciated his kindness. We are going to ask the Lord to wonderfully bless them all for their many kind deeds.

Our congregation has been increasing all the year, and at prayer services there are almost as many as at preaching. I am so proud that the young people are taking so much interest in both prayer, and preaching services.

On the fifth Sunday in July we began the revival meeting with Rev. J. R. Anderson as pulpit help. Brother Anderson delivered some old-time gospel sermons that touched the hearts of the people. Many were heard to say that his messages were hard to beat. There were 12 reclamations and professions. Eleven have joined the church and more to join later.

Porter Station.—I must say something about this loyal little band and what they have been doing. They have stood by us and tried to make us happy. We feel benefited by being among this good people this year. They say they have broken the record this year; they had paid pastor's salary, and all claims in full. They are going to Conference with a clear record. They also have painted their church inside and out, stained the pews, varnished the organ, and the pulpit stand, the cost of which was two hundred dollars. They are proud of their church, and I am proud of them all. May they go on from year to year doing more and more for their Master. On the fourth Sunday in August we began the revival meeting, with Rev. Robert Short as pulpit help. He did some wonderful preaching. The congregation was impressed with his messages. There were ten reclamations and professions. Three joined the church. I think more will join later. The church was greatly revived. It stirs our souls to mingle with this good people.

To God be all the praise.

C. H. HILL, Pastor.

First Church, Concord.—Altogether this has been a good year with us at this church. With another ten days before the Conference meets we have paid all budgets in full—General, Annual and local. Will have an increase in membership of about fifty. The Sunday school enrollment is running close to four hundred. Woman's Missionary Society active. So is the Ladies' Aid. One children's Missionary Society, and a Young People's Missionary Society. We also have an active and strong men's brotherhood. We will be among the hundred per cent churches of the Conference.

The new educational building is nearing completion, but we will not be able to enter into it until after Conference. Our per capita contributions will run about $50 per member for the year.

The pastor has greatly enjoyed the work of the year. The church has been generous, co-operative and appreciative and in so far as I am able to tell, the entire church is in a fine working spirit. Certainly the Lord has been favorable to this people.

On Wednesday evening of this week the last quarterly conference and congregational meeting will be held. On next Sunday the annual election of officers and a congregational vote for pastoral supply will be held. In the afternoon of the same day the every-member canvass for pledges to the 1928 budget will be conducted. For the campaign what is known as the "Honor System" will be used. G. H. HENDRY, Pastor.

State Street Church.—Sunday was our pledge day. Almost all the members of the church came to the church Sunday afternoon and signed pledge cards for their amount for pastor's salary, etc.

The election of church officers was held Sunday morning. Nearly all the officers were re-elected. Only about two changes made. Mr. Lindsay was re-elected Sunday school superintendent.

The last quarterly conference will be held Friday night.

A Junior Christian Endeavor Society has recently been organized and is growing. Miss Pauline Lowe is president of the society and is doing fine work.

Mr. John Leonard and his family were with us in the Sunday night service. The three girls who sing favored us with a song. The "Leonard Trio" is growing to be very popular and much in demand.

REPORTER.

Cid, Denton Charge.—Rev. M. C. Henderson, accompanied by Mrs. Henderson and children, filled his last appointment for this Conference year. He delivered a very strong sermon to a right large crowd of attentive hearers. Brother Henderson is liked so well by all of Cid folks. They are all so sorry to see him leave; for we never can tell what's in the future, but we are hoping for his return. He has served us faithfully.

The fourth quarterly conference was largely attended. Reports were good; all the churches were represented. Two paid out on pastor's salary. Dr. A. G. Dixon was with us and gave us some interesting advice. As his time has fully expired, we are looking forward to another one just as good.

We were so glad to receive Mrs. Delilah Wright into our church last night. She moved her membership from Jerusalem Reformed denomination. She has always attended our church and has been lots of help to us.

Am glad to say that Mrs. J. D. Wright was able to be out at church last night, but is not well by any means.

Wishing success to the Annual Conference and all its entire body of people.

REPORTER.

Burlington.—The year is closing happily with the First church. Services are being well attended, especially in the morning, and an encouraging interest is being shown by the members in all the closing programs. All officers for 1928, including the Sunday school, have been duly elected and installed, and arrangements are now being made for next year's budget. On Sunday, afternoon the membership came to the church and pledged their support for the new year. The result was gratifying. Many came, and some doubled the amount that they gave this year. Others increased. The pledging will be continued next Sunday.

Our fourth quarterly conference will be held Wednesday night, October 26. The stewards are working hard to report at that time all financial obligations met in full. We look forward to their success. Bro. J. G. Rogers and Bro. J. E. Moore are contributing to a happy closing of the year by giving a supper to the board of stewards Wednesday night. These brethren are being much feasted in these closing days. Only recently they were the guests of the chairman, Bro. M. A. Coble, in his home, at a most delicious supper. Now it is to be repeated, this time at the hut. We shall not be surprised if there are many applications for membership on this board. The closing days of Conference years are very busy days, but the load is very greatly lightened when they are happy days.

A recent feature of our work was a play, "An Old-Fashioned Mother," given by a cast of local talent. The play was brought to us under the auspices of the Aid Society. The audience was large, and receipts amounted to $50.

On the third Sunday we received three new members. Bro. E. O. York came to us by letter from Belmont, and Sisters E. L. Olford and Lela Olford came from the Baptist church. We welcome them most gladly to our communion.

The spiritual interests and needs of the church are not being forgotten in these closing days. We are doing the unusual thing of beginning a series of evangelistic meetings on the closing Sunday of the Conference year. The Cowell-Ramsay evangelistic party will conduct these meetings, and they are to continue for two or three weeks. Many people outside of our own church are deeply interested in these meetings. We are expecting splendid results. The talk already is that our church will not begin to hold the people. Mr. Ramsay was here with Mr. Ham, and is very popular in Burlington. Mr. Cowell has been here, but not to hold a meeting.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Delano Millaway, who has been critically ill at the Rainey hospital for about four weeks, is showing signs of marked improvement. The prospects now are that she may be out soon. Mr. Millaway is the son of Rev. G. F. Millaway.

One more week, and then comes Conference. May the great Head of the church grant His guiding and inspiring presence for every session. S. W. TAYLOR.

South Lexington Charge.—If silence is a sign of spiritual decay, then we are in a bad way on this field, for we have not been heard from much this year. But we are not as inactive as our silence would indicate. Our Sunday school at South Lexington church and also at Mount Cormel church are progressing splendidly; larger attendance this year than ever before. This people here at South Lexington church have done fine things this year. They are as faithful a little band as you will find anywhere. Pounding—yes right at the last of the year. Mount Carmel people loaded old Henry down one night while I was in the church. I knew something was going on, and they didn't get it on me. All right. This people here at South Lexington said they will pull one over the preacher, but the preacher found it out before they got it done; but they came on anyway, and I was glad they did, for they brought lots of good things. But the doctor tells me I must not eat so much. But I want to thank you, dear friends, one and all. May the good Lord richly bless and prosper you this coming year.

In conclusion I want to say that the people have been very kind to the pastor and to Mrs. Ridge and we deeply appreciate it.

A. RIDGE.

Pleasant Union Church, Mount Pleasant Circuit.—Our special meeting commenced on the fifth Sunday in July and closed Friday night following. Rev. R. C. Stubbins was our help. He preached well. Everybody was pleased with his preaching, and his pleasant manner. There were three or four conversions. No one joined the church. There were very few unconverted people who attended the meeting. Great good was accomplished in the church.

Mount Pleasant Church.—Our revival meeting began on the third Sunday in August and closed Friday night. There were about 15 conversions; 13 united with the church. Rev. L. W. Gerringer was our help. He preached to the satisfaction of all. He, too, is a good preacher. Any circuit or station would do well to have either one of these brethren for a preacher and pastor.

G. F. Millaway.

Lincolnton.—Our tent meeting came to a close after 17 days of hard fighting. We had 62 conversions and our church was shaken up and quickened to a deeper sense of her duty. For the time we had it was the best meeting ever conducted in Lincolnton. Ten churches on the firing line for decency, honesty and sobriety.

We closed the meeting on Sunday night after 12 people had found emancipation in the light and power of redeeming grace. You know that it is out of the ordinary to have conversions on Sunday night, but thanks be unto God, it can be done if we will pay the price.

Twelve joined the church Sunday. Six were baptized by immersion at the Quarry at three o'clock in the afternoon.

The official board was elected Sunday and Bro. D. B. Johnson was elected Sunday school superintendent.

It is reported among our people that the church is in better condition than it has been for years. People, it takes praying and personal touch to get things done.

We are expecting many more to join the church before the year closes. Nineteen or twenty have joined this year.

The church is pulling like a fast engine to get over the top and we believe that we are going to have a fine report.

The fourth quarterly conference will convene at Lincolnton Methodist Protestant church on Saturday evening at seven-thirty, October 29.

Bro. D. B. Johnson is the delegate from this charge. W. L. CARSON.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Circuit.—We started prayer meeting at our church about two years ago on Sunday and Wednesday nights. The High Point gospel team held a meeting for us and organized a gospel team prayer meeting for the men on Sunday night and ladies Wednesday night, and by the faithfulness of our leaders we are still holding on to our prayer meetings. Mrs. Rosa Caschatt is president of the ladies' meeting and she is one of our most consecrated members of the church. She goes about her work at home and at church so quietly and so humbly keeps herself in such a heavenly frame of mind that her life is a great power and such an inspiration. She is always the same quiet, humble and obedient servant of the Lord. Much praise is due her for these ladies' prayer meetings that have gone on through many discomforts, for most churches have the eyperience of seeing and knowing that it is the faithful few that keep the fire burning at the prayer meeting. Especially do we notice that on the week-day night when our bodies are tired; we must make a sacrifice many times in order to be present, but we see many that faint by the wayside, not willing to endure and pay the price. We must be faithful at all times. "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." We must follow on to know the Lord; by so doing we grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

May the Lord help us at all of the different places of worship to press on and up to the prize which hangs in view.

The men's gospel team meetings on Sunday nights are still going on by the help of a few; much praise is due Mr. Henry Billings for the untiring efforts that he has and is putting forth. He is president of the meeting and let it be few or many, Bro. Billings is always on hand, keeping the incense burning on the altar of God. He is a bright light shining in the church. His life is like a city set on a hill; he never gets weary in well-doing; he knows in due season he shall reap if he faints not, and he is a personal worker.

We verily believe that the prayer meetings help to hold the church together in such a way as nothing else could; it keeps us in readiness for the preaching services and the Sunday school attendance, and has much to do with our having a revival. So let us do our bit, let's take courage and go forward in this great work. MARTHA PARSONS.

Graham Church.—Our revival meeting was held October 2-9, inclusive. We had with us at this time Rev. J. Clyde Auman. It was indeed a pleasure to have Brother Auman with us and we considered it a rare treat. He brought to us a number of very interesting and inspiring messages, which were enjoyed and appreciated by all. Mr. Charlie Amick, of Burlington, had charge of the music during the meeting. We appreciated very much having him with us and feel that he made his part of the meeting a success. Although the number of converts was small, our meeting was successful, for we all feel inspired and helped.

We had our Rally Day service on October 9. We were fortunate to have Brother Auman with us at this time. He made a very interesting talk on "Sunday School in Japan." The attendance was good and the offering amounted to about $20.

On Sunday, October 16, we elected our new officers for the coming year.

The quarterly conference will be held Wednesday night, October 26, and we hope to have all the new and old officers present.

Sunday, October 23, was pay up day. We are putting forth a special effort to raise our budget.

Our pastor, Brother Williams, is still giving us messages each Sunday that are really worth-while listening to. His sermons are always good and a very great help to all who hear them. M. T. H., Reporter.

Saxapahaw.—To the members of the fourth quarterly conference:

My dear co-workers:—The work of another year is about finished and we are here to render an account to each other and to God and to plan for the future. With this report we come within three weeks of the close of a five year's pastorate among you. They have been pleasant years, unmarred, so far as I know, by factions or strifes within the churches. As we glance back over the five years we note some indications of progress made in the work of the Kingdom, but more might have been done, perhaps, by both pastor and people.

Let us now survey the five years work briefly:

Orange Chapel church has been painted inside and out, beautiful pulpit chairs have been purchased, carpets have been placed in pulpit and aisles, concrete steps have been put to the door, a new individual communion set and pulpit Bible have also been purchased.

Salem has been painted on the outside, new carpets and lamps have been purchased. Through the influence of some of the members, Mr. Bradshaw of Greensboro donated a new organ to this church. The trustees have raised more than $300.00 looking toward the erection of Sunday school rooms. The Sunday school has also added a register.

Concord has purchased a new organ, new carpet for the pulpit and aisles, and new pews. Concrete steps have been built for all three doors. The church lawn has been beautified with shrubbery and flowers, blooming from early spring until late fall.

Saxapahaw church has been painted on the outside and part of the Sunday school rooms on the inside, and a new pulpit Bible purchased.

At all four churches bulletin boards have been placed on the highway.

The home and foreign missionary societies are functioning at each church. These organizations have helped in a financial way, and when they meet in a social way their spiritual life has been intensified and their sympathies broadened. The Myra Crawford Mission Circle at Orange Chapel and the Bell Thompson Mission Band at Salem are still active.

At present there is just one Christian Endeavor Society on this charge—the Senior society at Concord. This society is doing splendid work. The interest and attendance are good.

Salem has the best Sunday school in the history of the church, Brother H. G. Paris the superintendent, informs me. Saxapahaw, Concord, and Orange Chapel have interesting Sabbath schools. Children's Day services have been held at three of the churches, the offerings, of course, going to Foreign Missions.

Number of members received during the five years: Saxapahaw, 26; Concord, 36; Orange Chapel, 34; and Salem, 41.

The future of the M. P. church is, to a great extent, tied up in the budgets, and the need demands that they be paid in full, if possible. It is impossible to do this unless a workable plan is adopted and that plan worked. A plan is no good unless it is worked.

High Point College.—This institution needs the sympathy of every M. P. in North Carolina. It is doing a splendid work, more than 300 students being enrolled this year. But the College needs the prayers and the financial help of us all.

I have tried to do the work you intrusted to me in the best way I could, and with a view of doing the most good for the church and the Kingdom. I have enjoyed working with you for five years, and express to you my appreciation for your co-operation. I shall remember with gratitude the inspiration and encouragement I have received which has made possible the achievements of the five years now about to close. Whoever may be your pastor next year, stand by him and hold up his hands as you have mine. Whoever he is he cannot succeed unless you help him. Now in conclusion, you have my thanks for the hospitality shown me in your homes. May the great Head of the church lead us all the way we should go.

H. L. ISLEY.

THOSE COMING FROM THE EAST, TAKE NOTICE

Since advising those coming from the East to take Highway 62 at Graham, as found in last week's Herald, the work of oiling route 62 between Asheboro and Liberty has been started and several miles of the road has been closed, making a detour necessary. You are now advised to go to Greensboro over route 10 and then proceed to Asheboro over route 70.

Yours to serve,

A REPLY

We are glad the "question" in last week's Herald was asked.

We are not seriously concerned which way the matter is settled but would like to see it settled so that we may know where we are at. We brought a resolution before the conference last year to classify the matter, but it was given too little time for discussion and was merely passed over.

We think the conference should ask for an interpretation of the question from the president of our General Conference as to whether we are Itinerant, Congregational or what.

R. C. STUBBINS.

FATHER AND SON BANQUET

We are hoping that a large number of our Methodist Protestant Churches will arrange for the observance of a "Father and Son's Week" this fall, or winter.

The suggested dates are November 6-13. While most observances will be held during that week there is also a large number of churches and communities in which the observance is held at other times.

Our Board is prepared to furnish a limited number of churches with supplies for this observance, free of cost. We have the following supplies available at this time:

1. General Folder of Information. This gives suggestions for the set up for the week in a local church or community.

2. Father and Son Worship Service. This gives a program of worship for use on "Father and Son" Sunday. This may be used in a church service, Sunday school session, or at other gatherings.

3. Song Sheet. This offers a very fine selection of popular songs for use at socials, banquets and other festive occassions.

As long as our supply lasts, we will furnish one copy of each of the above free upon application. Additional copies may be purchased if desired.

HOW TO GET PASTOR'S SALARY

A steward in M. E. church went to an old tight buck of a Methodist and said to him 'How about helping our pastor?"

The Methodist who would skin a flee for its hide and tallow—penny wise, dollar foolish—said, "I can't do anything now." So the steward said: "That crib of corn is more than you need; how about two bushels?" So he got two bushels of corn. "Wheat more than it will take to do you," so the steward got a bushel of wheat. "Chickens more than you will eat." Steward got six chickens.

"Well, how about a dollar?" The spiritual crackling said, "I haven't got but two dollars." Steward said: "Good; give preacher one, and you will have one, and the preacher one." So he perhaps sang as he pushed over the dollar, "God be with you till we meet again."

Listen, you old steward on the official board of the New Jerusalem, it takes more sense to collect pastor's salary than to chew Brown Mule. Get wise and help that pastor and family to smile like a basket of opossum heads.

—Death has robbed Calvary church of another of its members—the third this year. Brother C. L. Tucker died of pneumonia last Saturday after an illness of ten days. The funeral was held at 2 p.m. on Sunday and was attended by an immense throng, more than could gain admittance to the church. Rev. L. W. Gerringer was assisted in the funeral service by Rev. C. E. Hodgin and by Rev. R. M. Andrews. The burial was at Pleasant Garden. There another large company awaited the coming of the funeral procession. Brother Tucker had many friends. He was of quiet disposition, but he had a kindly, friendly spirit which revealed itself to those with whom he had dealings. He was a very popular salesman; people liked to trade with him. He leaves a wife, two sons and one daughter.

—Dispatches report the sinking of an Italian ship off the coast of Brazil with the loss of hundreds of lives, though hundreds were saved by other ships that came in response to radio calls.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett preached two sermons in Calvary church October 16th that were heard with keen interest. He has preached nearly thirty times this year and perhaps better than he ever did.

VOLUME XXXIII. GREENSBORO, N. C., NOVEMBER 3, 1927 NUMBER 51

A Man and an Automobile

On the street today we met a man and an automobile. It was just an ordinary-looking man and just an ordinary-looking automobile, but they set us to thinking. Both were moving in the same direction, but at different rates. The auto was moving much faster than the man was. Both might be regarded as vehicles, but the carrying capacity of the automobile was much greater than that of the man. Both vehicles were of course designed for locomotion, but the mechanism of the automobile was of a very different type from that of the man. The automobile moved along smoothly on wheels whereas the man moved along with a sort of jerky motion on two legs. The forms of the two bodies differed greatly as did the size. The question arose in our mind, Which is the greater production, the man or the automobile?

This led to a further comparison of the two. We noticed that the automobile was under the direction of a person riding with his hands upon a steering wheel whereas the man was directed by his own mind. The man is therefore the true auto, and the automobile is not really an auto at all. It has only the power to propel itself. It has no power to guide itself. It seems to have two eyes, but they see not. The man has eyes and sees. The man is conscious. He can say, I am, I think, I feel, I will. The automobile is never conscious and can say none of these things. While the automobile as a mere instrument for conveying material bodies is far superior to the man, in other respects the man is infinitely superior to the machine. Then when I considered the duration of the two I saw that there is no comparison between them. A few years of use will put the machine forever out of existence whereas the man is destined to live on through endless ages. The machine is wholly of the earth and will disintegrate under corrosion and fall back into the earth. The man is only partly of the earth: he has in his composition a mysterious element that came from afar and will in time return to its high source. The machine could awaken within my mind only the fear that it might crush me. But the man had power to excite profound respect, even awe, when I thought of his high origin, his wonderful endowments, and his high destiny.

Growth of Protestant Churches in America

Careful investigation by Charles Stelzle has revealed the following: In 1800 seven out of every one hundred of the population were Protestant church members. In 1850 fifteen out of every hundred. In 1900 twenty-four. In 1925 twenty-six. The growth of Protestantism in the United States has more than kept pace with the growth of population. Perhaps there should have been a more rapid growth, but the facts are more encouraging than the enemies of Protestantism would have us believe. The Protestant church is one of the growing things in the world. It is not too much to hope that some time the whole lump will be leavened.

—If thou wouldst be justified, acknowledge thy injustice; he that confesses his sin begins his journey toward salvation; he that is sorry for it mends his pace; he that forsakes it is is at his journey's end.—Quarles.

First Fruits of High Point College

Our college has been in operation only a little over three years, but already is the church enjoying some of the fruits. This year several charges have been served by pastors who have been students in High Point College: Carroll has served Mt. Hermon; Madison has served Spencer and another church; W. M. Loy has served Fountain Place, Burlington; O. C. Loy has served Guilford; Love has served Richland; Furr has served Second Church, Charlotte; Andrew we believe has served West Thomasville. In addition to these ministerial workers there are still more lay workers who have been or are now students in High Point College. The college did not come too soon. We are already beginning to wonder how we got along without it so many years.

A Wicked Pope

One may have only feelings of condemnation for the Romish system, and yet he would expect that for policy's sake only men of correct moral life would be permitted to serve as Pope of the Roman Catholic Church. But one of the popes was so outrageously immoral that he has been made the subject of a book setting forth in detail his horrible crimes. He was an adulterer and murderer and much more that is vile and malicious. This book was written by John Bond, European correspondent of The Fellowship Forum.. It is entitled In the Pillory.. It tells the shocking tale of the Borgia Pope in nine crowded chapters. It is interesting reading in that it throws light upon the inside affairs of the Romish church and reveals the dangers inherent in such an ecclesiastical system.

Conference Map

A map 15x38 inches has been printed showing the location of the churches, parsonages, and high schools of our North Carolina Conference district. It also shows roads and distinguishes kind of roads. This map will be useful to the Committee on Boundaries and also to pastors going to new fields. Several hundred have been printed and will be on sale this week at the Annual Conference. Those likely to need them would better secure while they can.

The Mystery of Our Conference Session Number

This is the 102nd meeting of our Annual Conference and yet its first meeting was in December, 1829. It would seem that this ought to be the one hundredth session. The explanation is that for two years our Conference had two sessions instead of one. In the years 1829 and 1836 it met twice. In the former year it met April 2 and October 1. In 1836 it met March 25 and December 9. A called session was held at High Point a year or two ago, but this we believe was not numbered as a separate session. So it happens that this present session is the one hundred and second. Next year in December our Annual Conference will be one hundred years old.

The Conference Work

During this Conference year I have been blessed with good health for the most part, so have willingly and unhesitatingly responded to every call possible. In doing the work assigned me I have not sought to spare myself or the Buick car. I have travelled about 15,500 miles in my own car, many miles with pastors in their cars besides many miles by rail. Have attended 29 quarterly conferences, 72 committee and board meetings; have written about 2,700 letters and post cards; delivered 196 sermons and addresses; assisted in nine funerals, and married four couples.

Mrs. Dixon has been a great help in the work in many ways, especially by responding to the call of pastors and Missionary Societies. She has made about 94 addresses, organized several Christian Endeavor Societies, and also several Missionary Societies. Together we have assisted in four revivals, and had the pleasure of seeing 51 persons join the church as a result.

Fourth quarterly blanks were sent to all pastors. Not nearly all are in at this time, so the gleanings from these are omitted in this report. The honor roll will appear later also.

Our Sainted Dead

We pause in reverence before God, and humbly bow in submission to His will in the removal from our midst of those who have answered the last roll call during the year.

Sunday, January 30th, after a long illness, Mrs. D. A. Braswell quietly passed to her reward.

April 15th, Mrs. J. H. Bowman suddenly and unexpectedly went to join her husband in the glory world.

June 8th, Rev. D. A. Highfill suddenly but triumphantly crossed over.

September 2nd, Mrs. D. I. Garner, after many months of affliction, was released from her frail body to be gathered home.

Sunday, September 18th, Rev. J. H. Stowe peacefully and quietly fell asleep in Jesus.

The two ministers referred to were both our venerable fathers in Israel, who were honored among us.

Obituary committees were regularly appointed, and will report at the memorial service next Sunday afternoon.

On December 27th, 1926, Rev. Fred C. Klein, D. D., our first ordained missionary to Japan and for nearly twenty years secretary of the Board of Missions, peacefully passed to the great beyond. Dr. Klein belonged to the entire denomination. He was a good man and will be missed among us. I suggest that the secretary of this Conference be directed to write Mrs. Klein at Berwyn, Md., expressing our sympathy.

Our Children's Home

A full report of the Home will be made at the proper time by the superintendent and the treasurer. Our people take a great pride in the Home, and they contribute to the Home with a bit more joy, I think, than to anything else outside of the local church work.

Each Sunday school should respond to the request to one Sunday offering per month for the Home. Most of our schools are doing this, and I believe the others can be led to do so provided there is some systematic follow-up plan to call attention of pastors and superintendents to this worthy cause. I call attention once more to the "Daily Income Plan" which is put on each year at Thanksgiving for the Home. If our people will respond liberally through these two channels the Home will continue to be in good financial condition.

High Point College

The High Point College goes on apace with its great work. It was a source of great joy to us that we were able to graduate our very first class with an "A Grade Diploma," though the college had only been running three years. Many said we could not do it, but we did. Our present enrollment is 316, with 44 of these in the senior class.

The College is not only the pride and joy of our Conference, but, thank God, it is being recognized as the very heart of the Conference. It has already put new life into the Conference, and through the years it will build us up as nothing else has done. It is great to know that all true, loyal-hearted Methodist Protestants in this Conference are responding to the calls of High Point College.

Many people from other states, and from other denominations in the state are saying beautiful things about us. Many of us here have been down under the burdens of it until we have, in a measure, failed to see the glory of it. But today we should lift up our hearts and praise God for so wonderfully leading us, and promise Him that we will boost with all our souls.

All praise and all honor to everyone who has contributed in any way to make High Point College possible. At this present time Mr. George T. Penny and Mr. J. M. Millikan are leading in a campaign to clear the college of indebtedness, and word comes to us that Mr. C. F. Finch is making it possible to begin the erection of a gymnasium shortly. To these, and to the many who have helped and who will continue to help, we say, God bless you.

For five years now I have labored side by side with Dr. R. M. Andrews, the president of High Point College, and know from actual experience, and from constant touch with this great soul, that for these five years he has given his best and his all to the college; he could do no more. In this great work he has the love and confidence and backing of the people of the Conference.

Our Superannuates

We rejoice that these faithful soldiers of the cross are receiving a bit more than formerly. Five years ago the largest amount paid to any one of our superannuates was $235 per year. This year a few of them are receiving $325. However, that amount is far too small. When I came into office I had high hopes of leading the Conference to do something worthy for this cause. But our financial burdens at High Point College, and in our church-building campaigns have bent our backs almost to the breaking; so we have not done much extra for the superannuates.

I commend the plan recommended by the committee on superannuates last year, and urge a modified continuance. I also urge each pastor in the Conference to stress the offering for superannuates until he is sure he has the full amount assessed his charge for this worthy cause. This Conference should quickly work to the point of paying $500 per year to each of our superannuates. When we raise the full assessment of $4,000 per year for this cause we can do this and at the same time pay a bit more than we are doing to widows of ministers.

Pastoral Work

Any honest pastor will tell you that pastoral work becomes more and more difficult. But difficulties must not be allowed to crowd out one of the most effective functions of the pastor. This is not gad-about work. It is real Kingdom service. A pastor said to me recently: "I have decided that when I visit a home something shall be done before I leave to let it be known that a minister has been in the home."

A good layman said the other day: "Can't you manage some way to get the pastors to visit more, especially among the careless and the indifferent. If sheep are absent the shepherd is careful to look after the absent ones."

Whatever you may think about it, your people want you in their homes. They wish your presence occasionally and your influence in rearing their children. The Stationing Committee frequently finds it difficult to place men, simply because they will not visit. The pastor neglects this work to the detriment of the people he serves, and also to the detriment of his own usefulness in Kingdom service.

Pastoral Supply and Pastoral Support

We have a noble band of ministers serving our fields, and we have been able from year to year to supply all our fields. A few of our men may be inefficient. A few of our fields do not pay a living salary. Some of these are small and seem too far from other churches to be attached to anything else. The one problem will be studied by our Conference Faculty, and I am recommending that the Boundary Committee and the Board of Church Extension study the other, and report to this Conference. Pastoral Supply and Pastoral Support are so slocely bound together that you cannot separate them. The charges are crying out for wide-awake, efficient service, and when they get this, in most cases, they are willing to increase the support accordingly.

The matter of pastoral support is one task that I have set myself definitely to during these five years. I believed our pastors could be helped in this, and they have been. In 1922 our pastors received on salary $76,352.00, and this year they were promised $111,820.00, an increase of $35,468.00. Reports indicate that there are not many deficits in salaries. Our country charges especially have made splendid advances in salary. Two of these promise $2,000 each for next year. Most of our country charges have made substantial increases in salary during the five years. However, there are several country charges that are just as able to pay $2,000 per year as are the two charges which are doing it.

We now have 13 ministerial students in High Point College; three of these we are already using in the pastorate, and several others would like to take work from this Conference. The two young men who graduated from our college last May would like to take advanced studies this year. Three who graduate from our college next May will, I think, enter our Westminster Theological Seminary next September, and one will possibly enter Duke University.

Church Extension

This is one of the most important matters to come to our attention. For a time our Conference should help rather largely at Fountain Place, Burlington, and at State Street, Lexington. Calvary and West End, Greensboro, both must be helped for a while. In Spencer, North Charlotte, and Kannapolis immediate help must be given in order to seize the splendid opportunities we have at these places. Then, too, a few salaries elsewhere must be supplemented.

A study of our Conference work will show that no money we have spent has paid any larger returns on the investment than what we have put in Church Extension. Under the leadership of Rev. G. H. Hendry and Mr. D. A. McLaurin, of Concord, a church has been organized at Kannapolis, a lot purchased on which there is a parsonage, and a hut has been built. A new church is being built on Highway No. 10 between Lexington and Spencer, under the direction of Rev. R. S. Troxler. This church is asking admission to our Conference.

Young People's Work

The President of our Board of Young People's Work, and the Committee on Young People's Work will report to this Conference, so I need not speak at length here.

All who know me know that that my whole heart and life go out to this work. I love our young people and delight to know that they love me. I believe in our young people, and know that the future church depends on the way we train and develop the youth which God commits to our care. Our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies, our College and our Young People's Summer Conference are all helpful agencies in this great work.

The home, the school and the church must all combine to save the young people to lives of usefulness here, and to lives of glory up there. My experience in the work leads me to say again: I fully believe we should have an all-time, wide-awake worker in the field for our young people. This worker, in my judgment, should seek to bring about better organizations in many of our churches, and also to canvass for students for High Point College. Lack of a man has kept us from doing this this year.

The Budgets

The first essential in raising the budgets is to believe they should be raised. Many times they are not raised because neither pastor nor people believe fully that it should be done.

An average per member of $2.75 per year, or 23 cents per member per month, would have paid in full the college assessment, the Annual Conference and the General Conference Budgets for this year. No one will argue that that is too much. When we pay our pastors about $110,000 per year we ought not to think of paying less than a combined budget of $76,000 for these benevolences. We need a greater vision of Kingdom service beyond the local church.

The second essential is Every Member Paying. The local church budget and the Conference budgets and College Assessment should be included in one budget, and early in the year the every-member canvass should be made in such a way that every member will feel that they have an obligation to meet. Let us get the habit of expecting every member to pay something. I realize the difficulty here; but this is the end toward which every local church should work. Raising these budgets is just as much a pastor's obligation to his Conference as preaching the Sabbath sermon is, and some of us preach a better sermon by the money we get the people to give for missions than we preach to our congregations.

The third essential is Prayer. A splendid pastor said: "I would sooner think of conducting a revival without prayer than attempting without prayer the task of raising the budgets. Prayer has the same place in each undertaking."

The fourth essential is Information. An honest effort must be made to give full information concerning the interests involved in the budgets. A budget does not appeal to anybody; but the running expense of the Conference, the Superannuate Fund, Church Extension, Home and Foreign Missions and Christian Education when properly presented should readily appeal to any Christian. They will appeal if the needs are rightly told.

A Christian should know that it is as important to pay as to pray. We pray, "Thy Kingdom Come," and we help to bring about the coming of the Kingdom by paying our dollars to Kingdom interests.

Our people are coming more and more to consider the budgets as a part of the blessedness of our church life. May God help us all to come to view the budgets as a privilege and not a burden. And may He help each minister of our Conference to recognize that raising the budgets is perhaps the greatest sermon he will preach during the year.

The every-member canvass, in some form, with the weekly, or at least monthly payments, is the very best plan known to secure church finance. The special days, Easter, Children's Day and Rally Day with the Thank-Offering service days for the Missionary Societies, if properly observed, are a great help in raising the General Conference Budget.

Dr. J. M. Sheridan reports for last Easter: "About 500 churches reported to my office, showing that 2,225 persons united with the Methodist Protestant Church last Easter Sunday morning." "Thirty-two churches of your Conference reported to my office—$983.49 received as Easter offering, and 133 members received into the church. Other churches took offerings as Mr. Staley's books show that your Conference sent in $1,196 as Easter offerings. Only 68 of your 224 churches ordered the Easter programs, leaving 156 churches that did not order."

I suppose that about this same ratio holds with reference to Children's Day and Rally Day. Thus many of our churches neglect one of the best means of helping to raise the General Conference Budget.

Rural Church Life

The rural church work is exceedingly important with us, because we are still at least 70 per cent in the country. This matter was thoroughly and, we believe, helpfully discussed at our last Summer Conference.

Consolidation of rural churches in a few instances would do much good, and this will come in course of time, but it must come slowly. The Committee on "Consolidation of Rural Churches" should be continued that the matter may be studied well and carefully handled.

Church Music

It is encouraging to know that we are making improvement here. We should keep working at this until through us God leads our people, in many places, into a more worshipful attitude in church music, and until jazz is banished from all our churches.

Literature

Our church literature and Sunday school literature is as good as the best, and far better for us. We commend it most heartily to our people.

The Methodist Protestant, The Recorder, The Methodist Protestant Herald, and The Missionary Record are our own church papers. To be posted with reference to all our work we need to read all four of these papers. A campaign for the increased circulation of both The Methodist Protestant and The Methodist Protestant Herald has been made this year. We trust the results have been good. Agents will be here at Conference to receive your subscriptions. Mrs. E. Lester Ballard, of High Point, will gladly take subscriptions for The Missionary Record.

Evangelism

During these five years I have stressed, first, a spirit of loyalty, 2nd, a spirit of evangelism, 3rd, a spirit of liberality. My observation is that the people are growing in the graces of all three. Some splendid meetings have been held this year, and many adults have been added to the church. But the faithful worker in this day knows that the best time to bring people into the church is in childhood.

Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift

Thanks to our Heavenly Father, the Methodist Protestant Church has lived and prospered for a hundred years.

We are meeting in our One Hundredth Annual Session, and during May, 1928, our General Conference meeting in St. Johns Church, Baltimore, Md., will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the denomination with fitting ceremonies. One of the features of that celebration is to be the presetnation of a Gratitude Gift from each Annual Conference, totalling $100,000. The President of your Conference and Mr. J. D. Ross are serving on the Centennial Committee, which is planning for this celebration.

Rev. J. H. Straughn, D. D., of Washington, D. C., is the campaign director, and he will present the matter to this Conference.

The Pastors' Summer Conference, meeting in the College in July, elected a Conference Centennial Committee consisting of the President of the Conference, J. D. Williams, J. E. Pritchard, J. D. Ross, S. S. Coe, and J. M. Cutchin.

This committee has held two meetings and is planning to launch the Gratitude Gift Campaign in this Conference as early as may be practical following the close of our Conference session.

A letter was sent to each pastor by this committee, asking that favorable sentiment be created among our people.

The new President of the Conference elected today will take my place on both the General Conference Committee and the Annual Conference Committee.

This Gratitude Gift carries with it no thought of assessment to either conference or charges; but that we may know something of what is expected, the North Carolina Conference is asked to become responsible for $12,000 of the $100,000 and your Conference Committee will at the proper time suggest goals for each charge.

Recommendations

1. Progress is being made in church finance. Those charges which have a plan, and work this plan, succeed. The Every-Member Canvass, and the Duplex Envelope System is by far the best plan for raising the local benevolences and the budgets. I recommend that the Conference insist that this plan be tried out in the very best possible way, on each charge.

2. February has become to be known as Stewardship Month. I recommend that all pastors be asked to continue to stress the Bible teaching on the Stewardship of Self, Service and Substance during February.

3. I recommend that this Conference heartily endorse the Gratitude Gift Campaign, and that we pledge to our committee our most hearty co-operation in quickly raising the amount allotted to this Conference.

4. I commend to you again "Annual Conference Day." By this we mean, one Sunday set apart during the year to study Annual Conference needs, and to lead our people to pay the Annual Conference Budget in full.

5. I recommend that much be made of the special days for the raising of the General Conference Budget. Our people are doing better each year, on the General Conference Budget; but in many of our churches they have not yet learned to count this an obligation upon the church. Every possible means should be used to teach our people that this budget affords us our opportunity of "Going into the uttermost parts of the earth."

6. We have a few charges whose churches cannot well be grouped so as to pay a pastor a living salary. I have asked the Boundary Committee and the Board of Church Extension to study these charges with a view to helping in some way. This Conference should do something to give relief to pastors who are asked to serve such charges on $800 or less.

7. Mr. C. W. Coghill, of Rocky Mount, N. C., has put into my hands some old papers which are of interest in regard to the early days of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina. I am placing these in the hands of the High Point College authorities for preservation. I recommend to pastors and people having such papers, which will be of special interest in the coming years, that they place such papers in the hands of the President of the High Point College for safe keeping.

My Parting Message

I shall ever be thankful to you and profoundly grateful to God for permitting me to serve in this capacity for these five golden years. The tasks have been heavy and the work taxing, but God has blessed, and my soul has been filled with joy in doing the work. My life and health have been precious in His sight, and I pass out of the work in, perhaps, better physical condition than when I took it up.

It will always be a source of great pleasure for me to look back in fond memories to the delightful associations and fellowship with you during these years, and to remember that your confidence was expressed in me by giving me an increased majority vote each year.

Early during my first year in office I resolved that, by the help of God, I would live the Bible Golden Rule, (Matt. 7:12), in dealing with my brethren in the ministry and with the people on the charges. This I have religiously striven to do. In helping to make appointments, both during Conference and in the interim of Conference, I have weighed well my actions, after much prayer, and in every case have acted upon the very best judgment I had. When my actions brought commendations, as most of them have, I was gratified and happy; and when they brought criticisms I have borne it bravely and have fought back at no one. Frequently the acts which drew criticisms were the very ones which brought the highest commendations.

I pass out of this position today loving every one of you, and knowing and appreciating our people more than ever, and praying God's richest blessings upon my successor. These have been strenuous years of happy service for my Conference and for my Master.

May grace, mercy and peace, from God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, be with you always.

Faithfully yours in Kingdom service,

A. G. Dixon.

OH, WON'T YOU MEET ME THERE?

This life will soon be ended,
A few more doubts and fears,
Then we will be forever
Beyond this vale of tears;
My Saviour has gone over
A mansion to prepare;
So when we cross the river,
Oh, won't you meet me there?

Oh, won't you meet me there?
In that eternal city,
Where all is bright and fair;
I'm going home to glory,
A crown of life to wear;
There's room enough in Heaven,
Oh, won't you meet me there?

There all the walls are jasper,
There all the streets are gold;
But of that city's beauty
The half has not been told.
For you and me, my brother,
Christ once the cross did bear,
That we might see its glory;
Oh, won't you meet me there?

Dear sinner, start for glory,
Where all is fair and bright,
Just bow before the Saviour,
He'll save your soul tonight;
He'll write your name in Heaven
In answer to your prayer;
There friends for you are waiting,
Oh, won't you meet me there?

THE BUILDERS

A builder builded a temple,
He wrought it with grace and skill;
Pillars and groins and arches—
All fashioned to work his will.
And men said as they saw its beauty
"It never shall know decay:
Great is thy skill, O builder
Thy fame shall endure for aye."

A teacher builded a temple
With loving and infinite care,
Planning each arch with patience,
Laying each stone with prayer.
None praised the unceasing efforts,
None knew of the wondrous plan,
But the temple the teacher builded
Was unseen by the eye of man.

Gone is the builder's temple,
Crumpled into the dust;
Low lies each stately pillar,
Food for consuming rust,
But the temple the teacher builded
Will last while the ages roll;
For that beautiful, unseen temple
Was a child's immortal soul.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH FACES FORWARD

By Luther K. Long

In the protestant denominations, generally, there is healthy ferment—and progress.

"Protestant Churches Lose Half-Million Members Annually" is nothing more than a newspaper scare-headline. Church rolls are revised, non-resident or inactive members are dropped or placed on the ineffective list, largely because churches do not want to be assessed for members who do not help. But new names more than make up for those lost, and the total membership of the churches is constantly increasing.

Christian Experience and Progress

The Methodist Episcopal Church has been fortunate in that its emphasis has been on Christian experience and the practical activities of the Christian life, rather than on credal statements and the intricacies of theological speculation. True, it has had a few noted heresy trials, from which it did not emerge with credit, and it now has some fundamentalist disturbers. But in the main it has gone forward through the years, earnest in its soul-saving work, while its members are gathering to themselves an increasing share of the literary, scentific, philosophical, and theological culture of the day. The fact that in the student body of Yale Divinity school there are more Methodists than any other denomination is conclusive evidence of desire for broad and progressive training.

Lay Representation

The struggle for lay-representation in the councils of the Methodist Episcopal Church has been a long and arduous one. Laymen were admitted to membership in the general conference in 1872. Since that time several votes have been taken on the question of admitting them to membership in the annual conferences—the advocates failing each time to register the necessary two-thirds majority. The conviction is strong, however, that laymen have a right to representation in the annual conferences, that their experience and wisdom are needed there, and that they will eventually be admitted. The New York Christian Advocate says editorially that it believes:

"1. That the laymen should have equal repersentation.

"2. That the lay delegates should hold office for not less than four years—if only for their own education.

"3. That the plan should be worked out by General Conference legislation, where it would be capable of amendment at any time by majority vote, and where each group possesses a complete check on the other under the 'vote by orders.'

"4. That the Constitution be amended only by some simple clause like that approved by the General Conference of 1924.

"If this course can be followed successfully:

"(1) The Constitution will be kept free from matter which is likely to require slight amendment, but which can be changed only by the slow and cumbersome process of the referendum and concurrent two-thirds vote;

"(2) The details will be settled in a legislative body in which ministers and laymen have equal voice, and by which the future modifications suggested by experience can be promptly embodied in the law;

"(3) The divisive influence of this question, already too long continued for the good of either group, will cease, and an important step toward harmony and toward the deomocratization of the Church will have been taken."

Status of Bishops

Another important matter occupying the attention of many members of this denomination is the present status of their bishops, and what shall become of them when they are through with their service in that capacity.

I had several extended conversations with the late Dr. William A. Quayle before he became a bishop. Dr. Quayle insisted very strongly that a bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church is nothing more than a general superintendent, and that bishops do not constitute a separate order in the church's ministry. It would have been entirely possible in the course of the evolution which this church has been going through—and every church goes through some course of evolution—for the episcopacy to have developed into something much more than and very different from a general superintendency, and for the consecration of a bishop to have come to be considered the entrance into a separate and higher order of the Christian ministry. Such, however, has not been the course of events—due very largely to two things: 1. The democratic spirit of Methodists. 2. The democratic government of the country in which the church has had its great growth.

It is now proposed to elect bishops for an eight-year term, with the possibility of re-election—the men to return, on retirement, to the regular pastorate. At least three strong conferences in Ohio, Minnesota, and Illinois—including some of the largest cities and strongest Methodist centers in the Middle-West—have voted in favor of the proposition. The matter will be brought before the 1928 general conference at Kansas City. It is not expected that any very definite action will be taken concerning it at that time, though it is hoped by many that the movement will there register decided progress.

Church Union

The Methodist Church has been credited, or charged, with forging ahead and establishing itself in likely and unlikely places regardless of the location and interests of other denominations. However the case may have stood in the past, there does not seem to be much of that disposition at the present time. The denomination is sufficiently intelligent to recognize the Christian character and ability of other denominations and it seems increasingly disposed to join hands with them in every good work. It co-operates with others in temperance work, in Sunday school work, in anti-war activities, in enforcing the requirements of a socially-minded gospel, in the work of the Federal Council of Churches, and in the support of union enterprises in the great foreign missionary undertakings. With the admission of laymen to membership in the annual conference, and with the adjustment of the term of office and future status of its bishops, this great denomination is surely facing in the direction of meeting the requirements for union with other churches. It will have a worthwhile contribution to make to the united church, and it will at the same time be greatly enriched by fuller and freer fellowship with other groups in the great household of faith.

When we pray for forgiveness, let us say, "my temper," or "untruthfulness," or "pride," "my selfishness, my cowardice, indolence, jealousy, revenge, impurity." To recognize our sins, we must look them in the face and call them by their right names, however hard. Honesty in confession calls for definiteness in confession.—Maltbie Babcock.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Soderbom arrived at the home of Mrs. Soderbom's sister Saturday, October 8. In a letter recently received from Rev. Soderbom he writes: "We had a good journey all the way. It is a new experience for me to come to a country like the United States after my time in China."

Rev. Soderbom has been in China for fourteen consecutive years, a number of which have been years of warfare and very unsettled conditions. How good it must seem to get away from war conditions and war scenes into a land of peace and quiet! While Mrs. Soderbom has not been there so long yet most of her time has been spent in the midst of the disturbed conditions that always go with war. So they have come to the United States on a much needed furlough and we all give them a most hearty welcome.

Now they are ready for deputation work in America. They will be glad to come to any Church or to any missionary gathering and bring messages relative to their work. I shall be glad to receive invitations for their services and they will be just as glad and just as willing to respond. Rev. Soderbom is engaged to speak to a Swedish gathering in Louisville, Ky., November 6. Lest you should forget, their address is 1623 Everett Avenue, Louisville, Ky.

I have just received a letter from Horace Starr Williams, fresh from China. I pass his letter on to you. "The same day that Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom left for Japan I also left for a trip to Kalgan. At that time the Consul gave me permission to go for two weeks, and I promised to return. Since returning here (Tientsin) I have seen him twice and though he does not advise me to return he knows that I am going back. He cannot give permission but he does not forbid and will notify me in case of trouble. So in a few more days I will be back in Kalgan settled down for a few months' work.

When I was in Kalgan Mrs. Larson was still away but I presume she is there by this time as she expected to get back before I left. The Girls' School opened while I was there and everything seemed to be going well.

The Tung Shihi Pu (an Executive Committee) is still functioning. I had several meetings with them and all seemed happy. When Rev. Soderbom left I asked them to continue as a Committee which they were pleased to do. This is not yet meant to be permanent but I feel that it is wise to have them continue as long as the Consul does not want Americans to live in the interior. The Tung Shih Pu is doing well. They are all taking more interest in the work than before we left six months ago. Definite plans are being made for the Kalgan Church which, in one year from now, ought to put the Church in shape to be self-supporting.

When I return we will take up the country work in earnest, I will be in the field as much as seems wise. The Chinese co-workers seem to be anxious to do more for the Master. Everything is quiet now in our territory and we have an excellent opportunity.

Above all we need a revival among our workers. They are all anxious to work but the tendency is to work in their own strength instead of His. Pray for us. We need prayer more than anything. There is no other hope for our work. I hope you will lay the emphasis upon "pray-ers" instead of money givers as being needed for our work. All money needed will be available if we learn to pray. If people pray for us God will lay upon their hearts to give for us."

The above letter was written September 24. On October 3, the press informed us that Kalgan was captured by the Southern army. On October 19, the press again informed us that Kalgan was retaken by the Northern army. As never before, this section of China is in the throes of war. Undoubtedly our entire missionary program is checked for the time being in China. Certainly Horace and the workers need our prayers. Let us not forget to pray.

EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS

Western Maryland College shows another gain in enrollment. This gain will doubtless be larger before the close of the school year.

President A. N. Ward is greatly improved in health and giving special attention to collecting the last of the pledges made toward the Endowment Fund of $375,000 secured two years ago. All this must be paid by February 1st if the college is to secure the $125,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation. The conditions made by the state have been practically met.

The Seminary has opened under very favorable circumstances. Besides a fine group of new students a number have entered for graduate work. China and Japan are this year represented in the student body. Rev. Fred Holloway has taken his place on a part-time basis, as a member of the faculty and is giving splendid satisfaction. Dr. Elderdice returned from Europe the first of September greatly benefitted by his trip. He is as busy as ever, although the additional teacher, together with the teaching and office work of Miss Elderdice, has greatly relieved the strain.

Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas, will show a substantial increase in the enrollment. This increase is almost entirely in the college department.

Dean J. G. Willis considered the student body last year of as fine quality as the college had ever had, but he declares the group this year is even better. Since they have discontinued inter-collegiate athletics there is no inducement for young people to come other than for serious educational work under wholesome conditions.

Mrs. G. O. McMillan and Miss Lahoma Porter are the new members of the Westminster College faculty. Mrs. McMillan heads the department of Education and Miss Porter the department of English. Their work for the master's degree was done in the University of Oklahoma.

The remarkable increase in the enrollment at High Point is encouraging to all interested and justifies anew the establishment of the college and especially its location in that part of the state. As in most of our schools, however, the financial situation is acute and could easily become fatal. If the plans to care for the present indebtedness could be carried out it would remove the most serious obstacle to raising the endowment which is an almost immediate necessity.

At the Greensboro General Conference representatives of the Colorado-Texas (Colored) Conference made an earnest public plea for funds for a school for their people. From pledges made at the time about $2,000 was secured and property in Lockhart, Texas, purchased. This was later sold and twenty-four lots secured in San Antonio, Texas. This plot of ground seems to be well located. It is now free from debt to the great relief and joy of our colored people. San Antonio is the largest city in Texas and an ideal place for a school such as that contemplated for our colored people.

Visits to several of our churches on the occasion of their Rally Day services were a real inspiration. The value of the day is recognized more generally than ever and the faithful efforts of our pastors to make the service count not only for the local church, but in behalf of the educational interests of the denomination are apparent. In some instances the offerings are as high as ten times larger than a year ago. And the pastors have made a real effort to reach the quota suggested by the Board.

The substantial increase in the number of orders for Rally Day material is very gratifying. It means that a larger number of our churches and Sunday schools are observing the day and are thus supporting the work being done by the Board of Education. What the offerings will amount to will not be known for several months. Promptness in sending the offerings to the Conference Treasurer will help to relieve our suspense! We have some supplies still on hand and will be glad to furnish them on request. We would appreciate a prompt response as a few orders is all we can fill.

The second Sunday in December has become established in the program of the Board of Education as "Men for the Ministry Sunday." It is to be hoped that our pastors will begin as soon as possible to plan and advertise this service. It is certain that our people must make this matter a subject of most earnest prayer. Many of our congregations have never sent a single young man from their community into the Gospel ministry. And yet they expect someone to furnish them with a pastor from somewhere. Instead of seventy young men studying for this great work we should have at least one hundred.

The visits to the sessions of our annual conferences impress upon us more than ever the urgent need of an increasing number of trained, as well as consecrated men. It is impossible to take advantage of splendid openings for new churches because there is no one qualified to man the work. We were recently pointed out a church in a rapidly growing city which has been unable to take advantage of a very fortunate situation because of their inability to secure a pastor who could take his place with the other pastors of the community. Nor is this an isolated case. The Board of Home Missions has been deluged for years with similar calls, but they have the resources neither in men nor money. Hence, the importance of making the second Sunday in December a day of heart-searching and prayer.

Frank W. Stephenson, Exec. Sec'y,
Board of Education.

THE GRATITUDE GIFT—A PASTOR SPEAKS

It so happens that each of the two churches that I have served as pastor was organized in the very beginning of our denominational life. On the cornerstone of each of the church buildings the date of organization is shown to be 1830. Thus I have been related at least indirectly to the whole century of our church history. Something of the spirit of these early fathers is still present in each of these local churches. In them are men and women who have felt the power of the personality of such men as Brown and Shinn and Burns and Stockton and others who might be named.

Because of this, as well as other things, I feel the significance of this proposed Gratitude Gift. These men and the service they rendered and the principles they maintained should and must inspire in the hearts of all our members a deep sense of appreciation and gratitude.

Then there are certain real and genuine things that our church has done for each of us. It may be that another denomination might have served us as well, but the fact remains that these things of abiding worth were contributed to our lives by the church that claims our membership and is worthy of our devotion. Our church has brought to each of us the challenge of the life and the mind of Jesus and thus awakened within us all that is noblest and best. It has nourished within us the Christian spirit. It has made possible to us many inspiring and noble friendships. It must be true of most of us that the finest associations of our lives have been afforded us by our church. Our lives have been fashioned by these associations even more than we know. Our church has related us to the great movements of the Kingdom of God. Everyone who loses himself in the program of the church becomes a part of the movements of world significance. He lives a life that counts. He is rescued from obscurity. He is afforded an opportunity to serve. These facts recognized should call from each of us an expression of gratitude.

This is one thing, this Gratitude Gift—which the membership of the Methodist Protestant Church dare not permit to fail. One hundred thousand dollars has been suggested, $1,000 for each year of our denominational history, and $100,000 must be forthcoming. Failure in this would be the saddest evidence possible of the lack of cohesion and common purpose in the fellowship of our church. Its success will be an evidence not only of our gratitude for 100 years of noble history, but an evidence as well of unity and vitality that will enable us to face the future with something of the same spirit that was in the hearts of our fathers.

The pastors of our church, the key men to all enterprises of the Kingdom, will do well to awaken their people to a more genuine appreciation of the past and to a definite expression of gratitude for their church which has served each generation well for a period of 100 years.

George H. Miller.

OUR CHRISTMAS GIFTS FOR INDIA

Christmas will soon be here. The boys, teachers and laborers in our Boys' Compound in India will be expecting their customary Christmas gifts of one or two dollars. The appeal of Rev. Mr. Minnis was for $50 or $60. Thus far I have received $16. There is time yet for you to send in your gift but the money must be sent to India the fore part of November to reach them in time for Christmas.

This is not a large Christmas gift but there will be great disappointment among this native group if they do not receive it. How many more will send their contributions, at once, and thus help to gladden the hearts of the native workers and boys in India at this happy season of the year? Please send all gifts to S. W. Rosenberger, Station B. Box 96, Columbus, Ohio.

ON THE MAP

Some years ago, in the Green Mountain State, I hired a mild-mannered horse and modest-looking buggy, and went questing a certain hill on which my father was converted. I think I half expected to find a dizzy height, to match the altitude of his experience. What I found was a modest elevation over which a lad could almost throw a stone. And the shelter in which my father took refuge from the sudden squall, while God passed by, had disappeared. And yet—and yet—many will understand me when I affirm that that inconspicuous and unnamed hill, in the Green Mountain State, stands taller, for me, than Mount McKinley. My father put it on the map for me and for all others who loved him. Thus Jesus did with Mount Olivet. But for Him, and the chapters of His life written there, you never would have heard of it. Its name is a love-name, rather than a geographic compliment. I do not find it mentioned among the famous heights of the Old Testament—Nebo, Sinai, Horeb and the rest. One man put this hill on the map for us, as "Bobby" Burns gave us Ayrshire, and Shakespeare gave us Stratford, and Paul gave us Tarsus. You cannot write the story of His life and omit the little eminence, a few hundred feet high, and "a Sabbath days' journey from Jerusalem."—George Clarke Peck.

—Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis, Dhulia, India, announce the birth of Bettie Jean, September 13, 1927. Weight seven pounds. This announcement was just recently received by Rev. and Mrs. S. W. Rosenberger. Congratulations are in order.

OUR STORY PAGE

ONLY KNOTS!

Everybody had told Jamie he was stupid until he began to think it might be so. His parents were dead and he lived with Uncle Peter in the city. Uncle Peter sent him to school to Miss Nellie.

One day Miss Nellie told her boys she was going to the seashore, to Herrick Island, for her vacation, but that she did not like to go alone; it was much pleasanter to have some one for company, to run along the beach and find shells, to pull flowers on the marshes and go out sailing, or for a dip in the sea. She had no brother, so she wanted one of the boys to go with her, and this was how she would decide. Each boy should bring a collection of something selected by himself, either from his own house, or the stores or from what might be given him by friends—whatever he chose, but it must consist of a collection of articles all belonging to one class, and every boy should inscribe his particular collection, tell where the articles were made or grown and their use. Three weeks would be allowed them to make ready, and then, on a Friday afternoon, a committee formed of the trustees and relatives and friends of the boys should decide what collection was best and who was entitled to the prize—a two week's stay at Herrick Island.

"What is the ocean like? I never saw it; did you?" asked Jamie of his school-fellows at luncheon time.

"Course! lots of times!" responded Tommy Waddell, grandly. "It's something like a kettle of boiling suds, only a deal bigger, you know."

"Does it smell like that?" Jamie asked, doubtfully.

"No; it smells salty, 'cause there's codfish in it, I suppose."

"It sounds like a buzz saw when it's going," said Ned Dolan, with an air of wisdom, "and it's always going!"

Jamie knew all about buzz saws. Uncle Dan had one in his mill out in the country.

The boys were wild with plans; all talked at once; and each, it would seem, had already begun to make a collection of one thing or another, every one but Jamie—he had not a little store of treasures, not a solitary aticle of value.

"Uncle Peter wouldn't give me anything!" he thought, disconsolately. "He's got enough to do to keep me. Uncle Dan wouldn't, either. I wish I could find something, but I don't believe it's any use trying."

He stared hard at his desk, and, though he tried to keep them back, big tears filled his eyes. He shook them off when no one was looking, and then his gaze centered in a funny round knot in the top of his desk. He had seen it many a time before. Now, as he stared and stared at the little brown spot, a big thought was growing in his mind, it grew so big that it shone right through his eyes and laughed over his lips, and his whole face lighted up.

Miss Nellie, happening to glance in his direction at that moment, wondered she had never noticed before what a pretty, bright-looking boy he was. She did not know that it was the big thought that had so transformed shy, stupid Jamie.

"Let's all tell what we're going to bring," said Bobby Jones, the next day, as the boys sat in a row on the doorstep at recess.

"Corals," responded Ned Dolan, with sparkling eyes. "They're uncommon, and we've got a lot. Grandfather brought 'em to mother one time when he came from India—or somewhere. There are combs and neckchains and lockets and bracelets and oh, heaps of things. I'm studying 'em up."

The others looked discouraged —all but Jamie; corals were uncommon.

"Well, I'm picking up candies," said Tommy Waddell, recovering somewhat. "You've no idea what a lot of different kinds there are—balls, guns, lozenges, mints, kisses, mottoes, sticks—more than I can begin to tell. And it's easy to describe 'em. Made of sugar, came from the confectioner's, feel sticky and taste sweet."

"My, don't they!" his comrades agreed, smacking their lips.

"I'm going to choose pins," said Bobby Jones. "It takes seven men to finish one and put on its head. Sister said so. I'm going to have all kinds—black heads, white heads, brass heads, gold tops, some garnets and the finest pearl you ever saw. They'll be awfully pretty. What are you going to have, Jamie?"

The boys nudged each other and exchanged commiserating glances. They knew very well there was nothing in Uncle Peter's house that he could bring and he never had any money to buy anything with.

But Jamie only smiled as he replied quietly, "Knots."

This response was hailed with considerable merriment by his schoolfellows. "Hard knots, slip knots or bow knots?" asked one. Jamie only laughed with them, saying, "Just wait and see."

At last the fateful day arrived. The corals were lovely, everybody said so. The pieces were laid out on pale blue velvet. "They cost hundreds of dollars, grandfather said," announced their exhibiter proudly.

The candies were sweet, indeed. "It took every cent I have saved this quarter to buy them, besides what was given to me," Tommy informed his friends. "I made the little shelves to put 'em on myself," he added.

To Bobby Jones' friends there was nothing so nice as pins; and no one would have thought pins would display so well. Bobby had stuck delicate little pink ones next to the blues, the lemon colored beside the greens, lovely pears, filigree silver and cut steel contrasted with gold, garnets and jets; the effect was beautiful.

Johnny Towne had a fine assortment of fans; Ben Morris had buttons; Charlie Williams, soap in a variety of shapes displayed in an attractive box, and Silas Casey had sponges of all kinds and sizes, arranged on a pink cotton-flannel scarf, and there were many others.

Jamie's turn came at last. He had knots—nothing else. But such knots. He had coaxed Uncle Dan to let him come over to the mill one Saturday, and no miser picking solid nuggets from a gold mine could have been happier than the boy looking among the chips and saw logs for his precious knots. If you don't believe knots are pretty go to a saw-mill some day yourself and see what exquisite things you can find. The shadings and streakings are so blended that no one color shows distinctly, but all are merged together in a hazy beauty that would make an artist fling down his brush in despair.

Jamie had shown himself to have an eye to effect, too. At his suggestion Uncle Dan permitted one of the men to make each knot the center of a little square block. Then the boy had joined each block firmly to its mate, and so carefully that it was hard to tell where the joining was, excepting for the difference in color. It took two weeks, nights and mornings, to finish the whole to his satisfaction, but the result was the neatest and oddest piece of mosaic work imaginable. There were red knots and yellow knots, brown knots and black knots, smooth knots and twisted knots, knots with bark on and knots with bark off, knots with tracings like spider-webs, like animals, like human faces, like forests and mountains, windmills and villages, and one that was almost exactly like Niagara Falls; there was a little frosty knot that looked like a country church in winter surrounded by bare-limbed trees but the one he liked best of all was marked in a light, towering shape, that Miss Nellie had told him was remarkably good representation of the lighthouse at Herrick Island.

The visitors were loud in their expressions of approval of everything. "Such an excellent idea of the teacher!" they said, and all agreed that the boys had shown wonderful taste in the arrangement of their displays. Finally the committee sat down and conferred in low tones, the youthful exhibitors remaining standing.

In the silence that followed Miss Nellie announced, with heightened color in her cheeks: "We will now listen to the committee's report."

Then there was a silence. In his suspense, poor Jamie imagined he heard buzz saws everywhere. He was so wrought up that he started at the scraping of a chair behind him as one of the trustees arose, and wheeled around so suddenly that he bumped up against that gentleman.

"Oh, please, I didn't mean—I mean—I'm sorry!" stammered Jamie.

"Never mind, we can excuse you under the circumstances," responded the trustee. "You are the boy who collected the knots, aren't you? Well, you've won the prize!"

There was a little hush. The other boys stared at each other. Jamie had to catch his breath to save it from slipping away. Had he really won? He looked appealingly into the trustee's eyes. "A good face that boy has," thought the man. But he noted that Jamie's shoes were patched, that his shabby suit was a size too small, that his cheeks were thin and pale, and he was glad of the decision that would give him an outing evidently much needed. "But I'll see that the little chap has some decent clothes," he promised himself. And he kept his promise.—The Methodist Recorder.

THE MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

"Let me see," said Miss Eleanor Banks, on the first afternoon of her visit to her aunt at Farmington village, "didn't you write to me last winter your minister had resigned?"

"I guess, perhaps, I did," was the reply, in a somewhat absent-minded tone.

"It seems to me that I got the impression from your letter that the resignation did not cause universal regret," suggested the niece, after waiting a moment for her aunt to enlarge upon the theme.

"Maybe you did," said the old lady, who was apparently absorbed in learning how hard it may be for a thread to pass through the eye of a needle.

Presently she added, with the manner of one who, after all, is not quite willing to let the subject drop: "There were some of the people who thought that Mr. Pease had kind of lost his usefulness."

"He had been here a long time, hadn't he?" asked her niece.

"Yes, that was just it. Mr. Pease had been here going on thirty years: and as you might say, we'd got him learned by heart. We always knew what he was going to say next, and it's no use denying that he was getting to be rather dry in the pulpit. I didn't mind it so much myself, but your Uncle Andrew did, and that was worse. The preaching I could stand, but what with that of a Sunday, and Andrew's talking on about it all the rest of the week, I was beginning to get about beat out myself.

"Every now and then somebody would come around and want him to speak to the minister about resigning. Of course, if anything of consequence is to be done in the parish, it is always your Uncle Andrew that has to go ahead with it. They would argue that Mr. Pease was comfortably off, and his wife had property besides, and so it would be no hardship for him to step aside.

"But Andrew couldn't make up his mind to do it, so things went along, with the society fast running to seed, when all of a sudden, and without any help from anybody, the minister did resign.

"Well, I presume a good many wished to rejoice, but I guess nobody was quite so tickled as Andrew. For a few days it seemed as if he could not do enough to show how kind and grateful he was.

"He did the papering and painting that I had been at him about for two years, and he bought a new parlor carpet that I hadn't so much as asked for. Then he took it into his head that he must get up a farewell reception to the minister.

"Well, all the folks seemed to fall in with that idea, and if you'll believe me, they raised a hundred dollars in gold for a parting gift.

"Of course there was a general invitation to the reception, and we had to hold it in the town hall. Well, after we had all shaken hands with the minister and his wife, Andrew came up front and made the presentation speech.

"I do wish you could have heard him! Of course your uncle is gifted with speech, but I guess he surprised himself that night. Yet he didn't say anything but the truth. Mr. Pease had been a faithful minister—one that had visited the widow and fatherless in their affliction, and been helpful in sickness.

"But it was wonderful the way your Uncle Andrew worked all those good things Mr. Pease had done into his speech. It took hold of us more and more as he went along, until by the time he got through, and handed over the hundred dollars in gold to the minister, about everybody in the hall was having a good hard cry.

"As for Mr. Pease, he could hardly speak at first. But when he found his voice I guess what he said made full as much impression as Andrew's talk.

"He said that he had been simply amazed at the feeling that had been manifested, and it led him to think that perhaps he had been hasty in the step he had taken. Perhaps it was his duty, after all to spend the rest of his days as the pastor of his dear flock. He went on in that way for awhile, and finally he asked all those who desired him to withdraw his resignation to rise.

"Well, there were some queer looks went over a good many faces, but in a minute all those that hadn't been standing before got up from their seats.

"There were to have been other exercises after the presentation. Adelaide Tinkham had written a poem appropriate to the occasion as she had expected it to be, but she slipped around to Andrew and told him not to call on her.

"And the choir had been rehearsing a very handsome song for a week, but it was all about parting, and they would not sing it. When they were called on they whispered together for awhile, and then announced that they would sing 'Blest Be the Tie That Binds,' and they requested all present to join.

"Then we partook of our refreshments, and the reception broke up."

"So you still have the same minister," said Eleanor, with a smile.

"Why, yes, in one sense we do. But, really, Mr. Pease has seemed like a new man ever since. It's wonderful how that reception seemed to freshen him up. He preaches a new sermon almost every Sunday, and the whole parish seems to be alive again. As for your Uncle Andrew, you'd think to hear him talk there was nobody like Mr. Pease. You see, he's bound to stand by that presentation speech. So in one sense, I suppose we've got our change, after all."—Youth's Companion.

TEHUACANA AND THE COLLEGE

Many people have little appreciation of the value of a college to their community. They can understand its financial benefits, what it means in dollars and cents in the way of increased business, but other influences for good make little impression. This is not true of Tehuacana, Texas. During the nearly twenty-five years that the Methodist Protestant Church has had charge of Westminster College the immediate community has been one of the most loyal devoted supporters. They have made unusual sacrifices for its support. This has not been of a spasmodic or intermittent character but constant. During the last twelve months Tehuacana people, by individuals, on the part of classes, societies and the church, have given over $2000 to the college. In the effort to secure five hundred people who will give at least ten dollars a year for five years they have been the first and most generous to respond.

Needless to say the college would have failed long ago had it not been for this wonderfully loyal and generous support. It is an evidence of a high appreciation of the value of the college to the community, not alone from the standpoint of financial benefit but from the standpoint of education and culture. Every family coming into touch with Westminster College has felt its good influences.

Tehuacana is notable for another thing and that is its stalwart Christian character. The great majority of the people are identified with some church and they take their religion and their church seriously. That no doubt explains in some measure their cordial support of the college. If the rest of the Methodist Protestant Church would support our educational program with the same earnestness the future of our schools would be crowded with much greater promise. They are all doing splendid work even under difficult circumstances, but they could and would do better. FRANK W. STEPHENSON.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Canoy

Mary Ellen Canoy, wife of Robey Canoy, died October 7th, 1927 at the age of 29 years, one month and twenty-four days. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hinshaw, of New Salem Village. The father and mother, husband and infant son, two sisters and five brothers, immediately survive.

Mrs. Canoy professed faith in Christ some time ago and we believe she was faithful to the end. When conscious of approaching death she left the testimony that she was ready to go.

The final service was conducted by the writer from New Salem church Sunday afternoon. A large congregation assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to one who was loved and held in high esteem by all.

WM. H. NEESE.

Jones

On Saturday, October 8, 1927, an angel bore little Elouise Almelta Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Jones, to that heavenly home.

She was only four months, eighteen days old. Her little body was brought to Franklinville and laid to rest beneath a mound of flowers. Rev. J. W. Hoyle conducted the funeral services.

God keep and comfort the dear family at this time.

Eloise, you have left us
And your bright face we miss,
But our Father said,
"Of such my Kingdom is."

God took her home to heaven,
To be with the angel band,
Sometime we hope to meet her,
Then and there, we'll understand.

Weep not for Eloise, Father and Mother,
As you look upon her little bed.
You too must meet her in heaven,
When she welcomes you there.

So do your best and faithful be,
Look to God and trust Him,
Some day, some where, your heartache's will cease,
And your tears forever be dried.

Her Aunt, MRS. JAMES ALLRED.

Taylor

Little Edith Taylor departed this life on Friday evening, September 30, in the Hospital at Rocky Mount. Edith was nine years old in July and was a bright, promising little girl. She was loved by her little school mates and play-mates and she will be greatly missed both in school and Sunday school, as well as in the home. She was taken with appendicitis and was carried to the Hospital and underwent an operation and all was done that could possibly be done for her, but God in his wise providence saw best to take her to the mansions above, to be with her friends and relatives who have gone on before.

Her father preceded her to the grave about six years ago. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. J. C. Taylor, of Ringwood, N. C., and three sisters: Mrs. H. G. Lewis of Heathville, N. C., Mrs. C. C. Viverett of Wilson, N. C., Miss Lessie May Taylor, of Ringwood, N. C., and five brothers: Jno L. Taylor of Winston-Salem, N. C., E. K. Taylor of Whitakers, N. C., Raymond, Alton, and J. D. Taylor, of Ringwood, N. C.

The funeral services were conducted in Union Church by the writer in the presence of a large crowd of relatives, friends and schoolmates, after which the body was laid to rest in the church cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers.

May God's richest blessings rest upon the friends and relatives and especially the family. C. L. SPENCER.

In Memory of Ralph Fields Kirkman

Often I dream of the place of delight,
Jesus went on to prepare,
Yearningly sigh for its mansions so bright,
Knowing little Ralph is up there.

Beautiful city of pearl and of gold,
Set round with jewels so rare,
All of my heart's richest treasures you hold
Since dear little Ralph is up there.

Daily I'm striving to walk with my Lord,
Guarding my conduct with care,
I would be worthy of heaven's reward
Knowing little Ralph is up there.

Trying to keep my life spotless and white
That stainless robes I may wear,
Entering freely, as one who was right,
Since dear little Ralph is up there.

O city of infinite beauty,
Your glory and bliss I would share;
But strongest of all is this longing,
I want to meet little Ralph up there.

A Tribute of Love

It is with hearts full of sadness that we, the members of the Mizpah Philathea class, record the death of one of our most consecrated and faithful members, Mrs. John W. Jones.

In her death we have lost a true friend, one who was faithful in all interests of her church. Whereas, her death has brought sorrow to her family and to the church.

Therefore be it resolved:

First, That we bow in humble submission to His divine will.

Second, That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to the Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Philathea class, a copy be sent to the Reidsville Review and M. P. Herald for publication.

Miss Ruth Hill,
Mrs. George Harrison,
Mrs. W. E. Jones,
Committee.

—Agricultural exports for the year are the largest since 1922. Those of grains, and of dried apples, prunes and raisins are largely responsible for the total. Exports of dairy products, cattle and meat are the lowest since 1914.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE MEMBERS OF YARBOROUGH'S CHAPEL

Whereas our conference year is closing and as we may not be able to secure the return of our pastor and family, who have so endeared themselves to us during their short stay, and as we, the members of Yarborough's Chapel Church, appreciate the courageous, efficient and fearless stand Brother Cowan has taken toward the upbuilding of our church and community:—

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that we, the members of Yarborough's Chapel Church, assembled do show by these resoluutions our appreciation of Brother Cowan and his co-worker, Mrs. Cowan.

Second, that, if for any reason, Brother and Mrs. Cowan are not returned to us, we bid them God-speed and heartily recommend them to any charge to which they may go, feeling sure that they will intelligently stand for the right as God gives them to see it and our best wishes follow them.

Third, that we appreciate and commend Brother Cowan for the efficient and business-like methods he has assumed in dealing with the affairs of our church. Through his courage, faithfulness and leadership the foundation has been laid whereby our church may grow and prosper as never before.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be given Brother Cowan; another spread upon the record of our church, and another be sent our church paper.

Henderson.—Our pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter, preached his last sermon of this conference year last night. A large congregation was present and enjoyed the splendid sermon preached. The principal thought of this sermon was the power of prayer. He urged the people to pray for him and for the coming conference.

On Monday afternoon, October 19th, the missionary societies held their meeting at the home of Mrs. J. M. Bowling, with Miss Katie Cook assistant hostess. Mrs. George B. Harris conducted the devotionals, using the "Jewel Box," followed by prayer by Rev. L. W. Gerringer. Following the Roll Call, reading of the minutes and collection of dues, came the report from the "Sun Shine" Circle given by Miss Katherine Hight. Mrs. A. O. Young had charge of the stewardship discussion, and read two very interesting readings from the October Record. Mrs. R. A. Hunter gave the "Foreword and Introduction," of the new Study Book, "A Straight-Way Toward Tomorrow." A very encouraging and helpful talk was then enjoyed, from L. W. Gerringer. The meeting was closed by prayer, offered by Rev. R. A. Hunter. The hostesses then served delightful refreshments.

The Young Ladies' League met with Mrs. H. A. Jordan, last Tuesday night, October 24th. The president, Mrs. Annie Mae McIntosh, called the meeting to order. Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. John Renn. The calling of the roll, reading of the minutes, and Treasurer's report was followed by the reports of various committees. A very important feature of the business session was the motion to divide the society into two circles, a means by which to help raise the necessary money for our missionary budget. The date for the annual bazaar was set and articles collected for same. At the conclusion of the business session the hostess served dainty refreshments carrying out the Hallowe'en idea.

The Philathea class enjoyed a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. Clyde L. Finch on Thursday night, October 27th. The vice-president, Miss Gertha Trodgen, presiding. Mrs. R. A. Hunter conducted the devotionals followed by prayer. A very enthusiastic business session was then held and following the various reports, it was voted by the class to send $40.00 to the Children's Home. An annual report from the treasurer showed the amount of $169.25 collected and disbursed during the year. The business session was closed by repeating the class platform. The guests were then invited into the dining room to seek their fortunes. From a miniature well attractively arranged on the dining table surrounded by jack-o-lanterns and autumn leaves, the Philathea's drew their fortunes, the reading of which caused much merriment. The Hallowe'en idea was carried out in the serving of refreshments. The hostess was assisted by Mesdames C. M. Hight, T. E. Beckham, E. O. Faulkner, and Misses Elizabeth Fox, and Eunice Harris, associate hostesses.

The fourth quarterly conference and annual church business meeting was held at the church Wednesday evening, October 26th. Very encouraging reports were heard both from the pastor and the presidents of the church organizations. The financial obligations for the year will be met in full. A number of additions have been made to the church membership.

It was unanimously voted by the conference for the return of the pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter, and a raise of $500.00 in his salary.

The election of trustees, stewards, and ushers for the following year was held. The lay delegate to the Annual Conference was also elected, Mr. J. B. Hicks.

May God bless all who attend the Annual Conference at Asheboro, next week and direct all that is done there for the advancement of His kingdom. REPORTER.

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.—Mr. Spencer has been giving us some good sermons along, and congregations have been pretty good. We were sorry to miss one or two night appointments, on account of services at other places.

The family at the parsonage are entertaining their annual visitor, Flu— this time, however, one at a time. Mr. Spencer has so far, not succumbed but reports this morning he thinks he has "the walking kind."

Mr. Bethea was in this section recently and kindly gave us an opportunity to hear about his travels abroad. He made an address in the church here to quite a large audience, many from a distance. The talk was very interesting, delivered in his usual humorous and entertaining manner. We should like very much to hear more.

Last quarterly conference left delegate uninstructed. Mrs. W. R. Neville, of this church, will represent the circuit. Finances are somewhat behind, but a good deal has been paid in since the last quarterly conference, and we understand a "drive" is being made at several churches to collect the balance due. Most of pastor's salary has been paid, and we hope he can go to conference with "a clear sheet." REPORTER.

New Hope, Why Not Circuit.—Our pastor preached for us the fourth Sunday afternoon, also the fifth Sunday night, which will be his last time for this conference year. The fourth quarterly conference met at Fair Grove and unanimously voted for Brother Garner's return. Brother Garner has many friends on this circuit who will welcome him back another year.

We are having a splendid Sunday school at New Hope now. We have elected new officers or rather re-elected most of the old ones.

The Ladies' Aid Society have raised the money and are planning to have the church painted inside at an early date. We are having prayer meeting every Saturday night.

Several of our members are planning to attend our Annual Conference at Asheboro some this week. REPORTER.

Flat Rock, Vance Charge.—Our meeting which started the second Sunday in October, continued until Wednesday of the second week. Making a total of ten days. Brother J. L. Nichols of Crisfield, Md., was our pulpit help. He gave us some very fine sermons. We found him to be a man of great social ability; he was a good mixer and that counts a lot with a preacher. We enjoyed his sermons and his companionship in our homes. Five were added to the church.

We are planning to add Sunday school rooms to our church. Lumber has been hauled to church and work will commence on Tuesday of next week. Our pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, is overseeing the work. We are sorry that conference will interfere with the work, but hope conference will send him back to us. He is such a live wire, he is not satisfied unless he is pushing some new idea to fulfillment. Nothing stands still or stagnates when he is on the scene. I guess we are a selfish lot. But our pastor suits us to the dot.

Wishing the Herald and its patrons every success, I am as ever, a well wisher.
REPORTER.

High Point.—At the Sunday morning service the election of church officials for the coming year was held. The committee appointed for the purpose, through its chairman, Mr. Vernon W. Idol, made its report, which was voted on and elected by the congregation. The Board of Trustees, Class-leaders, Board of Stewards, Music Committee, House Committee, Church Treasurer, Reporter, etc., a list of whom would be too long for this space, were elected. The Sunday school superintendent was not selected at this time, but the place will be filled later. We feel that the church has competent officers, who will fulfill their duty well and in a very capable manner. Rev. P. E. Lindley then delivered an enthusiastic and inspiring sermon on "Our Church Home," basing his message on Psalm 122:1, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." Mr. Lindley compared the church to a family home, and as Edgar Guest says, "It takes a heap of livin' in a house to make a home," so it takes regular attendance at church to makes us feel at home there. He says he knows personally every member who comes to service every Sunday morning, but many members he does not recognize when he meets them on the street. He says that our congregation is not half as appreciative of our beautiful house of worship as it should be. He encouraged each one to feel that he is an important part of this great plant, and has a great work to accomplish. One member is just as useful as another, be he minister, steward, member of the choir, trustee, organist, or treasurer. The ushers bear a very important duty in each service, for they greet the stranger who comes to our door, and make him welcome at our services. Mr. Lindley says that the First church, with its splendid plant, its members of talent and consecration, its wonderful organ, and all the various organizations with efficient leaders, is an untold power for righteousness in our city, and has a future of glorious possibilities. After the sermon, ten persons were received into membership, five being children from the Junior church, who were baptized by Rev. E. L. Ballard, two persons united on confession of faith, and three by certificate. This brings the total of those who have united since last November 1st to 66. At this service, the choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "Christian, the Morn Breaks," and Mrs. J. Hobart Allred sang a lovely solo, "Art Thou Weary?" Prof. Dan W. Smith played the Pipe Organ in his usual charming manner. At the evening service Rev. E. L. Ballard brought an inspiring message on "Taking Stock."

On Monday afternoon the Mission Study Class enjoyed an unusual treat when the Study Book of the Foreign Society, "A Straight Way Toward Tomorrow," was presented by Mrs. R. M. Andrews. She gave a most comprehensive and interesting resume of the six chapters of this delightful book, which was written by Mrs. Mary S. Platt, who has been a missionary to Persia. The keynote of this book is to make the world safer and saner for the future generation. The first chapter, "A Safe Way for the Children," with sub-division of Child Welfare tells of the destructive forces, War, Infant Mortality, Child Labor, etc., and constructive forces, Orphanages and Homes, Red Cross, Christian Education, etc. The second chapter is "The Starting Point," which deals with the Christian home; chapter three, "The Broader Outlook," deals with Education, Books and Reading. The fourth chapter, "The Compass," treats of Christian Education through Kindergartens, Sunday schools, and many others. Chapter five, "Companions of the Way," discusses Social Progress, and the last chapter, "Unto the Perfect Day," tells of World-wide Friendship, which will be the great influence to end all war and bring "peace on earth, good-will to men." This is the very best and most interesting study book that we have ever had, and Mrs. Andrews presented it in a most pleasing and charming manner. The Study Course is greatly indebted to her for this clear, concise presentation. Mrs. J. H. Allred brought the meeting to a close.

All those present, 28 in number were invited downstairs to the Assembly room, where delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Geo. T. Penny, assisted by Mrs. S. S. Coe and her beautiful little daughter, Mary Anderson, in Hallowe'en costume and Miss Elizabeth Welch. A delightful social hour followed.

We were delighted to see Capt. A. M. Rankin at church Sunday morning after an absence of six weeks; he is looking well, and we rejoice to know that he is on the road to recovery from his recent severe illness.

A number of First church people are planning to attend Conference at Asheboro for a whole or part of the time.

Union Grove, Forsyth Circuit.—We are glad to say that we are still alive. Our Sunday school is doing very well, but could be lots better and we are hoping and praying that it will soon be better attended. Our good pastor, Rev. Geo. L. Curry, came the third Sunday in September and filled his regular appointment and preached a splendid sermon to us after which he administered the Lord's Supper of which nearly all present partook.

We have elected officers for the coming year. Mr. V. A. Berrier was elected superintendent for our Sunday school. We all wish him great success in this year's Sunday school work. As our pastors are about to go to Conference we are praying that this next year will be the greatest year in the work of the Lord for them and every one else.

BERTHA MOCK, Reporter.

Liberty.—Last Sunday we had a good attendance for Sunday school. At that time Rev. Mr. Lloyd of Asheboro made a very interesting and instructive talk.

At the eleven o'clock hour we held our Rally Day service. The program, in charge of Mrs. J. W. Curtis, Mrs. S. M. Smith, Misses Ruth Crowson and Helen L. Hanner, was well rendered. The three smaller classes of the Sunday school took part in the program.

At the fourth quarterly conference, held Sunday afternoon, written reports were made. We were all glad to learn that all claims have been paid in full. A delegation from Siler City requested that their church be made a mission station. Mr. L. L. Wren expressed the sentiment of the entire membership when he said that our churches have made more progress in the past two years than they have ever made before. This speaks well for us because during that time our pastor has been away at school for over half the time. At the close of the meeting a rising vote of thanks was given to our pastor. Mr. Gibbs then assured us that the fine progress has been made possible by the cooperation of the membership. Mr. H. Boyd Reitzel, who had been previously elected as delegate to the conference, stated that it would be impossible for him to attend the conference. Mr. John W. Curtis was unanimously elected to represent Liberty at the conference.

At the evening service our pastor delivered a very forceful sermon. Special music was rendered by Miss Adelaide Zimmerman, who very beautifully sang, "The Task."

Following the evening service a business meeting was held. At this time the officers for the coming year were elected. They are as follows: T. L. Smith, superintendent; W. M. Hanner, secretary-treasurer; Miss Ruth Crowson, organist, Mrs. J. W. Curtis, choir-leader; Mr. A. S. Pickett, chairman of the trustees; Mr. W. M. Hanner, chairman of the stewards; Mr. T. L. Smith, chief usher, and Helen L. Hanner, press reporter.

REPORTER.

First Church, Concord.—This church has things in readiness for the conference. We are a hundred percent church. All claims are paid in full. The quarterly conference was held Wednesday evening, last, and reports showed a net gain of forty-one members for the year. That $2,100 had been raised for Missions and Education. The Sunday school with an enrollment of 367 raised for all purposes $1,300. For building more than $6,000 and for all purposes a total of $13,000. The salary for another year was advanced $200.00.

By a vote of the congregation on yesterday the delegate was unanimously requested to ask for the return of the pastor for another year.

Two large congregations greeted us on yesterday, the closing day of the year, and the spirit of the services was fine.

G. H. HENDRY, Reporter.

Kannapolis Church.—This little band is also in readiness. The salary is fixed at $600.00. They have a house and Tabernacle and grounds for which they paid $3,000 on which $2,200 is in the form of indebtedness. They have raised for all-purposes since organization in June about $1,200. They will have a delegate to represent them at conference. This is a fine field and with proper leadership next year they ought to advance rapidly.

G. H. HENDRY, Acting Pastor.

Lexington, State Street Church.—The fourth quarterly conference was held last Friday night. Very encouraging reports were read from the different departments of the work.

A vote was taken as to whether there should be a change of pastor and the call for Mr. Bethea's return was unanimous.

Last Sunday was one of the largest in attendance, both at the Sunday school period and at the eleven o'clock hour, at which time the Sacrament was administered. Brother Way was present and assisted Brother Bethea.

Mr. Harold Lanier is our delegate to the conference Some others of our folks are planning to attend part of the time.

The Christian Endeavor society has a drive on for new members in the form of a contest, the members being divided into two sections. The side winning will be given a banquet by the losing side.

Mr. and Mrs. Holt of Spencer, N. C., were with us Sunday morning. We were all pleased to have them with us. Hope they come again.

REPORTER.

Haw River Circuit.—We are just closing our fourth year on this charge, and while we have not made the progress that we would like, still we are gratified when we remember that substantial progress has been made. Pastor's salary has been increased $200, a beautiful church has taken the place of the old one at Mizpah. Three pianos have been added; the totals raised by the charge has increased $1,000, considerable funds are being raised to build at Midway and 97 additions have been made to the churches. Having served this good people for four years at the last quarterly conference, against the protest of our friends we tended our resignation. Preaching three times a day for four years has been rather trying to us.

Some preacher will have the opportunity to serve some of the best folks in the N. C. Conference.

As a climax of the year last night the good people came in on us and gave us one of the biggest poundings we have had. We only wish we could at least, in a measure, repay them for this kindness W. D. REED.

English Street Church, High Point.—We are just starting our new conference year and want to do some real work in our Ladies' Aid Society this year. Will the ladies of the different churches please send us ideas for conducting our society—for raising money—also clippings, readings, songs, etc., for giving entertainments. We will appreciate anything from any one. MRS. R. S. RUSSELL.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Charge.—The fifth Sunday in October, the pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, preached his last sermon of the conference year, from the text: God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of Jesus Christ. A more appropriate text could not have been used to close the year's work.

Three members were received into this church. Two infants were baptized. The Lord's supper was given to a large crowd—a big percent of it, young people.

Joe Holmes, Lois Coble, Ruby Isley, of High Point College, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Garrett of Friendship church worshiped with us. Glad to have them. The conference year has ended, but we hope the pastorate of the present pastor has not. Mt. Hermon church has never had a pastor loved more. Some one asked, "Is he such a good preacher, or is he a good worker?" The answer is, both. His sermons have been good, and as a worker he is on the job until it is finished.

The union meeting of the three Senior Christian Endeavor societies on this charge was held at Friendship Friday evening. Games were played, weinnies roasted and all had a pleasant time. The standard efficiency chart was adopted two months ago and a banner offered the society winning the highest number of points. Mt. Hermon stood highest with Belmont a close second. The next meeting will be at Belmont the fourth Friday evening in January. REPORTER.

P. S. Mrs. T. P. Nicholson presented a flower basket to the church. This was prized very highly by her daughter, Addie and because she, Addie, loved her church so much her mother gave the basket to the church

Community Church, Thomasville.—Mrs. T. G. Perry has undergone an operation at the High Point Hospital; her many friends are glad to know that she is improving steadily.

Rev. H. W. Maier and J. W. Boyles, delegates, are preparing to attend conference.

We are indeed fortunate in having Rev. and Mrs. Maier with us. They are such fine teachers, preachers and workers, and we confidently expect their return.

The Woman's Auxiliary is planning to hold their bazaar on the 11th and 12th of November. A musical program will be rendered on Friday evening of the 11th and Saturday evening the 12th will be "Stunt Night," the public is invited. MRS. J. W. BOYLES.

THE SEVENTH DISTRICT MEETING

The District Meeting of the W. H. and F. M. Societies of the Seventh District was held on Sunday afternoon at Mt. Pleasant Church, Mrs. J. W. Boyles, District Chairman, presiding.

Mrs. E. S. Welborn, secretary, called the roll of churches. High Point (First) responded by eight ladies present; Lexington (State Street) by nine; Thomasville (Community), five; Thomasville (First), six; Shiloh, N. Davidson, had seventeen present; Mt. Pleasant members and friends made a well filled church.

Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. Boyles. Mrs. H. W. Maier capably explained our study book for this year, which is "A Straight Way Toward Tomorrow," by Mary Schauffler Platt. The theme of Mrs. Maier's address was the rights of childhood through play, education and careful training on the part of parents in the home. She spoke of the destructive forces as war, infant mortality, childlabor, ignorance, irreligion, and then of the constructive forces at work in the world to combat the destructive, such as orphanages and Red Cross, health programs, protective legislation, Christian education, and personal knowledge of God. Miss Mary Young, Dean of Women at H. P. College, spoke on Missionary Education with Children and Young People. Mrs. R. M. Andrews of High Point spoke on the Importance of Holding the Thank-Offering Services. Mrs. C. L. Whitaker spoke on Life, Memorial, and Perpetual Members. Rev. Clyde Auman, a missionary to Japan for six years, who is home on furlough, spoke on the need of our people's studying about the people of other nations, their customs, habits, etc., and especially who our missionaries are and where they are working. He said the Japanese, even the girls and boys, were studying about us and our America.

The Church was filled with interested and attentive listeners, and an invitation from Shiloh church delegation was accepted for next district meeting.

The Leonard sisters from Shiloh church sang very sweetly the appropriate hymn, "He Paid the Cost." Mrs. J. W. Boyles was re-elected chairman and Mrs. E. S. Welborn secretary. M. B.

WOMAN'S AUXILIARY MEETS WITH MRS. GLOFF

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Robert Gloff on Thursday afternoon at 2:00, the devotionals being conducted by Mrs. J. W. Boyles, and the first chapter in our new textbook, "A Straight Way Toward Tomorrow," was taught by Mrs. H. M. Maier; her discussion was on Child Welfare Work in the World.

The circles made the very best reports which they have ever made, in this meeting, Circle Number One reporting 786 points for the month and turned over to the Auxiliary $19.25; Circle Two reported 420 points and turned in $17.65; Circle Three reported 580 points and turned in $37.00.

The three circles made very fine reports on their bazaar preparations; also reports were made by the three bazaar committees, Program, Advertising and Dinner.

Mrs. Ralph Clodfelter was made the Secretary of Christian Education. She will prepare one program for us on the Christian Education program of our church.

Our own people in Concord know also the worth of Mr. Benson, for he for years until his recent removal has been the popular and faithful teacher of the Baraca class in our Concord church. It is gratifying to read such commendation of faithful and efficient service. It shows appreciation of a rare combination of the best qualities of heart. Why Mr. Benson went to Eastern Carolina to spend his days of retirement we do not know.

—The Christian Endeavorers of Mexico met during the National Convention of Evangelical Churches last summer in the city of Saltillo, Coahuila, and at the meeting a confederation of young people's societies (Christian Endeavor, Epworth League, and Baptist Societies) was discussed. The Recent Session of the Annual Conference

It began on Wednesday forenoon of last week and ended on Monday afternoon of this week. It was the third Asheboro Conference. The first was held 33 years ago, the second 25 years ago. The present commodious Asheboro church has been built within the last decade, we believe.

President Dixon delivered his annual message the first day of Conference. This we published last week. Rev. L. W. Gerringer preached the Conference sermon. The roll of the honored dead was called. Communion service was held. Lunch hour followed. The ladies of the church served splendid meals in the basement of the church at noon and at night.

In the afternoon of the first day officers of the Conference were elected. The Conference seemed to have made up its mind as to who should be its officers. On the first ballot Rev. S. W. Taylor was elected president by a large majority. The other officers were elected unanimously through the secretary's ballot; Rev. C. W. Bates, Secretary; V. W. Idol, Treasurer; Rev. H. F. Surratt, Statistician; Rev. Charles B. Way, Reporter. Rev. F. W. Paschal was chosen Assistant Secretary.

Rev. T. H. Lewis, President of the General Conference, came on Wednesday and delivered a stirring address. He spoke of the church's duty to the inactive and unprofitable church member. Formerly it was thought the thing to do to turn him out, but a more Christ-like spirit now prevails and it is seen to be the church's work to try to save the inactive from their inactivity, the sinful from their sins, by bringing them to Christ. We should beware of a Pharisaic spirit of self-righteousness in our attitude toward our imperfect fellowmen.

The foreign missionary interests of our church were represented before the Conference by Rev. S. W. Rosenberger, Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, by Dr. Roberta Fleagle, returned missionary from China, and by Miss Annie Forrest, Field Secretary of the W. F. M. S. Home Missionary interests were represented by Mrs. A. G. Dixon, president of the W. H. M. S., and by Mrs. N. C. Nicholson, of Mebane.

Our educational work was represented by Rev. F. W. Stephenson, Secretary of the denominational Board of Education.

Dr. J. H. Straughn was present to speak of the Centenary Gratitude Gift. He made a powerful appeal for this gift by showing the suitableness of it, not merely to express our feelings of gratitude to God for His good providence and His inspiration in the first hundred years of our existence as a church, but also to put our church boards in a position to do much more work for the interests to which they are consecrated. All our people will have opportunity to make their thank-offering between this time and May 1. It is the plan to present the Centenary Gratitude Gift of $100,000 to the General Conference in its session in Baltimore next May. North Carolina is expected to contribute an aggregate of $12,000, which is an average of less than fifty cents per member.

Someone spoke of this as a "talking Conference." Really, all our conferences are talking conferences, and our memory runs back to the time when talk was very abundant and some of it very poor in quality. Our impression of this session was that it put in the time in an earnest way, trying to find out the thing to do and then do it.

Some new subjects appealed for attention. In addition to the Gratitude Gift, there was the matter of group insurance. This took a good deal of time, and was not thoroughly gone through, but was left in the hands of a committee for completion. Seventy-five per cent of the ministers and preachers must agree to be insured in order to meet the requirement of the insurance company, the Prudential Life. It seems to be an unusual opportunity to get insurance in a strong company at a low rate.

This was the year for the election of representatives to the General Conference, and this consumed considerable time. Rev. T. M. Johnson appealed for the election of some women as representatives, asking that he be not elected, but that some woman be elected in what might have been his place. The electors granted his request as will be seen by the list of representatives in another column of the HERALD.

Dr. Garber, of Duke University, came to present the fraternal greetings of the M. E. Church, South, which he did in a pleasing manner. Dr. C. E. Forlines responded in a fitting way.

There were three lady-members of this Annual Conference: Mrs. W. R. Neville from Halifax; Mrs. H. C. Nicholson from Mebane, and Mrs. C. F. Marbry from Porter. They perhaps talked some, but we heard them make no speeches before Conference.

Brother Wiley Ward, of Asheboro, who served on the Stationing Committee last year, was chosen for the same service this year. The Conference perhaps had not forgotten Brother Pritchard's statement quoting somebody else to the effect that Brother Ward could deny your request in such a manner that you would feel better over it than you would if somebody else had granted your request. In rendering the report of the Stationing Committee to Conference Brother Ward advised that the lay member of the Stationing Committee be not chosen from the church with which the Conference is held. The report of the Stationing Committee is given on another page. It represents, we believe, the honest judgment of the Stationing Committee. As always, the committee received conflicting requests and of course could not grant all. We believe they did the best they could. Unfortunately a few charges were left unsupplied and a few ministers were left without charges, but later adjustments may remedy this. Let us pray God's blessings on every pastor and every charge and resolve to make this a year of honest, earnest work for Christ and His cause. The realization that Christ is the Head of the Church and that He is constantly active trying to direct

THE CONCORDANT VERSION AGAIN

To the Editor of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD:

Dear Sir:

I must thank you for the very gracious spirit of your review of the Concordant Version. I am sure you would be far more favorably impressed if you had time and opportunity to make a full examination.

The main principle of the version is correctly stated, yet it is not driven to such extremes as to always use the same word. On page 51 of the Introduction I give an example where the Concordant Version uses seven different English words for one Greek word. You really agree fully, that only one should be used when there is no valid reason for a change.

As to hupostasis in Heb. 1:3. Why should you assume that "person" is meant? Every translator I know of is evidence that "person" is not correct, for all change to another term. Even the revisers altered it to "substance." I have never been able to comprehend what the image of a substance is intended to convey, while the image of a person gives me the wrong idea of an inanimate picture or statue of a bodily form. "The Emblem of His assumption" is a concise statement of a marvelous, though long lost, truth. God assumes a variety of relations toward His creatures, such as Saviour, Father, as well as Elohim (Arbiter), Jehovah, and all that is represented by the Divine titles in the Scriptures. The Son of God is the Emblem, the Impress, the tangible expression of all the divine assumptions. The accompanying articles was written long ago, but will explain more fully what I mean.

I claim that, in this instance, the concordant method has not only correctly rendered a difficult passage, but has rescued from oblivion a truth hopelessly lost because of a discordant rendering.

In my complete edition I give both a literal and an idiomatic version. This method discovers new truth. This, its greatest excellence, is what makes it unpopular!

If you would compare the first verses of John's Gospel with the original and consider all the concordant evidence, what at first seems strange, will reveal new and hitherto hidden elements of truth.

If you should consider all the occurrences of the word translated "son" in Acts 3:13, I am sure you would realize the difficulty of rendering it in truthful English. No one seems to object to the A. V. rendering of this word—"child"—in Acts 4:27, 30. They usually translate it "servant." Why not render it uniformly as "boy?" To me it is not nearly so queer as "child."

The concordant method recovers so much lost truth, and opens up the mind of God in such a marvelous way that its apparent defects of form are trivial compared to the vast advance in truth.

Yours in His blessed service,

A. E. KNOCH.

The Divine Assumptions

By A. E. KNOCH

Among the glories which grace our Lord Jesus Christ is one of surpassing interest and splendor, but this, like many another gem in His diadem, has been long lost and forgotten. It is brought before us in that galaxy of glories which graces the opening of the epistle to the Hebrews.

Like every inspired gem, it is fitly set. The world to come was allotted to Abraham, the father of the Hebrews. So now Abraham's greater Son, is set forth as the Allottee of all. The nation of Israel is the conian nation and so we see Him as the Maker of the eons. As these cons are made for the display of God we are now introduced to the One who is to be the means of His revelation. First He is the Effulgence, or out-shining, of God's glory. And then He is introduced to us as the impress of the divine assumptions.

In meditating upon the relations between God and His Son, it will be our wisdom to observe and preserve the figures and illustrations which He Himself suggests rather than any of our own invention. "The effulgence of His glory" leads us to the most notable of all natural representations of God's glory, the sun.

The sun itself is not visible to human eyes. What we see is the luminous photosphere or radiance which surrounds it. What we feel is the radiance of which it is the source. In the richer Hebrew tongue two terms are used to describe the sun. One, referring to the sun itself (Job 9:7) is but seldom used, but the other, the common term, refers rather to the radiance of the sun, its shining. Thus when we read the phrases at which so-called scientific scholars scoff, and are told that the sun rises and sets, moves and stands still, gets hot and scorches, it is not the astronomical idea of the sun which is intended, but the phenomenal thought—the sunshine—which is suggested. By appealing to the poverty of our language and not noting the precision of the tongue of inspiration the wisdom of the wise has confounded itself.

All our physical blessings are borne to us by sunbeams. All light and life relies, not only on the sun, but on its radiance, its effulgence. Should the sun shut in its beams and shroud its shining it would be like God apart from the offices of His Son—unappreciated, unknown, inscrutable. And so He is to all who have not seen and felt His light and love as these radiate from His Effulgence.

To us who know God and all His warmth of love and life-giving illumination, He still remains invisible. But by His Son His glories have filled our hearts with blessing as the sun's beneficent beams spread blessing on the earth.

The next illustration, in which we are particularly interested at this time, brings before us quite a different picture. Just as this page is printed from type whose form corresponds to that of the characters which appear before the reader's eye, so it is with God and His Son. The type and its impression are distinct and different in many ways, yet, so far as the interpretation of thought is concerned, they are one. The printer who reads the type and the reader who scans these lines are impressed with precisely the same ideas. So the Son of God is the Impress of His assumptions.

This phrase has been variously rendered. The Authorized translates "the express image of His person." That this is rather in the nature of a commentary, or a suggestion as to what they thought it meant, rather than a true rendering of the original, is manifest when we note their translation of the word here rendered "person" by "substaance" in the first verse of the 11th chapter. "God is Spirit." How, then can we speak of His substance? The Greek word here translated "substance" has been rendered confident (2 Cor. 9:4), confidence (2 Cor. 11:17; Heb. 3:14), and the Revisers have followed the A. V. in using substance in Heb. 11:1. But faith is not substance. In fact, it is quite its opposite.

In order to rest satisfied as to the meaning of this important word we will need to find an expression which will fit into the context of each of its occurrences. "Confidence" seems to suit the Corinthian contexts fairly well. But the apostle has shown more than simple confidence. He has expressed this to others. He has assumed that they were ready and feared lest this assumption may not be true. Here we have hit upon an expression which will fit each occurrence as a key fits the lock. It does not strain the context but fills its place perfectly and opens up the significance of the passage. Using this as the basis of a concordant version we have this satisfactory definition of faith (Heb. 11:1):

"Now faith is an assumption of what we are expecting, a conviction concerning matters which we are not observing."

Faith in God's word rests, not on evidence, but rather exists because of the lack of it. It is a conviction concerning matters where evidence is withheld. It is an assumption of that which we are expecting. All our blessings, like those of the worthies of this chapter, may be perceived afar off, and may be greeted, but have not yet been obtained (Heb. 11:13).

Faith, as related to hope, or expectation, assumes all the force and flavor of the longed for object. The fulfillment of faith alone can substantiate it. But faith refuses to wait for fact and takes for granted that He who has spoken will not fail to fulfil His word.

Palestine, we assert, belongs to Israel. That is faith. In fact, it is the territory of the Turk. But we assume that God's word is true and that the Turks have only a temporary term.

Faith, then, is the assumption of that which we are expecting, and when we transfer this thought to the phrase in the first chapter of the epistle, it not only fits perfectly but suggests a vast field of almost unexplored truth. The Son of God is not the image of God's substance or person (whatever these may mean) but the Impress of His Assumptions. He made the eons. Throughout these eons God places Himself in various attitudes and relations to His creatures. He assumes various characters; He is Creator, Ruler, Provider, Master, Husband, Father. He is Jehovah and Elohim. He assumes these parts, but how can His creatures become aware of His assumptions? How can they know His relationship to them? He makes this manifest through His Son, Who is the Impress of these assumptions.

The Greek word for "impress" is the source of our word "character." Indeed, the Greek word, transliterated, is charakteer. It occurs only in this passage, but, with another affix, marking the fixed result of a stamp or die, it is used often in the Revelation to denote the "mark" or stamp of the beast. It is also used in Acts 17:29, where it is translated "graven." Idols were sculptured to depict the character of the god or goddess which they represented. Hermes (Ac. 14:12 Mercurius) with his herald's staff and winged sandals is proved to be the messenger of Olympus; Artemis (Acts 19:24, 27, 28, 34, 35 Diana) was known as a huntress by her pack of dogs; while Zeus (Acts 14:12, 13 Jupiter) proclaimed himself by his sceptre and his throne. But the Son of God is no mere charagma, no sculptured image of His God. He is a charakteer, and displays Him by His words and works, by a life of love and a dread death, by a radiant resurrection and an august ascension. He is the facsimile of God's assumptions, their character-istic presentation. In Him God's peculiar and salient attributes are converted into terms of human speech and action. When God is indignant He frowns, when He rejoices then the smile will play upon His Beloved's lips.

He is the impress of all God's assumptions. It is vain and vicious to drive in a wedge, as we so often do, between the Son and the Father, as though there were as little sympathy between them as there is in the average human family. He and His Fathere are one just as He and His saints are one. This unity is one of spirit, not identity of personality.

Failure to apprehend the truth that our Lord is the Impress of all the Divine Assumptions has led to many a self-imposed difficulty. Some passages prove that He is Adonai, not Jehovah. Other passages make it clear that He is Jehovah. Still others give Him the title of El or Elohim.

"The Lord (Jehovah) said unto my Lord (Adonai) (Ps. 110:1; Mt. 22:44) seems to show clearly that David's Lord was not Jehovah. Yet it is David who speaks of the crucified One "I beheld the Lord (Jehovah) always before my face . . . " (Ps. 16:8; Acts 2:25). Thus, while we infer from one of David's utterances that He is not Jehovah, we have clear evidence from another passage that He is.

The same is true of the title Elohim. In Heb. 1:9 Elohim is called His God. Yet in the preceding verse He Himself is called Elohim.

In His distress on Calvary He calls upon El, "Eloi, Eloi" (Mt. 27:46), yet in the very same book He Himself is called Immanuel—El with us. This, too, is the title given the Son as the Creator (Heb. 1:10; Ps. 102:24-27).

In the Greek Scriptures Master or Lord is used indiscriminately of the Adonai or Jehovah of the Hebrew, yet this is the peculiar title which is used to distinguish Him from His God. "There be gods many and lords many, but for us there is one God and one Lord (1 Cor. 8:5,6).

Often is God spoken of as the God and Father of our Lord, Jesus Christ. Yet the title God is not denied the Son. Thomas acknowledges Him to be his Lord and his God, and is not rebuked for his confession (Jn. 20:28). There is a strong probability that He is called "the Only Begotten God" in the first chapter of John's gospel (v. 18). The same apostle tells us that He is the true God (1 Jn. 5:20). The apostle Paul characterizes Him as "God over all, blessed for the eons" (Ro. 9:5).

Indeed, while the title Father is the one most distinct from the Son, He is the Impress of the Divine Fatherhood, too. He told His disciples "If ye had known Me, ye should have known My Father also; and from henceforth ye know Him and have seen Him. Philip saith unto Him, 'Lord show us the Father, and it sufficeth us.' Jesus saith unto him, 'Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known Me, Philip? He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou 'Show us the Father?' Believest thou not that I am in the Father and the Father is in Me? The words that I speak unto you I speak not from Myself; but the Father that abideth in Me, He doeth the works. Believe Me that I am in the Father and the Father in Me" (Jn. 14:7-11).

From all of these examples it is evidently beside the mark to seek to limit any divine characterization to Deity, for we cannot hear Him apart from His Expression, we cannot see Him apart from His Image, we cannot perceive the characters He assumes apart from the Impress of His assumptions. This does not obliterate manifest differences of identity and personality. Indeed, we are forced to distinguish between the Image and its invisible Original, we cannot confuse the Expression with the One Who speaks, and we are not distressed when the Impress is spoken of in the same terms as the Assumption. The one great Mediator between God and humanity is fully authorized to speak and act as God; and to receive the honors which are due God.

STORING GLADIOLUS BULBS

By Luther K. Long

Here we are well into the month of November, and the last stalk of my gladioli completed its flowering only a few days ago. Four months, from July first to November first, is a long blossoming season. That means, of course, the planting of a large number of bulbs—some early, some mid-season, and others late. I should have begun planting around the first of March, in which case there would have been flowers at least as early as the middle of June.

It is impossible to say which gives the most pleasure in the garden, a large block of mixed gladiolus blossoms, or separate blocks of isolated colors. A Jacob's coat effect, where you can wander among many shades of color and many sizes and shapes of flowers, certainly has delights peculiar to itself. Then, it is great to get into a concentrated mass of blossoms of a single sort—scarlet, crimson, pink, yellow, white, deep purple, light or dark lavender—to mention only a few of the many shades. When you wish to pick a bouquet, you can select from a block of mixed colors whatever best meets your need at the time; while from blocks of single sorts you can gather arm-loads of one kind and then combine the separate colors into bouquets to suit your fancy or the occasion on which you desire to use them.

For the amateur grower mixed planting is, perhaps, the best method; but there should always be a fair proportion of really good sorts in the mixture. Using the mixture, the amateur has a better opportunity to study the nature and habits of these wonderful flowers, and he can build up his collection gradually, increasing by multiplying and buying the sorts that most strongly appeal to his tastes.

When digging the bulbs in the fall you will notice two or three, or even more bulbs in a cluster. Some sorts are quite given to increasing in this way. After drying the bulbs ten or fifteen days, you can readily break them apart, discarding the roots and the old dried-up bulb at the bottom. You will notice also quite a lot of small bulblets clustered around the parent bulbs. These are the children of the family. If you wish to increase more largely your stock of any particular variety you will plant these bulblets in the spring. By fall some of them will have grown to blossoming size and will blossom when planted the next year, while others will require still another year's growth. Gladiolus parents—just the same as human parents—differ widely in the number of children they bring into the world; there is a similar difference, also, in the length of time required for these children to reach blossoming maturity. And, furthermore, the size of the family is not a sure indication of the good character and worth of either of the parents or the children. A bulb that produces magnificent flowers—the consummation we are devoutly seeking—may have very few children; while a bulb that has only characterless blossoms may give to the world many husky children that soon reproduce a profusion of the same characterless flowers and offspring. Now and again a bulb will be found that produces an abundance of fine, beautifully-marked blossoms, and at the same time brings forth a large family of strong bulblets that in due course fill the flower-world with new delights. The modern biologist and the sociologist are both laboring for the improvement of both the gladiolus and the human families.

After they are well dried the bulbs may be tied up in bags, either paper or cloth, and hung in the cellar where they will be neither too warn nor cold enough to freeze. A closet or store-room where potatoes will keep makes a good winter resort for gladiolus bulbs. Never cover the bulbs with sand or dirt.

Winter is the season when nature rests and sleeps—at least her plant-children are quiet, and their life-processes slow down very appreciably. I can imagine the bulbs in storage enjoying pleasant dreams of the coming springtime with its rush of warmth and growth, and of the summertime with the heat that brings out their wealth of blossoms. I certainly wish for the glad bulbs many sweet dreams, and I am sure we all are anticipating with pleasure the time when they shall waken to new growth and when their glad flowers shall fill our glad gardens with a profusion of fresh and beautiful color.

THE CHILD'S NEED

By Rebecca B. Liner

If we could understand the needs of boys and girls,
The many helpful things which they should know,
Perhaps we'd harder strive to show such love and truth,
As would make them purer, stronger grow.

If we could in their young hearts see the faith and trust,
And hear their low, sweet, plaintive plea to live
The best and highest lives of Christlikeness,
I'm sure we'd ever tireless seek to give.

Such love and guidance for their little tender feet
As would help them life's best gifts to gain,
And give them strength to overcome the raging waves,
Which seek to overflow their lives with pain.

The boys and girls need help that teachers true can give,
They need their friendship and their love,
They need the lamp of truth to over brightly shine
Upon their path to safely lead above.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH RELIGION?

The amount of crime and the general disregard for laws, both human and divine, which are afflicting the world like a pestilence, are causing many good people to exclaim, "What's wrong with religion?" The answer is that that there is nothing wrong with any religion that is ethical, is sincerely believed in, and is sincerely practiced. Not long ago a prominent divine declared from the pulpit that if he happened to be wandering in a Central African jungle and came suddenly on an aborigine engaged in the worship of a stuffed toad, he would take off his hat to him, as in him would be combined at least the ideals of faith and sincerity.

It is the lack of these virtues that is at the root of most troubles today. How can anything be good if it is neglected and tossed aside? There is nothing wrong with religion: it is the lack of religion in the individual that causes trouble.—The Dearborn Independent.

HOMES FOR THE HOMELESS

"And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me."

This from the lips of the Man of Galilee has been handed down through twenty centuries and its significance will be recognized until the declaration shall emanate from the portals of Heaven that time shall be no longer. It is a clarion call to the aid and protection of innocent childhood, and the North Carolina Orphan Association pleads the cause of children bereft of parental care and the tender sympathy of a mother's love.

The Association again calls upon every man and woman in the State to contribute on or near Thanksgiving Day at least one day's income to the orphanage of his or her choice. For a dozen years a similar appeal has annually been made and the generous gifts to the orphanages have revealed the tender and practical sympathy which our people feel toward the thouasnds of fatherless children who are being trained in them for citizenship and the Kingdom. May the gifts of the approaching Thanksgiving show a greatly increased interest in this worthy cause.

Few situations in life are more distressing than that of children without homes. No loss seems so great as that of parental love. Bereavement inflicts its stroke with acutest anguish when it cuts all the tender ties that bound the loving lives of father and mother to our devoted heart. Other sorrows, other losses, we may bear with fortitude. Other bereavements, even, seem not to fill our spirit with such bitter humiliation; for they come to us in after life, when we have somewhat learned to bear the lessons of grief, and when manhood or womanhood has brought us increased power of endurance.

Childhood, with all its ignorance of worldly sorrow, and with all its frailty of spirit, is overwhelmed by tribulation of being orphaned. The orphan, therefore, is entitled to peculiar sympathy and protection. The child bereaved of its natural guardianship and left, in its innocency and tears, to the tenderness of a cold world, becomes the very symbol of defenseless affliction; and as such, it should receive the protection of every man's arm and the affection of every woman's heart. We have seen, perhaps, the actual exemplification of all the suffering home pictures. We remember the dark and tearful day of burial. We seem again to see the child with strange fear and grief twining its little arms about its parent's neck, and covering with kisses the cold cheeks. We think of the passionate outburst of sorrow when the loved form was borne away.

Then more sad even than all this, we call to mind the long years of sorrow, suffering and loneliness that followed. Maybe some of our own parents were thus taken and are now among the sainted host of Heaven. Surely, then, we do not need to be convinced by the cold force of argument, nor won by the warmth of glowing rhetoric, in order to induce us to feel for the woes, and to relieve the privations of the orphans in our midst.

To this Association, it is the solemn consideration that God Himself has made especial promises of protection to the orphan, friends who will "stick closer than a brother." Friends who come softly when their eyes are wet and their hearts are heavy and become the vehicle of Mercy. Truth and Justice, flashing from its center no rates of stocks or pageantry of kings, making the circuit of the world with help for the destitute and honor for the lowly. If you can estimate the value of the life of a child bereft of the blessings and comforts of a home, you can begin to realize what it means to enlist in the movement to swell our orphanage treasuries at Thanksgiving. If you fail to experience pleasure and satisfaction out of rendering the service suggested in this appeal you have failed to catch the inspiration from the words of the Master, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

In order that more adequate equipment and support for our orphan homes may be provided we make our appeal to—

The prince of business to give out of his abundance the actual or estimated income of a day;

The landlord and money lender to give one day's rent of his houses and lands, or one day's interest on his money;

The professional man to give one day's earnings, specifying the day or taking the average day;

The salaried worker to give his or her salary for a day;

The day laborer with only pick-up jobs to devote some special day to this cause;

The good housewife with her ingenuity and devotion to set apart the work of a day;

The boys and girls with no regular income to get a job after school hours, or on some Saturday and give the proceeds to the orphans.

In short, ecvrybody, old and young, rich and poor, learned and illiterate, to join in this holy movement and thus to "visit the fatherless in their affliction."

We call upon the press of the State to give the widest possible publicity to this movement which is philanthropic in purpose and State-wide in extent; we call upon all church leaders of all denominations to urge in their respective congregations the giving of a day's income to their respective orphanages on or near Thanksgiving Day.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

TOBACCO SLAVES, HIGH AND LOW

WILL H. BROWN

Tobacco knows no favorites. A man may be a king or a prisoner, and yet a slave to the weed. Two incidents bring out this contrast in the subjects of the merciless slave-driver:

Professor Richet, of Paris, who received the Nobel prize in Physiology in 1913, confesses his slavery to tobacco in these words: "To excuse myself I cannot even claim, like many smokers, that tobacco is harmless, since I am well aware that it is harmful, exceedingly harmful. My mania for smoking is proof of man's incorrigible folly. Tobacco is a stupid habit to which I am enslaved—a stupid slavery from which I lack the courage to break away."

An Australian prison official relates the other incident, as follows: Two criminals were working under his supervision, breaking rock. One had a chew of tobacco in his mouth. The other asked him to let him chew it awhile. On being refused, this tobacco-slave watched his chance, struck his companion on the head with his hammer, hurled him to the ground, eagerly took the cud of tobacco from his mouth and greedily placed it in his own, which he proceeded to vigorously chew.

The abject slavery to which tobacco reduces many of its subjects is seen on every hand. Freeing the black men of the South from human slavery was a noble act. To free all races from the reign of the tyrant, King Nicotine, who holds the whip of appetite over the cowering heads of millions of subjects, is the duty of the hour for all who have the good of their fellow-creatures at heart.

From Conference President

FOREWORD

The pen of a president is not yet fitted to our fingers, and we must write in this first message as one who is learning how. As time goes on perhaps we can wield the pen with more ease, but "learning how" will, no doubt, continue to the end. At least we trust so, for nothing more unfortunate could happen to us that to quit learning. Being a president is a great deal more than being elected to an office. In actual performance it, of course, begins with that, but learning how to administer the office must go on with the years. It is our desire to learn—to be taught, both of God and of men, that our works may be approved. We shall, therefore, enter upon our duties with an open mind and an earnest heart, seeking always to know the truth and to make the impartial administration of this office contribute in every possible measure to the success of every pastor, every charge, every institution, and every Conference program. Our immediate predecessor, and those who were before him, have set for us high standards, and surely nothing less than our best can be given in faithfully trying to maintain these high goals. That, we most fully and most gladly pledge. With a deep and an abiding interest in every minister, every charge, every institution, and every Conference need, we enter upon our new duties in the cheering confidence that the God who has brought us thus far will still lead on. Pray for us, brethren, that abounding grace may be given for every necessity. And be assured that always and in every place we shall make mention of you in our prayers. Now, the "God of peace make you perfect in every good work to do His will, working in you that which is well pleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen."

New Pastors—New Fields

A number of pastors will be moving in a few days to their new fields of labor; others will go back to continue the work which they have already begun. In either case, may it be that every pastor will be a new one—new in spirit, in optimism, in consecration to the new tasks of the new year. And may it also be that each pastor may be greeted in this new spirit of hopefulness and co-operation.

Suggestion

Charges can greatly assist pastors in the matter of moving by sending trucks to haul their household effects. This would mean but little in the matter of cost to the charge, and would save much to the pastor. Brethren of the laity, please be mindful of this.

Now I must desist, remembering that of many matters there is no end, and that much reading and much hearing is a weariness to the flesh.

TOBACCO TRACTS

The No-Tobacco League has printed a large edition of one-page leaflets on "Why Smoke, Anyway?" "A Stupid Slavery," "Tobacco vs. Thrift," and "Smokeless Breathing Air." They are brief, terse, pungent. They do not pretend to be exhaustive, but only suggestive and provocative of thought and discussion.

These leaflets should be put in the hands of every child and young person. Public schools, Sunday schools, Boy Scout troops, members of boys' organizations, and those who belong to young people's religious organizations should secure a sufficient supply to provide every member with a copy of each leaflet. The cost is trifling. To those unable to pay even the minimum cost, leaflets will be furnished in quantities to organizations and to responsible individuals who will promise to distribute them widely and wisely. Send a two-cent stamp for samples.

The League will appreciate the co-operation of all who believe in their motto:

Let us keep the young folks clean from the blight of nicotine,

Let us teach the youth the truth about tobacco.

Address the No-Tobacco League of America, Charles M. Fillmore, General Secretary, 821 Occidental Building, Indianapolis, Indiana.

GOOD NEWS ABOUT CONFERENCE GROUP INSURANCE

A telephone message from Rev. J. E. Pritchard conveys the good news that a letter from the Charlotte office of the Prudential Life Insurance Company assures us that they will insure all members of our Conference including those who are already superannuated. Superannuates will be included at the beginning that there may be no discrimination against the older men. However, I understand that the superannuate must be insured at the beginning, and that he can not be insured later. In other words: After the insurance is in force no one who was already a superannuate or who may have become a superannuate after the contract was made can be insured. I want to make it plain: All present superannuates may have the benefit of this cheap insurance if they will consent to be included now. After the contract is closed they are shut out.

It appears to me that almost the last objection to this conference group insurance has been removed. Here is the opportunity for every member of our Conference, old and young, superannuate and active ministers, to have the benefit of insurance at a rate far below what it would cost the youngest member; and all this without medical examination. As stated on the Conference floor, the rate will be approximately $20 per thousand, the insured paying 60 per cent and the Conference paying the other 40 per cent.

According to Conference action, a small assessment will be laid upon the charges to provide the forty per cent. Any minister, however, who is willing to do so, may pay that extra assessment laid upon the charge he serves, or at least an amount equal to the forty per cent that the Conference would have to pay of his premium.

Important—That this group insurance may be put into force as the Conference directed it should be, at least 75 per cent of the members of the Conference must agree to be included. We are still short the required number by a good bit. Brother Pritchard, who is chairman of the committee, has asked me to endeavor to secure the consent of the necessary number. I am now endeavoring to do that.

Therefore, those of our ministers, including all active pastors, professors in college and Seminary, and superannuates, and missionaries, who did not sign up for the insurance, but who now desire to get in on this, please write me at once, stating that you want to be included, giving the following facts:

1. Full name.
2. Post office address.
3. Date of birth (not age).

Do it now! This matter should be attended to at once. Address me, 603 East Davis Street, Burlington, N. C.

Do not send any money until further notice.

Thanking you for a quick response, I am, yours for the best insurance proposition that has ever been offered us,

L. W. Gerringer, Member of Committee.

THE RED CROSS ASKS FOR FIVE MILLION MEMBERS

Following closely the announcement that the American Red Cross will call for a membership increased to five million for the coming year, the Eleventh Annual Roll Call, from Armistice Day, November 11, to Thanksgiving, November 24, will be launched throughout the United States, during which new members will be enrolled.

The appeal for this augmented membership is based on the realization that demands on all branches of Red Cross service are growing with each year. For several years the membership in the Red Cross has numbered a little more than 3,000,000 adults. In the past fiscal year alone, this membership backing up the national and chapter organizations and forming a part of its branches, bore the brunt of relief work in 77 major disasters within their own country, while aid was extended through the national organization in 20 disasters in foreign lands.

In a single disaster, the Mississippi flood, this relatively small organization, without other machinery than their own forces, raised from public subscription all over the nation, with foreign donations also, a relief fund of approximately $17,000,000 for the flood victims. Counting the effort involved in the relief task following the Florida storm, which was included in the past year's operations, $20,000,000 was raised, and a total of at least 650,000 people were assisted.

While the gigantic Mississippi flood relief was in progress, the Red Cross extended assistance in 14 other disasters elsewhere, in the meantime continuing to operate its vital all-year around services such as its obligations to the disabled veterans of the World War, other veterans, to the men still in the military and naval forces at home or on foreign service; its great health program, and similar activities.

Commenting upon the need for five million members in the Red Cross, Chairman John Barton Payne said in his report:

"We are obliged to draw annually upon our reserves, and the demands upon us increase each year. Our Roll Call funds should meet our normal needs and add something to our reserves for the great disasters. We must have a large reserve. No one can tell when a situation may arise when this reserve will be essential to the lives of thousands. The Red Cross cannot wait to raise funds. Action, prompt, instant, is its life. Instant action means the lives of many. It must be strong, it must be ready; this means a large reserve."

Members are enrolled in the Red Cross through the local chapters of the organization. These chapters are the local branches of the organization, and are usually the first to get in action in time of stress. Many chapters have a standing plan in which the municipalities collaborate, under which civic authorities and the citizenry, through their Red Cross chapter, can go to work at once in time of disaster or other emergencies.

BLESSED ARE THEY THAT MOURN

"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted. The afflicted, the weeping, those who feel disgust for themselves and pity for the world, who do not live in the supine stupidity of everyday life, who grieve over failures, over the blindness which delays the victory of light because light for men cannot come from the sky if their own eyes do not reflect it; who grieve over the remoteness of that righteousness dreamed-of again and again, promised a thousand times, and yet always further away through our fault and everyone's fault; those who mourn over an offense received instead of increasing the wrong by revenge, and who weep over the wrong they have done and over the good they might have done and did not; those who care little about the loss of a visible treasure but strain after the invisible treasure; those who mourn, hasten with their tears the day of grace, and it is right that they shall some day be comforted."—Selected.

THE NEED OF FORGIVENESS

The greatest need of humanity, and the need which demands first aid, is freedom from the burden of sin. We know how we are "sore let and hindered in running the race that is set before us," and there can be no healing or cleansing found on earth. Then we turn to Him who came from heaven, and lo! "He is the Fountain for sin and for uncleanness." How foolish is he who will not confess his sin! How unwise to care for physical bathing daily, while the spiritual part is neglected! Thoughts, words, deeds consciously or unconsciously have stained us. Sensitiveness to uncleanness is the part of cultured intelligence. To know the joy and health of living, when before the Cross we kneel for mercy, is to be justified as was the Publican. And in the Holy Communion we have the pledge, the assurance of pardon and peace.—Rev. Floyd W. Tompkins, D. D., in The Living Church.

OUR STORY PAGE

CAMP NUMBER EIGHT

A prolonged called caused Howard Ferry to rise, abruptly pushing aside the ledger upon which he had been at work. He hurried from the office of the lumber camp into the crisp, cold air of early evening.

"Telegram for the boss," laconically announced the messenger who had ridden in from the little town ten miles away.

The young bookkeeper signed the telegram. Then he hurried across a cleared space to where stood two long, rough buildings. One of them was Camp Number Eight's "bunk-house," where the men slept. This was faintly lighted, but from the windows of the other building, the "cook-house," lights gleamed. Howard entered the room where the men were seated at supper.

There were three long tables, and they were spread with simple, abundant fare. The young man's entrance was unnoticed. He made his way to where, at the head of one of the tables, sat Jerome Brown, the camp manager.

"A telegram, Mr. Brown," and Howard laid the envelope before his employer.

Jerome Brown hastily opened it. As he read the few brief lines his face changed.

"No bad news, I hope," Howard said.

Mr. Brown sat in silence for a few seconds. Then he took his watch from his pocket and opened it. The next moment he was on his feet. He spoke, and something in his voice made every man drop his knife and fork, to lean forward a little, as if not to lose a word.

"Boys, this telegram is from my wife. Little Ned, our only child, is very ill, they fear dying. Tim, harness the big bays and get ready to drive me to town. If I start in twenty minutes I can catch the night train."

Tim hurried away. Some of the men began to express their sympathy, but Mr. Brown held up his hand, asking for silence.

"You all know how much depends upon the men being all kept at work; it will require close calculation to finish up our job before the spring thaws set in. McReady, you will see to the cutting, and the teaming will go on as well under Clark as if I was here. At the camp I will have to leave Howard in charge. He is young, but you all know that he is straight, and he understands just how I want things to go. Boys, to finish this job on time means a lot to me. I've tried to be square with you, and I'm sure you will stand by me in this."

The men crowded round Brown, shaking his hand, promising more than he could have asked. He choked a little as he tried to thank them, then hurried off to the office. Howard walked at his side.

"You know, Mr. Brown, I would do anything for you, but you have had to keep a firm hand over the boys this winter. What will I do if they break over the traces?"

"They must not do that, Howard. It's a big responsibility to put on you, but I must go. Little Ned—"

"I know," and the young man's hand closed over the arm of the older one. "I'll do it, sir."

Ten minutes later Howard stood in the dim light, watching the sleigh containing the two men disappear from sight among the shadows of the surrounding forest. The youth stood still until the sound of the sleigh-bells died away, then he retraced his steps to the cook-house, as he had not had his supper.

A few of the men were still at the table. Bull Burton, the bully of the camp, looked over at Howard, a sneer on his face.

"An' the infant's boss now. Cookee, bring the boss' nursin' bottle."

Howard's face flushed, but he made no response. Instead he began talking with one of the men about the probability of Mr. Brown's making the train. As soon as the young bookkeeper had finished his supper he went back to the office.

It was Monday night when Mr. Brown left Camp Number Eight. For a few days all went well. The men worked faithfully, and Howard's duties were little different from what they were when the manager was present.

Friday it began to rain. Howard knew that a protracted thaw would delay the completion of the job. He vaguely felt that a spirit of lawlessness was awakening in the camp. There was nothing upon which he could put his hand, but he feared what the morrow would bring, and wished for the return of Jerome Brown.

It was colder Saturday morning. A man was sent into town for the mail. There was a letter from Mr. Brown. Little Ned was better, but still so weak that his father would not return to the camp until Monday afternoon.

Howard drew a long breath. It was Sunday, with its leisure hours, that he feared.

Both Clark and McReady had trouble with the men that day. Orders were disregarded, work was neglected, and hot words passed freely. It began snowing late in the afternoon, and when darkness fell a fierce storm was raging.

Howard woke the next morning to find it still snowing, while the wind blew straight from the north. The bookkeeper occupied a bed in the room where Mr. Brown slept, back of his office. As soon as he was dressed he made his way across to the shanties. Prompted by a sudden impulse, he entered, not the cook-room, but the building where the men slept.

About half of the workmen were at breakfast. The others were gathered around the big stove, smoking and talking.

"Good morning, fellows!" Howard cried cheerily.

At the sound of his voice a strange confusion seemed to seize the group about the stove. Bill Burton replied angrily to a low-spoken remark.

"Well, let him see to it. 'Tain't none of his business."

Howard stepped forward. On the floor at Bill's side stood a jug that held two gallons. The odor in the air made Howard's question superfluous.

"Now, it's none of your business, kid, but I don't mind a tellin' you it's whisky straight," was Bill's reply. "It'll be jest like you to want to know where it came from, so I'll ease your mind by tellin' you that Sam drove over to town last night for it."

For a moment Howard was silent. It was Mr. Brown's rule that no liquor should be brought into camp, a rule that he had enforced through some stormy scenes. Howard knew that, if the drinking went on, the men would be unable to go to work the following morning.

"You have not forgotten Mr. Brown's orders about drink being brought into camp?" he said.

"Well, sonny, I don't know as it's any of your business what I forgit or what I remember," Bill said insolently. "The stuff's here, an' we're goin' to drink it. What you goin' to do ' bout it?"

"There seems to be but one thing I can do." Even as Howard spoke he picked up a great iron poker that lay on the floor. With it he struck the jug a resounding blow, breaking it into fragments.

A turmoil of angry cries arose. Bill sprang up and advanced toward Howard, one hand lifted threateningly. The younger man retreated, but only far enough so that he had the wall at his back. He raised the poker and Bill halted.

"Stand back, Bill; I would not like to hurt you. Boys, I am sorry to use such measures, but you all know you would not have dared bring that stuff here if Mr. Brown had been in the camp. Some of you promised him to—"

"Stop that!" Bill cried with an oath. "You're safe behind that poker just now, but I swear I'll lick the ground with you afore the week's gone."

Howard retained his composure regardless of the abuse showered upon him. The arrival of the better class of men, who had been at breakfast, terminated the affair. Clark walked with Harold across to the office.

"You've got sand, young man, but you've done a fool trick. Bill will pay you off as sure as you are alive."

"But, Clark, I could not let them drink themselves into a state where they would not be fit for work tomorrow, to say nothing of the harm done them. Mr. Brown——"

"I know. You've got nerve, lad, but you'll regret this morning's work."

Howard entered the office, too excited to care for any breakfast. He tried to read, to write, but his mind would persist in going back to the state of affairs at the camp. The hours went by slowly. Occasionally one of the men strolled into the office. A few were openly aggressive, but the most of them, while admitting that Howard had done right, warned him against Bill's threatened vengeance.

Dinner was late on Sunday. Howard crossed to the cookhouse as soon as the meal was ready, for he had begun to realize that he had had no breakfast. He had nearly finished eating when Clark came in and sat down near the young bookkeeper.

"Well, Howard, your onslaught on the jug did no good. Bill and the Swede, Ole, started for town an hour ago, after more whisky. They can get it, if it is Sabbath."

Howard sprang to his feet. Then he realized his helplessness and sat down. "What can we do, Clark?"

"Do? Nothing, only to let them sleep it off, if they don't get into a fight. They will not get back until late, for the roads are badly drifted. Bill figured it out this way: Brown will be mad, but it's too near the end of the season and the work is too pressing for him to discharge a lot of men."

"The barn boss knew better than to let them have a team," Howard said doggedly.

"They didn't ask him, but helped themselves to old Fan and the jumper. Cy is one of Bill's pals, and he was careful not to keep too close a watch on the stable."

Howard went back to the office. He sat down to study the problem of the coming trouble. At last he started up.

"I'll go for a tramp, even if it does storm. I can think better in the open air."

He stepped outside. The snow was still falling, and the wind cut his cheek. Without a moment's hesitation he went swinging along, through the drifts, along one of the logging roads that radiated from the camp. To the west the woods still stretched, but a road led through them to a point where extensive lumbering operations had gone on. Shut in by the forest on both sides, Howard did not feel the full force of the wind. He walked rapidly, rejoicing in the resistance he was obliged to make to the drifts and the the storm.

On and on he pressed. Already the day was over. The darkness, its coming hastened by the storm, fell rapidly. All at once Howard roused himself with a start, to find that he was surrounded by dense darkness. He stopped and stretched his arms aloft. The struggle with the elements had calmed him; suddenly he felt sure that the right would win.

"I must get back to the camp by the time the men arrive," he thought. "In some way I must get possession of that liquor."

He started to retrace his steps. The darkness had no terrors for him, as the road stretched ahead, so shut in by the forest that it would be impossible for him unconsciously to leave it. While walking along Howard began to whistle. He was within a mile of the camp and at a point where a log road crossed at right angles the one he was traversing when he heard a horse whinny.

"Why, what's that?" and Howard stopped short.

The sound was repeated. Howard struck a match. It flared up fitfully and went out, but not before the wavering light had revealed the fact that old Fan, hitched to the rude sleigh which was known as "the jumper," was only a few feet away.

Howard crossed to the sleigh. It contained the two men, but they had fallen forward, crouching in the bottom of the box. Howard called to them and shook them, but they did not move. They were dead drunk.

"It's well I came this way; they would have frozen to death before morning. Now to get them to camp. Wait a minute. There is something for me to do before I start."

Groping about in the darkness he found at the men's feet a huge jug of whisky. He lifted it out and left it by the roadside after withdrawing the cork. Then he went through the men's pockets. Each had a bottle, and Howard threw them into the darkness. Then he was ready to start for the camp.

It was a hard journey. The horse was nearly exhausted and could be induced to plod through the drifts only by Howard leading her. On arriving at the camp he halted before the bunk-house. His hallo brought a half dozen men to the door.

"Help me get these men in," Howard commanded. "I do not think they are injured by the cold, but they have come back empty-handed."

The men were coming in from work the next day when Mr. Brown reached the camp. To the group of choppers who chanced to be passing just as the horse stopped, the manager called:

"Hallo, boys! All's well?"

"You bet it is, Mr. Brown," Bill Burton cried. "We're glad to see you back, but Howard's kept everything a-goin', just as well as if you'd been here. I tell you, Mr. Brown, that boy's all right."—Hope Darling, in United Presbyterian.

The Recent Session of the Annual Conference

all the movements of His body, the church, will enable us the more cheerfully to enter into the work He has for us individually.

The entertainment of the Conference was such as to elicit a most hearty vote of thanks. The committee recommended that we hereafter meet in Asheboro every year.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Friendship, Mt. Herman Charge.—A union meeting of the three Christian Endeavor Societies of the Mt. Hermon charge was held at Friendship on Friday evening, October 28. The president, H. E. Coble, took charge of the business part of the meeting. Bellmont Society was awarded the banner for the greatest efficiency during the last three months with both other societies close behind.

After the business meeting the social committee of the Friendship society took charge. Games were played and weinies roasted.

The Belmont society invited the societies to meet with them at the next meeting which will be the last Friday evening in January.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society gave a representation of the play "Son John" which was presented several months ago. About fifteen dollars was realized. This amount goes to the High Point College Student Loan Fund which the society has pledged.

We were glad to have Miss Irene Patterson and Kenneth Holt with us Sunday. They are students at High Point College.

Our pastor, Rev. Mr. Carroll, preached for us the third Sunday in October which was his last time for this conference year. The fourth quarterly conference met at friendship and unanimously voted for his return. He has served the charge faithfully and we are looking forward to his return. He is a man of great social ability and a good mixer, always working for the advancement of God's cause. He has preached three times on many Sundays and a student at High Point College also, though he never complains but is always pushing forward.

At the last appointment the officers for the coming year were elected. Only three changes were made in the old board. Mr. H. A. Garrett was elected class leader, Paul Groves and Moodie Isley were elected to take the place of Kenneth Holt and Lacy Isley on the board of stewards. REPORTER.

To West Forsyth Circuit.—Greeting. Having been appointed by the stationing authority your pastor for another year, I expect to fill the appointments beginning at Union Hill next Sunday. Am planning to have the first quarterly conference during the first week in December. Expect the new president to be with us at that time.

Let us all be new in desire, and purpose, and spirit. Then with a new people, a new pastor, and a new president to plan, and lead, we will go on to new progress in advancing the cause of our Redeemer and Savior.

His servant and yours,
C. H. WHITAKER.

High Point.—The congregation was delighted to hear Rev. Dr. S. W. Rosenberger last Sunday morning, the new Secretary of Board of Foreign Missions, who was attending Conference at Asheboro. This was his first visit to High Point, and he made a most favorable impression. We can but feel that the mantle of the late, lamented Dr. Klein has fallen upon worthy shoulders. At the evening service Rev. Ferry Lee Gibbs of Liberty-Siler City charge, one of our most promising young ministers in the Seminary, filled the pulpit, and delivered an inspiring message. He bids fair to make a brilliant and effective pastor.

A delightful meeting of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies was held Monday afternoon at the parsonage with Mrs. E. L. Ballard. There was a good attendance, there having been 11 members present from Mrs. Moffitt's Circle, nine from Mrs. Diffee's, and eight from Mrs. Walker's. The Home Society held its business meeting first, and upon invitation Dr. E. L. Allman, Superintendent Children's Home, came and delivered an interesting and timely talk, giving a brief history of the origin and early struggle of the Home, also, mentioning some urgent needs at present, bed and table linen, silverware, and six mattresses. There are now 78 members of this large family. There have been an even 100 applicants for admission, but only nine of them have been taken for lack of room. The Baracas of First Church, High Point have recently voted to donate $25 weekly to the Home. A school building is greatly needed. Nineteen boys and girls are attending the High School at Jamestown this year, and Superintendent White and their teachers report that they are excellent students. The sum of $15.50 was contributed for Pine Ridge, Ky., school. Arrangements were made for the public Thank offering service on Sunday evening following Thanksgiving Day, when a group of boys and girls from the Home will appear and render a program. Each person is urged to contribute the amount of one day's wage or income, be it large or small, for the help of these motherless and fatherless children in our midst. A program of interest was then given, Mrs. J. Hobart Alfred singing a a beautiful solo, "I Know in Whom I Have Believed," Miss Todd, teacher of Expression in the College, gave two enjoyable readings, Kipling's "L'Enovi," and Riley's "Old-Fashioned Roses," and Mesdames C. R. Hinshaw and J. C. Whitesell sang a lovely duet, "Come, Holy Spirit." These numbers were presented in a charming manner, and were much enjoyed by those in attendance.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening the topic, which was of vital importance to the Christian world of today, was "What Should Be the Christian's Attitude Toward War?" and it was discussed by Misses Katherine Askea and Lillian Shelton.

We are greatly pleased to learn that the Annual Conference at Asheboro has returned Rev. E. Lester Ballard as associate pastor for another year. He and his lovable young wife have greatly endeared themselves to our congregation, especially the young people and children of the Junior church. The pulpit was left unsupplied for the present, but we are expecting to hear some splendid sermons from members of the faculty of the College. Mr. Ballard will do pastoral work, conduct midweek prayer meeting, have charge of Junior church services and serve as Superintendent Sabbath school as heretofore.

The Ladies' Aid Society is serving dinner today (Tuesday) at the church to 50 members of N. C. Boards of Public Welfare in session here.

Our congregation will be well represented in the General Conference in Baltimore next May, the following having been elected delegates: Capt. A. M. Rankin, H. A. Moffitt, Geo. T. Penny, and Dr. R. M. Andrews.

According to the action of the last quarterly conference, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed next Sunday, November 13th.

Mrs. Geo. R. Brown of Reidsville was the guest of Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., and Mrs. S. P. Montgomery for a few days during Conference. We were pleased to know that the recent Conference honored three women by electing them as delegates to General Conference viz: Mesdames W. C. Hammer H. C. Nicholson, and George R. Brown. Mr. Roy Hutchison and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hutchison of Charlotte came up and spent the week-end with their sister, Mrs. J. A. Grey, and family.

The Senior Class of High Point College, 44 in number, is presenting a beautiful gate as a memorial, which is being built at the entrance to the campus. This gate will bear the names of these doners on the sides.

At the meeting yesterday the Home Missionary Society was very glad to welcome two new members, Mesdames Ross Davis and John C. Whitesell.

Mrs. L. J. Diffee returned Monday afternoon from a trip to Asheville and Blue Ridge.

Miss Alice Faulkner of Danville, Va., has returned home from a visit to friends in High Point and at the College. Miss Eugenia Williams of Greensboro, one of the Class of 1927, has been back at the College visiting old friends and her Alma Mater.

Orange Charge.—Greetings! Am pleased to be assigned to Orange for another year.

Much needs to be done. May we all work together for the best year of our existence.

May the Holy Spirit lead in all.

Regular appointments will begin second Sunday as follows: Chestnut Ridge 11:00 a.m.; Hebron, 3:00 p.m.

Sincerely,
B. M. WILLIAMS.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—First we want to express our thanks to the program committee, Mesdames Jones, for their untiring efforts in successfully putting over our Rally Day exercise. Everything was satisfactory except the offering. Of course $6.89 was very much appreciated.

We feel that our people in general need some real downright study and thereby become informed regarding things that are required of us Methodist Protestants. So many of us seem to be satisfied with paying pastor's salary. In fact the writer knows members who have offered to pay something on pastor's salary and upon learning that same was already paid they refused to pay anything making excuse like this: "I don't know where the money you call general interest A. C. B. and G. C. B. goes and I don't feel like paying to something I don't know anything about." Now isn't that pitiful? A condition like this reflects on stewards as well as others, but let's all study to show ourselves approved, and know why we must support all departments of our conference. Our regular church meeting was held for the election of officers and raising class book jointly with a rehearsal for Rally Day, therefore was well attended; the meeting proved very interesting.

Officers for ensuing year were elected as follows: Stewards—W. E. Jones, E. S. Stone, J. N. Jones, S. T. Kallam, J. D. Mikles, F. G.

Fowler, O. P. Jones, R. S., O. W., and I. G. Barber, and C. W. Allen. Church Treasurer—J. R. Stone; church trustees—O. F. Hauser, S. F. Mickey, F. G. Fowler, E. S. Stone, S. T. Lane; class leader—R. S. Barber; reporter to church paper—C. W. Allen.

Our Sunday school started the new year strong with 70 present, a collection of 94 cents and a birthday offering of 72 cents. We have resolved to average 100 during the winter months and also to start each Sunday on time absolutely. I expect to report every Sunday's attendance through the winter briefly. "Watch us grow" is our slogan. Mrs. E. S. Stone was present again Sunday after being away so long; we certainly are glad that she has recovered sufficiently to be out again.

Our next report will contain the names of all the officers and teachers of our Sunday school for ensuing year.

By reading the daily paper I have learned that Rev. S. W. Taylor was elected president of our Annual Conference succeeding Rev. A. G. Dixon. When I saw the headlines of the article stating that Rev. Mr. Taylor had been elected to the high position I instantly thought of a remark Brother Taylor made to one pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, while they were visiting in my home during the week of our revival meeting in 1926. Brother Taylor was helping Brother Hunter in the meeting and had preached several very strong sermons. After one of his very best 11 o'clock sermons the two preachers went to my home for dinner. After dinner we three were walking and came to a cool fountain of fresh water under the dense shade of several giant birch and oak trees located at the foot of a steep north hillside—a very comfortable place to pause on a hot July afternoon, was it not? While partaking of the fresh water Brother Taylor said, "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again. But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." Brother Hunter said to Brother Taylor: "Taylor, you are a pretty good preacher;" then he answered him and said, "Hunter, preaching is what I am trying to do, and if there is anything in all the world that I want to be more than anything else it is to be a good preacher; let's pray that we all may be efficient workers in this meeting." He asked that I lead the prayer which I did followed by prayer by Brother Hunter and concluded by a very deep and reverent prayer by Brother Taylor. There, in the quietness and beautiful shade, participating in the sweet companionship of these two men of God, I felt that I had rather have their friendship than all the riches in the universe. Of course he still has that same enthusiasm and will make a food president. Mrs. Allen says there is only one mistake checked against Brother Taylor and that was back in 1914 when he married her to C. W. Allen, but I don't consider that a mistake.

May God's blessing be with all Methodist Protestants. C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

P. S. We are trying to find out how many members of Mt. Zion that are taking the Methodist Protestant Herald. I want to kindly ask that every person that is a member of Mt. Zion M. P. Church Pinnacle and Mt. Zion charge drop me a postal card immediately telling me that you take the Herald. Please do this soon as you read this. Thank you for your co operation.

Siler City.—We were very glad to have our pastor, who has been away at Westminster Seminary, back with us last Sunday, October 30th. A large number was present at our morning services, both Sunday school and church service. Five of our number received Sunday school attendance certificates accompanied by the gold pin for perfect attendance during the last year. Those receiving certificates were: Mrs. J. A. Cooper, Miss Flossie Siler, Verdie Shaw Fox, Clarice Fox and Fannie Louise Poe. Mr. Gibbs brought us a very good message on the subject, "Our Love for God." We were favored with a beautiful solo by Mr. Turner from Burlington. The church officers for the coming year were also installed at the morning service.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Liberty Siler City charge was held at the Liberty church last Sunday at 2:30; Dr. Dixon presided over this meeting. The reports from both churches were very good. At this conference Siler City church sent in a request asking to be made a mission. But the most important thing was the brief talk by L. L. Wrenn expressing his appreciation of the pastor's work for the past two years. Mr. Curtis responded with a few words sanctioning everything Mr. Wrenn had said and the entire congregation did likewise by standing. Both churches voted unanimously for Rev. Mr. Gibbs' return. REPORTER.

Shiloh, Randolph Circuit.—On the fourth Sunday evening, the pastor, Rev. A. O. Lindley, delivered a very interesting sermon. His subject was, "What is the value of the church?"

New officers were celeted as follows: W. P. Pickett, class leader; J. S. Pickett, G. L. Whitaker, W. K. Hemphill; stewards: Eli Garrett, G. L. Whitaker, Julius Brown, Edd Jordan, Lee Jordan, Trustees: W. K. Hemphill; Sunday school superintendent: J. S. Pickett, assistant superintendent; Miss Gladys Pickett, organist; Miss Inez Burrows, reporter; A. L. Kime, Willie Kime, Charlie Hemphill, special stewards.

Our Christian Endeavor society holds its prayer meetings each Sunday evening at five o'clock. We cordially invite all the young people of the community to attend.

The Society entertained about forty young people of the community with a weinie roast, at the old Julian school house on Saturday night, October 22.

Our community was saddened by the death of one of our beloved members, Mrs. Margaret Kime Ledbetter, who passed away Saturday, November 5. Mrs. Ledbetter was the daughter of the late Christian and Lucy Kime, born November 22, 1827. In August, 1854 she was married to Wesley Ledbetter; to this union were born six children of which two now survive, Mrs. A. M. Hemphill, Julian, N. C., and C. A. Ledbetter, of Guilford College; also twenty-two grand-children and twenty-two great grand-children. Her husband departed this life sixteen years ago.

She joined Shiloh church at the age of twenty-one years, of which she remained a faithful and devoted member until death. In spite of her advanced age she attended church a few times this year. A short time before her death she said, "I will soon be at rest." If she had lived seventeen more days she would have been one hundred years old. She was the oldest member of Shiloh church, being a member for eighty years.

She was blessed with a fine memory as she could tell of incidents of four wars.

Funeral services were conducted at Shiloh M. P. church Monday morning at eleven o'clock by the pastor, Rev. A. O. Lindley, assisted by Dr. A. G. Dixon, former president of the M. P. Conference, Dr. R. Murphy Williams, pastor of the Presbyterian church of the Covenant, of Greensboro, and Rev. S. M. Rankins. The pallbearers were grandsons—G. C. Cox, C. A. Cox, W. P. Ledbetter, Dees Ledbetter, Grady Hemphill, and Charlie Hemphill The flower-girls were granddaughters and great-granddaughters—Mrs J. L. May, Vivian May, Jean May, Ruby Kanoy, Merle Kanoy, Mrs. C. H. Schull, Mattie Ledbetter and W. P. Ledbetter, Jr.

WHAT IS A TREE

What is the difference between a shrub and a tree? Experts of the Forest Service have answered the question as follows: A tree must be at least eight feet high and have a diameter of not less than two inches; otherwise it is a shrub.

BRIEF NOTES OF CONFERENCE

R. R. Ross, of Asheboro, made a brief speech, referring to the first Conference he attended 51 years ago at Moriah church. Only one person seen in that Conference, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, does he see in this Conference. He has watched the progress of the church for half a century with interest. He concluded his speech by presenting a gavel he had had made especially for use in this session of Conference. It was made of white ash, white to symbolize purity.

Among the accessions to our ministerial ranks are Rev. R. J. Tamblyn, of the Michigan Conference, who has for over three years served the Bellevue M. P. Church near Pittsburgh, Pa., and Rev. Mr. Truitt, who comes to us from the M. E. Church, South. There were several young men to enter the Conference course of study preparatory to the ministry.

President Taylor preached the ordination sermon at 11 o'clock on Sunday, after which four preachers were ordained; namely, G. W. Andrew, F. L. Gibbs, C. H. Hill, and C. E. Ridge.

The local attendance at Conference was large. The church auditorium was filled most of the time.

Rev. C. L. Spencer was kept from Conference by his illness. Conference offered special prayer for the sick.

Two new church organizations during the past year were reported. Kannapolis has organized a new church and has bought a lot and built a hut. At a point between Lexington and Spencer a new church has been formed with Rev. R. S. Troxler as pastoral supply and a new church of brick is under way. Both of these points are promising.

Rev. D. A. Braswell was not at Conference. His condition has become such that it was thought best to take him to Morganton Hospital for treatment.

Congressman W. C. Hammer is a member of our Asheboro church. He was at home and was a frequent attendant at the sessions of our Conference.

Retiring President Dixon and incoming President Taylor both made speeches befitting the occasion. President Dixon has been very active and has accomplished much, and Brother Taylor enters upon the work of the executive with vigorous determination and whole-hearted consecration.

Conference had its most emotional experience when three of its ministers asked to be superannuated. These were Brothers Holmes, Pike, and Moton. The thought of the retirement of these men so long in the Conference and so highly esteemed for their works' sake, and also for their personal character moved many to tears. Many came forward to shake hands with these brethren and to fall upon their necks and embrace them. All hearts were touched by this display of genuite affection between the brethren.

The presence of a number of teachers and students from High Point College and their introduction to Conference in a body made a good impression on Conference. A college song was sung and the college yell was yelled.

Rev. A. O. Lindley and Rev. A. G. Dixon were called away from Conference Monday forenoon to conduct the funeral of Mrs. Margaret Ledbetter at Shiloh church near Julian. Mrs. Ledbetter was the mother of the late Rev. J. A. Ledbetter of our Conference and would have been 100 years old had she lived two or three weeks longer. Her descendants had begun to make preparations to celebrate her completion of 100 years.

Rev. J. W. Hulin was kept from Conference part of the time by funerals.

Rev. J. E. Pritchard served as Conference host in a most satisfactory manner. He seems so have neglected no detail in his preparation for his numerous guests.

A history of our Conference was prepared and read by Rev. J. E. Pritchard, Conference Historian, on the night set apart to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the beginning of our Conference. This will be published. Brother Pritchard was re-elected Conference Historian.

Pastor Furr reported for the North Charlotte church that it is two and a half miles from First church, has 43 members, has bought a new lot and sold the old lot, but can still use the tabernacle built upon it until they build on the new lot. He regards the opening a good one.

Rev. A. G. Dixon has served 21 years as a member of the Board of Church Extension.

Following rousing addresses by Dr. Dixon and President Taylor a special offering was received for Church Extension. Over two thousand dollars were pledged or paid.

Rev. J. Clyde Auman was elected treasurer of special funds as follows: Delegates' Expenses to the General Conference, Centenary Gratitude Gift, and special fund for our Board of Church Extension.

The place of next Annual Conference will be decided by the Standing District Committee. Invitations were received from High Point and Asheboro, but other points will have the advantage of these for an obvious reason. Send your invitation to Rev. C. H. Whitaker, Tobaccoville, N. C. The time of meeting is Wednesday before the first Sunday in November, 1928.

Several brethren pledged $100 each to the special Church Extension Fund and President Taylor was authorized to continue the appeal for this fund. Church extension is held up by lack of means.

An agent of the Prudential Life Insurance Company gave information to Conference regarding rates and terms of group insurance. Brother Phillips of our Conference also gave information from another company.

Rev. J. T. Sisk came to Conference, but was not well and asked to be excused before the session was ended.

Bro. J. D. Payne of Alamance county raises fine flowers which he gives to the sick about him. He brought a large bouquet of dahlias to Conference and presented them to the body. He immediately asked to be excused because of illness in his home. The Conference voted him their keen appreciation of his beautiful gift.

Dr. and Mrs. S. K. Spahr, of Grace church, Greensboro, were visitors at Conference. Dr. Spahr came to serve Grace church for a few months, and his service was so pleasing to the congregation that at their request it was continued year afer year until four years have passed. Bro. Spahr realizes that he is no longer a young man, and he most gracefully retires that the church may have the service of a pastor who still has the vigor of young manhood. It is a means of grace to talk with him and learn how he feels about retiring. I would that we all might learn how to grow old so gracefully and with such cheerful acquiescence in the order of Providence. He and Mrs. Spahr will have long after they have gone from Greensboro the warm affection of many Greensboro people and of others of our state who have come in contact with them.

Mrs. J. N. Garrett was a visitor at Conference. She is the widow of Rev. J. N. Garrett and a granddaughter of Henry Walser, chief promoter of the building of Yadkin College.

The new church at Kannapolis offers to pastor a parsonage and $600 towards salary. This church was organized only a few months ago as a result of some meetings held by Brother Hendry of Concord.

A memorial service was held Sunday afternoon in honor of Rev. D. A. Highfill, Rev. J. H. Stowe, Mrs. J. H. Bowman, Mrs. D. A. Braswell, and Mrs. D. I. Garner.

Rev. J. S. Williams, Good Samaritan chaplain of Asheville, tendered greetings to the M. E. Conference in Asheville. He then came to our Conference and spent several days. His service to the sick and unfortunate in Asheville is so highly esteemed that he seems to hold a permanent bishopric.

Rev. Lawrence Little was present for a while, but duties elsewhere took him away.

President Andrews of High Point College made report showing progress in the work of that institution, but not trying to conceal the fact that the college must be provided for in the way of adequate endowment before it is safe. Until that is done a sword will hang over the head of the institution.

On Children's Home Day Brother George T. Penny made a speech that highly pleased. Some one said he did not know whether Brother Penny should be classed with the ministers or the laymen.

Members of the Conference were shocked to hear that Brother J. C. Penny had been shot by a drinking man, but were relieved to hear further that the wounds were only superficial flesh wounds. Brother Penny was trying to collect rent from the man who took offense and shot three times, hitting Brother Penny each time. He got in his car and drove to a hospital to have his wounds attended to.

Miss Dr. Fleagle was called to go to Winston to address a meeting in Maple Springs church. She went thence to Baltimore. Miss Forrest went to Alabama to continue her field work for the W. F. M. S.

"GLORY THAT WAS GREECE" TO BE DUG UP AT ATHENS

The most important, and the most expensive, archaeological excavations in the history of the world are to be made at Athens, Greece. The purpose of the excavations is to uncover the ruins of ancient Athens. For hundreds of years before the birth of Christ that city was the world's center of learning and art. Its forum and market place—called the Agora—was the place where the ancient Greeks met in public assembly. Around this market place were the chief public buildings, libraries and temples. In those buildings and in the open spaces of the Agora were grouped the marvelous statues and the wonderful paintings of the "Age of Pericles"—the "golden age" of Greece. (Pericles was born 498 B. C., and died 429 B. C.)

Undoubtedly the excavations will bring to light ruins of the ancient buildings and many interesting statues and other works of Athens, engraved on stone, will be found. The work may disclose facts that are not now known in Greek history and art. Perhaps present-day books on ancient history may have to be rewritten!

The excavations are to be under the control of the American School of Classical Studies in Athens and the Greek government. The total cost is estimated at $2,500,000. All but a quarter of a million of that total has already been raised. An American, whose name has not been made public, has promised $2,250,000 for the work and has already given $250,000. The rest will be given as it is needed, provided that the Greek government gives its full co-operation. That government has already set aside twenty-five acres for excavation.

The land is owned by private persons and must be bought before the excavations begin. It is estimated that the cost of this land will be at least a million dollars. Probably actual work will not begin before 1929. The owners are asking high prices for their land and will probably carry their cases to the Greek courts. However, the Greek government will probably insist that the owners receive only fair and reasonable prices for their property. —Current Events.

—Great Britain has opened the exploitation of the enormous salt and potash deposits of the Dead Sea to corporations of any nationality. Semi-official estimates place the value of such minerals at 1,267 billions of dollars.

MARRIED

Fry-Summers

At 6:30 o'clock in the evening of October 19 the writer united in marriage Miss Irene Fry and Mr. James E. Summers, both of Greensboro.

After a bridal tour for a few days they have returned and will make their home for the present with the bride's father and mother. J. D. WILLIAMS.

Stockard-Routh

On Friday morning at 10 o'clock, October 14th, Miss Helen Stockard became the bride of Mr. Charles S. Routh. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few relatives and friends at the home of the writer.

Mrs. Routh is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Stockard of Greensboro and Mr. Routh is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Routh of Greensboro. They are both active members of West End M. P. church and will make their home in Greensboro.

J. D. WILLIAMS.

HIGHEST AND LOWEST TOWNS

What are the highest and lowest towns in the United States? Leadville, Colo., is the highest. Its altitude is 10,185 feet. Brawley, in the Imperial Valley of California, is the lowest. It is 112 feet below sea level. Both towns have about the same population. According to the 1920 Census, Brawley has a population of 5,389, as compared with Leadville's 5,000.

The highest town is older than the lowest town. Leadville dates back to 1860, when gold was discovered there. Later silver, copper and zinc were discovered. Leadville has always been a mining town. Brawley, on the other hand, did not come into being until 1900. It is the center of a rich fruit district. Oranges, lemons, grapefruit, limes, citrons, figs, Japanese persimmons and other fruits are grown in abundance near Brawley.—Current Events.

THE NEW LANKFORD BILL

Before the 69th Congress adjourned, Congressman Lankford of Georgia, gave notice on the floor of the house that he would reintroduce this Bill for a Sunday Rest Day Law for the District of Columbia, as soon as the Seventieth Congress convenes.

With this in mind, the various organizations interested in the preservation of the civil Sabbath, met in conference at the Fort Pitt Hotel in Pittsburgh, Pa., in June of this year and formed a united council looking toward a more perfect co-operation in this work in the future.

—Dr. Charles H. Levermore, winner of the $50,000 Bok Peace Prize (in 1924), died suddenly at Berkeley, California, October 20, at the age of seventy-one. He received the $50,000 prize, offered by Edward W. Bok, former editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, for "the best practicable plan by which the United States may co-operate with other nations to achieve and preserve the peace of the world."

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

BURGESS

Silently, one by one, these loved and treasured friends of ours are stealing away; one day they are in our midst in buoyant life and strength, and on the next their place is vacant; the familiar faces disappear, and new ones come about us until at times we seem to be living in another world. Our congregation has again suffered a sore bereavement in the loss of a highly valued member and greatly loved friend, Mrs. Jessie P. Burgess, wife of the late Mr. William D. Burgess, who died at the family residence, 201 Lindsay street last Tuesday afternoon, September 27th, after an illness of several months' duration. A daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. William Ledbetter, Mrs. Burgess was born in Chatham county May 19, 1860. She was happily married to Mr. William D. Burgess in Greensboro October 11, 1883. The family moved to High Point in 1898, occupying a residence on North Main street. For a period of five years they lived in Mt. Airy, N. C., but moved back to High Point in 1920 to the residence on Lindsay street. Suddenly and almost without warning Mr. Burgess died in November, 1921, while on a visit to his daughter in Charlotte. Mrs. Burgess felt this severe blow most keenly, and soon began to fail, never regaining her former vigor and strength. She suffered from high blood pressure, and toward the end almost lost her eye sight.

She was converted at a tender age of girlhood, and united with the Liberty Grove Methodist Protestant church near Liberty, N. C., and when the family moved to High Point she, her husband, and other members of the household identified themselves with the First church, retaining membership there until the day of her death. She loved her church and was loyal to it in every way; was a member of the two Missionary Societies and the Ladies' Aid Society. She always attended services whenever her health permitted.

The following sons and daughters survive her: Messrs. Don M., Wm. Worth, J. Glenn, J. Harvey, and W. Ray Burgess of High Point and Hunter G. Burgess of Durham; Miss Blanche Burgess, Mrs. C. H. Bass, Mrs. H. C. Horrox, and Mrs. H. L. Shury of High Point. One sister also survives, Mrs. J. H. Johnson of Graham.

Funeral services were conducted at the home on Thursday morning by Dr. Geo. R. Brown of Reidsville, assisted by Dr. A. G. Dixon of Greensboro, and her present pastor, Rev. E. Lester Ballard. Dr. Brown paid a beautiful tribute to her life and character, and said that when a father is taken the head of the family goes, but when the mother leaves, the heart of the home goes away, and ever afterward we yearn "for the touch of a vanished hand, and the sound of a voice that is stilled." Too much praise cannot be given to these self-sacrificing, God-fearing mothers of ours, who devote their strength, their talents, their very lives to their husbands, children, and homes.

"The bravest battle that ever was fought?
Shall I tell you where, and when?
On the maps of the world you will find it not,
But 'twas fought by the mothers of men."

Mrs. Buurgess was a faithful wife, a tender, devoted mother, a consistent Christian. She has made a worthy contribution to the world in her large family of splendid daughters and sons, "who arise up and call her blessed." May their mother's God heal their wounded hearts and bind up their grief-stricken spirits in these sad days and lonely nights. "Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies. Strength and honor are her clothing; and she shall rejoice in time to come. Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain, but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised."

MRS. R. L. PICKENS.

Robert Claude Sharpe, Jr.

"There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
It bears our best loved things away,
And then we call them "dead."

"O, not in cruelty, not in wrath,
The reaper came that day;
T was an angel visited this green earth
And took our flower away."

The flower plucked, when the angel came recently among us, was, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Sharpe—Robert Cluade, Junior, born July 24, 1927, taken August 7, 1927.

To relinquish so priceless a treasure seems indeed hard since this babe was the first of the family to be transplanted to God's flower garden above. We can not understand why these things must be a part of life—yet we humbly submit to Him who errs not. We are comforted with the knowledge that one more jewel shines in His crown—up yonder.

Heaven should seem more sweet since Robert Claude is there, a beacon light, beckoning father, mother, sister and brother on to the shining shore, where Jesus reigns eternally as Sovereign and Friend.

The immortal words of the poet seem oppportune here:

"Jesus has taken a beautiful bud,
Out of our garden of love,
Borne it away to the city of God,
Home of the angels above.

Full blooming flowers alone will not do,
Some must be young and ungrown;
So the frail buds He is gathering, too,
Beautiful gems of His throne.

Fathers and mothers, weep not or be sad.
Still on the Savior rely;
You shall behold them again, and be glad,
Beautified flowers on high.

Blooming in beauty in Heaven are they,
Blooming for you and for me;
Follow the Lord, tho' the city be far,
'Till our bright blossoms we see.

Gathering buds, gathering buds,
Wonderful care will be given;
Jesus is gathering, day after day,
Buds for the palace of Heav'n.

Funeral services were conducted from the home near Efland, by the pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, and interment made in the Methodist Protestant Church cemetery at Efland.

Tucker

Once more Calvary Church has been called upon to give up by death one of its best members. This time it was Brother C. L. Tucker, who was called to his reward. Brother Tucker was taken sick some ten days before he died, October 22nd. Pneumonia was the cause of his death. He would have been sixty-six years old if he had lived until the 24th of October. Brother Tucker first united with the Pleasant Garden Methodist Episcopal Church, then later joined with his wife at Grace Church. Then when Calvary church was organized he became a charter member. He was a quiet, faithful member. When his health permitted he was found in his place at the services. The church will miss him very much.

Surviving in addition to his wife are three sisters, Mrs. W. F. Low of Greensboro; Mrs. J. F. Ross, Pleasant Garden; and Mrs. R. A. Brown, Atlanta, Ga.; one daughter, Mrs. F. L. Wallace, of Johnson City, Tenn.; two sons, Paul and Joseph of Greensboro; and three brothers, C. A. Tucker, Greensboro; E. R. Tucker, Pleasant Garden; and J. W. Tucker, Dallas, Texas.

Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, assisted by Dr. R. M. Andrews and Dr. C. E. Hodgin, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 at Calvary church The largest congregation that has ever gathered at Calvary was present for the services. The house was completely filled, and the people were standing in the vestibules and out on the walk in front. This great congregation and the large number of beautiful floral designs constituted a tribute that is paid only to a good man by his neighbors and friends. After the service at the church his body was carried to Pleasant Garden where interment was made in the local cemetery.

Sister Tucker, the children, and all the relatives have the sincere sympathy and prayers of the church and many others in this time of great loss. May the God of all comfort and keep you in this time of severe trial. And in your bereavement remember the words of the poet:

"There is a world above
Where parting is unknown;
A whole eternity of love
Form'd for the good alone,
And faith beholds the dying here
Translated in that happier sphere."

Allen

George Walter Allen, son of Nathan and Eliza Allen, was born November 20, 1877. He departed this life October 2, 1927.

Brother Allen was born in Moore county, N. C., but early in life his family removed to Kimesville, and it is here that the deceased grew to manhood. As a boy he attended Mt. Pleasant Methodist Protestant Church, and early in life became a Christian and united with that church. His membership remained there until his death.

In 1900, June 3, he was happily married to Miss Emma Suits, daughter of William and Mary Suits. Five children were born to bless this union, four of whom survive. The living children are Hermon, Arthur, Lewis, and Mrs. C. F. Loy. About four years ago the family came from Belmont to live in Burlington.

Brother Allen was a church goer, though he seldom had the privilege of attending services in his own church. He enjoyed going to church, and was an attentive and earnest worshiper. For six months before his death he had shown a marked religious interest. The deceased was unknown to the writer, but those who did know him feel sure that he was prepared for the summons, which came suddenly Sunday morning, October 1. And it is just this assurance that the heart needs for a time like this.

The funeral was held in Belmont church, conducted by the pastor of the deceased, Rev. George F. Millaway, assisted by the writer. Interment was in Belmont cemetery.

Our hearts go out in sympathy for the bereaved family, and we pray that comforting grace may abound towards them until the day of their eternal reunion.

S. W. Taylor,
By Request of Brother Millaway.

Mrs. Mary A. Payne, aged 87 years, four months, 13 days, widow of Joseph Payne, died at her home four miles west of High Point, Wednesday morning, October 19, 1927, following an illness of several weeks. She was born in Davidson county and was the daughter of the late Philip Clinard, and Inez Clinard.

In 1867 Mrs. Payne was married to Joseph Payne, who died November 19, 1921. For over 60 years she had been a faithful member of Mt. Pleasant M. P. Church and was very active in all church work until the time of her death.

Surviving are four sons and one daughter. George W. Payne, P. Lee Payne and J. C. Payne of High Point, and W. D. Payne, and Annie Payne of the home place. One sister, Mrs. Eliza Collett.

Funeral services were conducted on Thursday, October 20, 1927, at 11 o'clock at Mt. Pleasant church by R. S. Troxler, pastor, and Rev. Charles P. Coble, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, High Point.

Flower-bearers were as follows: Ruth Payne, Evelyn Payne, Violet Payne, Mildred Swaim, Eula Swaim, Sada Swaim, Zelma Hayworth, Wilma Hayworth, Mrs. Fred Ridge, Mrs. W. T. Payne, and Mrs. Harvey Hoover.

Pallbearers were as follows—Jerome Collett, Walter Collett, Clay Craven, Birch Craven, Row Craven, and E. S. Welborn.

Remains were laid to rest in the M. P. Pleasant cemetery to wait the resurection of the dead.

Card of Thanks

We take this means of expressing our heartfelt thanks and appreciation of the kind, helpful service rendered us by the good friends and neighbors, who so kindly and sympathetically assisted us in every way possible. No greater kindness could be rendered by any people during the days of our sore bereavement and distress in the loss of our mother and grandmother. Our most sincere appreciation to those who presented so many beautiful, costly flowers that literally covered the grave in which her body rests. May God abundantly bless each and every one.

CHRISTMAS FOR PINE RIDGE

Friends are asking what we will need for Christmas.

At the close of our day School for the Christmas holiday, we have a tree and treat for our 150 students. Then later during the Christmas season we want to arrange treats for at least four different Sunday Schools.

We can buy the candy, nuts, etc. at wholesale prices and so it would seem practical to send contributions of money for this fund.

If our friends want to send other gifts to our boys and girls, would suggest toilet articles of various kinds, handkerchiefs, stockings, sizes 8 to 10 and socks, 10-11, combs, tooth brushes and paste, work gloves, tape, sewing thread, medicines such as salves, laxatives, disinfectants, adhesive tape, etc.; stationery, such as pens, pencils, tablets, notebooks, etc.

We can always make good use of canned fruit, dried fruit, pickles, staple groceries.

Used clothing in good condition, especially for children. These are given away when we find need. The surplus is sold in our store and the proceeds put into our Scholarship-Maintenance Fund to help boys and girls who otherwise could not be in school.

How to Ship

Please send freight shipments to Slade, Ky. Do not send anything by express.

We still prefer shipments by parcel post when not too large, direct to Pine Ridge, Wolfe County, Ky., and make plain on your contribution, the name and address to whom we should write acknowledgement.

ALVAN DREW SCHOOL,
Thos. R. Woodford, Supt.

PINE RIDGE, KENTUCKY

We are very glad to report a very successful, helpful meeting held at Alvan Drew School October 11 to 21, with Dr. E. D. Stone of Baltimore, preaching. We are very sure the lives as well as the words of Dr. and Mrs. Stone have made an indelible impression for good upon many of our young people. There were about thirty decisions for Christ. Twenty-eight have joined our church so far.

We are anxious to secure a supply of our own Church Hymnals for use in our High School Auditorium. Our Pittsburgh Publishing House has very kindly donated about forty copies. We need about two hundred. If some of our churches are buying a supply of the new Centenary edition and have some copies of the old edition to spare, we would appreciate it if they would send them to us by parcel post.

We are very thankful that another unit has recently been added to our light and power plant, and also a new pump is now being installed so that life will be made more satisfactory at Pine Ridge by a considerably increased supply of light and water.

You are helping God to fulfill Phil. 4:19, and we are grateful to Him and you.

Sincerely,
THOS. R. WOODFORD, Superintendet.

CENSUS OF RELIGIOUS BODIES: 1926

Unitarians

Washington, D. C., September 24, 1927.—The Department of Commerce announces that, according to the returns received, there were 353 active Unitarian Churches in the United States in 1926, with 60,152 members. These figures are exclusive of 18 federated churches, each consisting of a Unitarian unit combined with a unit of some other denomination. These federated churches, which are more or less closely affiliated with the Unitarian denomination, reported a total membership of 2,838.

In addition to the 353 active churches whose membership is included in the total given above, reports were received concerning 45 Unitarian Churches that were said to be dormant or discontinued or holding summer services only. The churches holding summer services only were omitted from the tabulation because their members are already included for the most part in the membership of churches at their places of permanent residence.

In 1916, at the time of the last preceding decennial census of Religious Bodies, there were reported 411 Unitarian Churches, with 82,515 members. These totals presumably included a few federated churches, though the movement towards the federation of churches of different denominations had not made very great progress in 1916.

The total expenditures in 1926, as reported by 344 Unitarian Churches, amounted to $3,418,975, including $3,120,816 for current expenses and $255,759 for benevolences. The total expenditures reported in 1916 by 369 churches were $1,485, 556. The value of church property (including church edifices, furniture, etc., but not including parsonages-, as reported by 335 Unitarian Churches for 1926 was $27,478,554. The corresponding value reported by 393 churches for 1916 was $15,247,349.

Of the 353 churches reporting in 1926, 296 were located in urban territory (incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more-, and 57 were in rural areas. Of the total membership 55,445 were in the urban churches and 4,707 in the rural churches; and of the total expenditures the urban churches reported $3,276,692 and the rural churches $142,283. The value of church property reported by 279 urban churches was $26,238,654 and that reported by 56 rural churches was $1,239,900.

Sunday schools were reported by 317 Unitarian Churches in 1926, with 3,025 officers and teachers and 19,722 scholars. The Unitarian Churches in 1916 reported 3,064 Sunday school officers and teachers and 19,675 scholars.

Appeals for Our Gratitude Gifts

Giving gifts is in order at this season of the year. It is a time for free-will offerings. The harvest season is over and men are enjoying the fruit of the fields. God's gifts to us prompt us to give to others more in need than we. There are the poorer than we whose needs appeals to us. If we do not regard them with sympathy and do not try to relieve them, we may well doubt the quality of our gratitude. Jesus said, "The poor ye have with you always, and whensoever ye will you can do them good." If we do not do them good at this special season of thanksgiving, when will we do them good? Surely we will remember with substantial help during the weeks now passing.

Then there come to our ears the cries of the widow and the orphan, especially the orphan. Our own orphanage at High Point makes special appeal at this Thanksgiving time. "One day's income" is asked for. Who would begrudge the orphans this sum? And how much it would help if all our people would practice this rule! More buildings could be built, more orphans could be housed and fed and trained.

Then there comes to us this year the voice of the Methodist Protestant Church, approaching the completion of her hundredth year, and calling modestly for a gratitude gift of $100,000. This is a gift we have never been permitted to give before and will never be aske dto give again. Before the coming of that May birthday shall we not gladly and deliberately make this special gratitude gift to God for the church we so love? When the fair form of the Methodist Protestant Church appeared in the world the great Thomas H. Stockton beheld and exclaimed, "Never has the ecclesiastical would seen a form so fair!" Let us give thanks and thank-offerings for such a church.

Part of Preachers in Calling Preachers

God calls men to preach. No inferior call will suffice. But sometimes God calls men through men after He has selected them. God selected Elisha to be a prophet in Israel, but called him through Elijah. When Elijah cast his mantle over Elisha the latter became aware of the divine selection. Any pastor may have in his flock some young man whom God has selected for the Christian ministry but who as yet is not conscious of the divine call. His attention may never have been directed to the question whether he should become a preacher of the Gospel. Whose especial duty is it to bring this matter to his serious attention? Clearly it is the duty of his pastor. The pastor may have no intimation of God's purpose to make the young man a minister, but he can reach the young man regarding this matter by his references to it in the pulpit. A sermon occasionally on the subject will enable the pastor to set all his people thinking as to their place and work in the church. One good time to preach such a sermon is "Men for the Ministry Day." So important is this matter that our denominational board of education has appointed this day and is asking that it be observed by our ministers generally. Then in some instances a personal word from the pastor to some young man may be the first step in leading him into the ministry. Some years ago the editor of this paper heard a young layman speak at a Sunday school convention. We were impressed with his ability and after the meeting we said to him: "Did anyone ever suggest to you that you ought to enter the ministry?" He said, "No." We said to him: "I believe that you could do the work if you were called to it." Today that young man is one of our most successful pastors. A word that will set a young man to thinking sharply about what God would have him do may be spoken by his pastor and be of great help in leading that young man to his true place.

This Thanksgiving Day

To the thoughtful Christian every day is thanksgiving day. The Christian realizes that God is daily bestowing favors and he appreciates them and lifts up his heart in thanksgiving to God. But this Thanksgiving Day is different. On this day the Christian joins with his fellow-Christians in a tribute of thanksgiving to God for favors that God sends upon all. This is a day of united thanksgiving. Hence our President exhorts us to repair to our accustomed places of worship and there together recognize God's goodness to us all and offer to him the incense of our prayers and our gratitude. Our individual thanksgiving must be pleasing to God, but surely this combined thanksgiving must be more pleasing. And if we combine with our united thanksgiving a united offering of help to the unfortunate and the needy, surely it will be still more pleasing to our Heavenly Father, for thus we prove that we have His spirit and are indeed His children. There are many ways to spend Thanksgiving Day, but surely the best way is to make it a day of real thanksgiving to God and of gift-giving to men. The beauty of the day is marred by making it a day of mere feasting and self-indulgence.

The Time to Complain

The stationing committee of the Annual Conference is made up of men, fallible men, and there is possibility of its making mistakes, however careful it may be. Hence in our church polity there is provided a committee of appeals to consider appeals from the decisions of the stationing committee. The time to appeal to this committee is before Conference adjourns. It is manifestly improper to wait until after Conference and then rush into the church paper with complaints. The editor and readers of the church paper may sympathize with you but they cannot help you. A public discussion of personal differences is not edifying. Experience has shown it to be better to have committees to adjust differences rather than to try to do it by public discussion.

MONUMENTAL THOUGHTS AND WORDS

By Rev. Luther K. Long

It is a great privilege to be living within comparatively easy reach of Washington, D. C. It is inspiring to view the noble buildings of the capitol city, the wide streets, the extensive parks, and the many and varied monuments and memorials.

The Union Station, which was built by the railroads with the co-operation of Congress, is a most interesting place. On the plaza in front of the station is the monument to Christopher Columbus—greatest and most venturesome of the early travelers. I like to wander about the spacious interior of this magnificent structure studying the faces and manners of people; and I greatly enjoy lingering on the plaza as travelers hurry in or our of the station, just beginning or having completed their journey.

The inscriptions, high over the wide front, are of great interest as they lift the eye and the mind to high thoughts and lofty expressions. At the extreme left we read these words:

"He that would bring home the wealth of the Indies must carry the wealth of the Indies with him. So it is in traveling, a man must carry knowledge with him if he would bring home knowledge."

At the extreme right we read these wise admonitions:

"Let all the ends thou aimest at be thy country's, thy God's, and truth's. Be noble and the nobleness that is in other men, sleeping but not dead, will rise in majesty to meet thine own."

On the wide panels between the extreme right and left are these three inscriptions in which recognition is given to the farm, mechanic arts, freedom, man's imagination, fire, and electricity. Note, also, that at the end of each is given a significant quotation from the Bible:

"The farm, best home of the family, main source of national wealth, foundation of civilized society, the natural Providence. The old mechanic arts, controlling new forces, build new highways for goods and men, override the ocean, and make the very ether carry human thought. 'The desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose.'"

"Sweetener of hut and hall, bringer of life out of nought, freedom, O fairest of all the daughters of time and thought. Man's imagination has conceived all numbers and letters, all tools, vessels and shelters, every art and trade, philosophy and poetry, and all polities. 'The truth shall make you free.'"

"Fire, greatest of discoveries, enabling man to live in various climates, use many foods, and compel the forces of nature to do his work. Electricity, carrying light and power, devourer of time and space, bearer of human speech over land and sea, greatest servant of man, itself unknown. 'Thou hast put all things under his feet.'"

I imagine that in the years to come many a weary world-trotter will be made a little better by reading these noble inscriptions; and multitudes of our own people, spending a few sight-seeing days in Washington, will gather from the reading of these words fresh courage to seek in life only those material things and those qualities of character that can be devoted to high and worthy uses.

—We are not at all sure that we shall have any possessions, anything of our own, in the future life, anything, consequently, to give away. So let us give while we can, and enjoy the best part of possession.—Jean Ingelow.

WHAT CHRIST DID FOR ME

By On Kin

How did I become a Christian? How did a black dog turn white? How did a wicked, drunken, and riotous young man turn sober and tranquil? These are questions which still perplex some of my old companions who used to drink and sin with me and some of whom are still drinking and sinning away their lives.

I went through the ceremony of baptism while a student in the Methodist Boys' High School at Rangoon, and not very long afterwards slid back and went through every possible experience of a sinner's life. I then had a spell of religion, turned into a Buddhist monk, turned out a layman again, and turned adrift into dissipation. I think it is best to pass over without any more comment this tragic chapter of my life and to come to the question of how I came to be converted by Christ; for it was He alone and no one else who could have worked so wonderful a change in me.

In the year 1916 I went to Pegu to teach in an Anglo-Vernacular Buddhist school and, instead, was landed in the Methodist Anglo-Chinese School, which was then in charge of Rev. B. M. Jones. There soon came a time when all the workers in the Mission gathered together at Pegu for a summer school. During the class meetings I was asked to interpret for two missionaries who did not then know enough Burmese to address the classes in that language. While interpreting the truths of the gospel, I felt myself being carried away into new fields of spiritual experience. It was the Spirit of Christ taking a firm hold of me. From that time my whole outlook on life was changed. I was then 22 years of age and was fired with an eager desire to break the news to my mother at home.

It is hardly possible for a Westerner to realize fully the disastrous consequences of the destruction of the social status of a convert in a Buddhist community. Society demands that a Burman to be a Burman must be a Buddhist. If he renounces his Buddhist religion, he alienates his nationality as well as his social rights, and all his relatives disown him.

I soon went home with the purpose of telling the story of my Saviour. But when I reflected how dearly my mother and my sisters loved me, I did not have the courage to break their hearts by telling them that I belonged to Christ. I came back to my work and a few weeks later wrote to my mother intimating to her the fact that I had been converted to Christianity. About a week later, two Buddhist monks sent by my mothers came to preach me back to Buddhism. They gave a fine display of their philosophy and argumentative powers but could not erase from my soul the fact that I was saved by Christ. They fought as hard as their lives were worth, and for once they had met their watch. I showed them how Jesus Christ had transformed my life. I told them that the evil things I once loved, now I hated; and the spiritual things I once discarded, now I loved. They went back thoroughly disappointed and told my mother that my case was hopeless, and urged her to count me as one dead and gone.

When the school closed for the long vacation, I was ready to go home. But was I strong enough to stand the opposition that was awaiting me and to testify to my people the saving power of my Saviour? I believed I was. I prayed that I might be. Upon my arrival at Twante, I was welcomed by the family with glad hearts and open arms. On that very night, my mother asked me to lie down beside her on a mattress, and talked to me lovingly as she used to do when I was a child. Then calmly yet seriously she asked me this question: "On Kin, is it true that you have become a Christian? Are you sincerely a Christian in the real sense of the word?" "Mother, yes," I said. All of a sudden, she stood up and stamped her foot on my back with so great a force that I became unconscious. I wish I had remained so that night. But soon, consciousness brought to my ears the wails and sobs of the family, who were weeping for one that was lost to them forever. It was a heartrending spectacle and in my agony I went out into the open night and kept a vigil with a heart in torture, as the family did with weeping.

Early next morning my mother noised abroad the news of my conversion to Christianity. My relatives discarded me; my friends shunned my company; all regarded me as an outcast and a vagabond. People taunted me. They spat out when I passed before their houses. The very sight of me tainted their eyes. But I did not care; I had Jesus with me. For did not Jesus say that he who loveth his father, mother, sister, brother, more than Him is not worthy of Him?

At one time, my mother took me to my brother, who had invited some well known and able speakers on religion. This attracted a large audience, which they hoped would frighten me into recantation. They opened up the discussion by asking me the reasons why I became a Christian. I answered bluntly that I used to drink liquor with that brother of mine before, and that I would never more do as my brother was doing then. Whereupon, with grinding teeth and clinched fists, my brother rushed towards me. I felt then that, but for Jesus, I should have challenged him to a fair fight and could have knocked him out in one round. Fortunately, my sister-in-law intervened and I was turned out of the house without much ado. Thus ended the elaborate preparations they had made to initiate me into the mysteries of the Buddhist religion.

I spent that night on a steamboat and came home the next morning. A few days afterwards I fell into the clutches of Satan through a love affair. I remember that on several occasions I, like Peter, wept bitterly every time I acted contrary to the Spirit of God. Somehow or other, I was given enough strength and courage to overcome these temptations.

At the beginning of the school year I was transferred from Pegu to the Methodist Anglo-Vernacular School at Syriam. A few months later, I was engaged to a lady teacher there, who is now my wife. A year later, I visited my native town, and there I saw a group of children running about the streets like helpless little vagabonds. The burden of their uplifht began to weigh upon my heart, and finally I besought the missionary to let me open a schol in my native town. I can well remember the remark made by the missionary that it would not be worth while for me to go back to my place and open a school, because a prophet has no power in his own town. I dissented from his view and urged him to let me try my plan out. He finally consented. We began our operations and soon won the confidence of the people. The school prospered, became self-supporting, and now has about 175 pupils in charge of eight teachers and is doing very good work for the community.

Two years after the opening of the new school, one day during the vacation my wife and I went to a village where a Baptist convention was being held. On the way, in a village called Twantewa the people were holding a festival to celebrate the cremation of a deceased Phongyi or Buddhist monk. Along with us on board the same launch was a troop of dancing girls hired by the people for that occasion. When these girls landed, who were to meet them but a group of yellow-robed monks all agog with fun? I was overwhelmed with surprise and sorrow to see such a thing; for, according to Buddhist canons, it was a deadly sin for a monk even to look at such a girl. Before me lay a great flock of sheep in the grip of wolves and hyenas, and yet if they chose, they could have the best Shepherd. Tears stole down my cheeks and I was convinced that Buddhism was not morally strong enough to save these people from the influence of evil. Turning to my wife, I said that if Buddhism stood between Christ and the people, I would take my share of striking it and strike it hard. This was a definite call of God for a better and a higher service. Leaving my wife and my dear little ones, I went to India to attend the Theological College and completed my course. The more I know of Christ, the stronger do I feel His transforming power.

As I look back with pain-ridden eyes into those early days when I was in open rebellion against God, I can vividly see that scarlet stream which ran down the cross enter into my very life-blood. When I picture myself standing at the foot of the cross, I just break out in awed and exultant exclamation, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God." In the strength of the "unsearchable riches of Christ," I will stand before sin and proclaim that sin can be destroyed; I will stand before sorrow and proclaim that sorrow can be transfigured; I will stand before the broken and perverted relationships of men and proclaim that they can be rectified. God help me. Amen.—Zion's Herald.

TOBACCO'S ASSAULT ON THE BRAIN

By Will. H. Brown

Every mental test made in educational institutions adds one more to the long list showing the disastrous effects of smoking. Prof. Everett V. Perkins, principal of a high school near Augusta, Maine, in making out a list of the 25 students with the highest records, found that the list contained but one smoker. Then he made out a list of the 25 students with the lowest records, and in this all but one were smokers.

He further found that the average scholarship of the smokers in the senior class for the first half of the year 1926 was 77, while the average for the non-smokers was 80 and 15-100. Professor Perkins truly says: "Smoking and scholarship do not go together at Cony High School." He might have truthfully added, "or anywhere else."

A bulletin published at Antioch College, at Yellow Springs, Ohio, contains a careful study made in the college, of students who smoke. Heavy smokers were at the bottom of the list in every test, while those who did not smoke were at the top, with the light smokers sandwiched in between. Smokers who remained in college as long as three years steadily declined in scholarship records. Non-smokers maintained a nearly uniform average. The report concludes with these words: "With these figures before us, it is hard to avoid the conclusion that smoking is actually a cause of mental inefficiency."

Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover well says: "Nearly every delinquent boy is a cigarette smoker. Cigarettes are a source of crime. To neglect crime at its source is a short-sighted policy unworthy a nation of our intelligence."

An enemy that assaults the brain, the body and the soul should be exterminated.

From Conference President

Housed

We are now comfortably housed at 126 Tate Street, Greensboro, and after a little time we hope to get the home-feeling in our new environment. The breaking away from old friends is not an easy matter; there is compensation for it, though in the privilige and pleasure of making new acquaintances and acquiring new friends. We shall not forget the old friends, nor fail, we trust, in the pleasure of making new ones. And to both our old and our new friends we want to say that the latch-string is on the outside. Pull it; pull it often.

On the Field

On last Saturday, the 19th, we were with Brother George L. Curry and the Haw River people in their first quarterly conference. All the five churches were represented, we believe, and a splendid spirit of harmony and progressiveness was in evidence. We predict that Brother Curry and his people are going to have a happy and prosperous year. He is already laying plans for the work, and expects early in the year to get a good start along all lines. Besides sending trucks to move their pastor, they raised his salary $350, making the promise for the year $1,750. Rev. W. D. Reed was present, and rendered timely and efficient help in the conference. We are confidently expecting great things of Haw River charge this year.

Thanksgiving

Perhaps this happy feast will come and go before some of our readers receive this message. But even now we are praying for a Thanksgiving Day that will make God a little more real and blessed to us all, as we meditate upon His goodness and render worship and gratitude to Him for His unfailing mercies. I presume that the usual Thanksgiving offering will be taken for the Children's Home. For this worthy cause, give the earnings of a day, and more, if your prosperity makes this possible. I hope to see the time when it will be the practice of every charge to hold a Thanksgiving service on Thanksgiving Day. Such practice would intensify our gratitude and be pleasing to Him from Whom all blessings flow.

Saddened

The tragic passing of Brother W. A. Lovett, of the Asheboro church, has filled us with grief for the loss to the church there and to his dear family. Our hearts are touched in tender sympathy for the stricken loved ones. May a gracious and loving Providence give to them abundant comfort.

Finance

Treasurer V. W. Idol reports a few charges making payments on budgets. Due recognition will be given to these charges in our report next week.

Pray

The one thing that is uppermont in our minds and deepest in our hearts is a quickening of the spiritual life of the church. We do not in the least minimize other needs, but we do recognize this as paramount. We are therefore calling on the church to pray, and pray much, and pray without ceasing, that a great spiritual awakening may come, and come speedily to the church. I am confident that nothing would please God more than to hear this prayer.

Unusual

We did this unusual thing Sunday—attended church twice, and did not preach. It is a rare privilege for a minister to receive spiritual refreshing by listening to someone else. At 11 a. m. it was our good pleasure to worship with the Grace congregation, and to hear the initial sermon of their new pastor, Rev. R. J. Tamblyn. The attendance was large, and the impressions of the sermon and other parts of the worship program were pleasing and helpful. We hope and pray for pastor and people a happy relationship, and that the church may go forward with increasing usefulness. Doctor and Mrs. Spahr have greatly endeared themselves to the Grace congregation and their stay with the people there will always be looked upon as a benediction.

At night we went to Calvary, expecting to hear a good sermon by the new pastor, Rev. C. W. Bates. We missed this, and had the privilege instead of enjoying an appropriate and well rendered Thanksgiving program by children from the Children's Home. We are always glad to hear these children, and to contemplate the useful men and women that they are to be. The evidences of care and training are unmistakably stamped upon them, and one cannot but feel, in looking into the faces of these happy and promising children, that the Home fully justifies all that it costs to maintain it. Superintendent Allman was present, and made some fitting remarks before the offering was received. We hope this was large. Brother Gerringer, the retiring pastor, was very faithful and successful in his work at Calvary, and the people will long and affectionately remember him. Brother Bates has been received with open hands and hearts, and we predict that the good work started there will go forward happily and steadily under his consecrated leadership.

IS PROHIBITION COMING OR GOING?

There came into this office yesterday a man from a city on the Ohio river—a city of about 400,000 population. He is a prosperous tobacco manufacturer. A certain popular brand of cigarets is among the products of his factories. He has been more or less active in politics. He is a good fellow in the better sense of that much-abused designation. He was here to attend the debate which was held last night at Soldier field.

We talked about that; about the tobacco business; about politics, and finally the conversation drifted around to prohibition. Said he:

"In ten or fifteen years this country will have forgotten about liquor. I used to want a few drinks every day. When the 18th amendment was enacted I stocked up well. For a while I kept up the old habits, but now I don't take a drink oftener than once in six months. I just don't think about it any more, and that's true of my friends.

"It has made a big difference to the workers in my factory. Fellows who couldn't own a white collar now have their own homes paid for. They are buying gasoline with the money they used to spend on booze, and the family that didn't have shoes to walk in when the saloons were busy, now goes driving in the car every Sunday.

"No, sir, you can't induce me to vote for liquor to come back in any way, shape or fashion. The only vote I'll cast on that question would be to make the law stronger."

And there are thousands of men throughout America who have reached a like conclusion for a like reason. We who live in the big cities, where, in the nature of things, the outlawed liquor interests will make their last stand, do not realize to what an extent America is really drying up in the smaller cities, the towns and villages.

Here is the testimony of a different sort of witness, but in his own way no less competent—a preacher, John Andrew Holmes, who writes in the current issue of the Congregationalist.

"Having lived my entire half-century of life with not a single full year's exception in dry towns and cities from Massachuetts to California, in every one of which there was nullification by the authorities and law-breaking by the people—bad enough in themselves but cunningly magnified by false propaganda until the very elect were deceived and discouraged—but in every one of which the cause of law and order triumphed in the end, I call upon all enemies of drink to bear up, keep up the fight and wait patiently for God. All the present hue and cry, with the horrible stories of atrocities which we always have to hear in such times of war, is 'old stuff' to me. I heard it for years in a township, but we muddled through it. I heard it for years in a county, but it died down. I heard it for years in a city, but it was finally conceded that the city should be run without license money. I heard it for years in a state, but it did not last a generation. Now that I hear it in a larger area, how well I know its raucous voice! That voice, however loud, cannot deceive me."

The cigaret manufacturer and the preacher are agreed. Each from his own viewpoint sees the same thing happening. Prohibition is coming, not going; it is winning, not losing. The clamor we hear is the clamor of the defeated; it is not the voice of America.—Editorial in Chicago Evening Post.

THE HEART OF THE LORD'S SUPPER

The celebration of the Lord's Supper is one of the most simple and the most profound of all the sacraments. But in all the ages since Jesus first taught His disciples to observe it, the meaning and significance of it have been obscured and lost in many ways, contrary to the thought that Jesus wished the church to have.

One branch of the Covenanter Church of Scotland for many years has anticipated the observance of the Lord's Supper with awe, and even with fear, and many devout members of the church have stayed away from the celebration because they have thought they were not spiritually fit or exalted enough to be permitted to partake of the bread and the cup. At many of our own denominational observances of the rite, the whole atmosphere has been colored with personal contrition for sin, or with thoughts of the disciples' own spiritual needs.

But when Jesus said to His disciples at the first Supper, "Do this in remembrance of me," He stated in those six easily understood words the heart of the entire sacrament. At the Lord's Supper, the Christian disciple is not to come emphasizing his own shortcomings; he is not to dwell on his failures, or his weaknesses. He is not there to ask for personal blessings, or to be exercised over the problems of the world. The one thing that the Lord's Supper should call for on the part of those who are observing it is the remembrance of Jesus. "Do this in remembrance of me!" is the center and heart of the whole observance.

In remembering Jesus, the disciple may call to mind the characteristics of the Master. He was and is many-sided in his nature and power. We may think of Him as the great Healer who "went about doing good." We may contemplate Him as the great Teacher "who spake as never man spake." We may remember Him as the lover of little children. We may picture Him as the reformer who was indignant over hypocrisy. We may again think of Him as the great Comforter. We may remember Him as the great Unifier of mankind in His teaching of the Brotherhood, or we may dwell on His matchless power as the great Revealer of eternal life, the resurrection.

How much value there is in a service like the Lord's Supper, where the entire thought of the Christian disciple is given up to Jesus Himself, and is separated from all selfish thought of one's own personal life, except as it is bound up in him! What astonishing things would be part of the history of man if, at great conferences and conventions, the entire thought could be given up to a remembrance of Jesus! What if the League of Nations at its deliberations should give up a whole morning to remembering Jesus as the world statesman! What if even our own sectarian bodies in their conventions—where subjects are often debated that do not soften the friendly feeling—should stop, and all together remember Jesus in all His personal beauty and His desire for the union of believers!

Yes, the heart of the Lord's Supper is Jesus Himself! Would to God that every communion of men, even in politics and amusement and financial meeting-places, might have the same heart of remembrance of Him whom to know aright is eternal life.—Charles M. Sheldon, in Christian Herald.

RECEIVED YOUR CHRISTMAS PROGRAM?

Sample copies of the Christmas service prepared by the Budget Council have been mailed to all the pastors and Sunday school superintendents whose addresses we have been able to secure.

It is inevitable, of course, that in such a large list some addresses will be incorrect. This is to earnestly request that all who have not received samples write us at once and another copy will be sent immediately.

We are furnishing, as in the past, a regular Christmas program, containing information about the work of the Methodist Protestant Church, a selection of hymns and carols for the Christmas service, and recitations and dialogues for assignment to the persons participating. The pageant to be used this year, "At the Door of the Inn," was secured from the Pilgrim Press, and is a very beautiful portrayol of the supposed scene at the Bethlehem Inn on the night of the Nativity. Any church will be able to prepare a splendid Christmas service with the material furnished.

The program is furnished free with the understanding that an offering be taken and forwarded to the Annual Conference Treasurer for credit on the General Conference Budget. Every church is urged to make a liberal offering this year so that the present embarrassment of our Boards and Institutions may be somewhat relieved as we approach the General Conference, which is to celebrate the Centennial of the founding of our church.

If you have not received your sample program, write at once. If you have received it, order a sufficient quantity for your needs, and plan for a great Christmas service.

HOW GOD WANTS TO BE THANKED

(Ps. 34:1)

One way to thank God is to stop grumbling about things. God likes us to both speak and live our thanks.

When we are loving and kind even when things do not go to suit us, we are expressing thanks to God.

In our evening prayers, it is a good thing to say, "Thank you" to God for the special blessings which the day has brought, naming them one by one.

One way to express thanks to God for good health is to do all we can to keep our bodies in health and strength.

If we are truly grateful to God for our minds, we will put into them only such thoughts as we know will be pleasing to Him.

We give thanks to God when we make best use of all His gifts to us; but He also likes us to express our thanks in words. —Selected.

—Every Christian should have some close and intimate form of giving, such as gifts made to some poor family about whom he will minister at first hand. Such gifts open the heart more than gifts through a board, and help to make the latter gifts seem vivid and needed. If we do not give right at home, we shall not long have the spirit to give for work at a distance.—C. E. World.

THE MONEYBANKS GO FOR A SLEIGH-RIDE

"Well, well, well," exclaimed old Santa Claus, as he put down his pack and grinned a jovial grin at Mr. and Mrs. Moneybanks. "So you never knew what Christmas seals do. Dear, dear, dear! Come with me then."

The portly Mr. and Mrs. Moneybanks really cared very little about anything so insignificant as the penny Christmas seal, but when summoned by no less personage than the old Nick himself, they felt called upon to follow.

"I'll show you a sight for any financier. One penny goes a long way here, Mr. Moneybanks," went Santa as he climbed abroad the well known sleigh and gathered up the reins of the well known "Dasher, Dancer, etc."

"Step aboard," he called to his guests, "don't mind sitting on a few toys back there. When it comes to children's toys you know, you're featherweights, my friends."

Indeed they seemed to be, for they sat airily on a gross or so of dolls, wooly dogs, teddy bears and other of Noah's animals, and never smashed a thing. The Moneybanks, knowing nothing of children, knew nothing either of toys, so they evidenced no surprise at the feat of seating their combined 395 pounds on the conglomeration of gifts for Christmas stockings. In passing it may be stated they unconsciously had sat on many delights all their lives, (but by this time the reader has probably suspected as much).

Anyway there they sat, old Santa started the sleigh and off they went. The wise old boy wished to reform the Moneybanks, (the reader by his time has probably suspected that, too) so he was taking the miserly couple on a tour of inspection.

"Now, Mr. and Mrs. Moneybanks," continued the jovial gentleman, "watch very carefully. We shall cover the trail of the tuberculosis sticker. Four million, five hundred thousand dollars' worth of one-inch seals were sold last year. When placed end to end, my friends, there are 63,360 seals in one mile. One mile of health for $633.60. Ah, yes, a penny goes a long way. Get comfy, for we shall travel far tonight—from New York City to Los Angeles and back again, my friends."

The Moneybanks did not look particularly elated over the prospects of such a unique and lengthy sleigh-ride, but then they never looked elated over anything save the bank-books when they saw an extra million added to the incomprehensible figures.

"Yes. my friends, all along the way I shall point out certain interesting sights," continued the friend of children and mankind. And he did. One mile of health, $633.60, two miles $1,267.20, on they sped! And these are some of the health-giving sights the hard-hearted old couple saw as they passed by city, hamlet and town on that strange ride.

They saw fifteen hundred tuberculosis associations all affiliated with the National Tuberculosis Association who sell the health seals and take charge of distributing the money raised; nearly one million people sick with tuberculosis, of which number 5,000 are children; 700 sanatoria and hospitals to care for them; 3,500 specially trained public health nurses who visit the schools and homes and teach health; two million boys and girls practicing daily health habits in its Modern Health Crusade; 1,000 open air schools where sickly children can build up their strength and keep from having tuberculosis; 600 permanent tuberculosis clinics and many traveling clinics where children, men and women, may go to have physical examinations and keep track of their human machinery; thousands of women's clubs, men's clubs, labor unions, lodges and similar groups who help in the work of selling and distributing health; hundreds of newspapers, magazines, trade journals, house organs and other publicans that contribute space for advertisements, photographs and articles to teach the public the value of the Christmas seal that stands for health; millions of pamphlets and circulars teaching the need for rest, fresh air, sunshine, cleanly health habits, good food and proper exercise; thousands of boys and girls and men and women who sell the seals through the mails, by personal contact or by house to house canvass.

Then all the way along were the millions of people, rich and poor, who purchase seals and stand as partners in the crusade to control tuberculosis through preventing it.

Oh, yes, old Santa certainly showed that the tuberculosis Christmas seal sale held annually is not held in vain. Not a county was missed in the whole United States and while the ride may never become as famous as Paul Revere's Ride, it certainly carried a wonderful message to thousands of people. For, as the reader has probably again suspected, the Moneybanks arrived home, hard-hearted no longer. Mrs. Moneybanks drew out her check-book and actually smiled as she murmured, "A penny certainly does go a long way in health, Mr. Claus. May I have the privilege of purchasing a few miles?" Mr. Moneybanks also actually smiled as he drew out his check-book and murmured, "You are an excellent salesman, Mr. Claus, and what you are selling must continue to be purchased. I will also take a few miles of health."

And old Santa Claus grinned his jovial grin and exclaimed, "Thank you, my friends, I'll place these checks with Tommy, the newsboy's ten cents. You are now worthy of being a partner with him and all the others who understand that a penny for health goes a long way. Ho. hum," continued the old boy and he stretched and yawned, "selling seals makes filling stockings a joy, my friends. I stuff 'em with health you see."

Thereupon he jumped into his sleigh, gathered up the reins that drive the well known Dasher and Dancer and there he is with his packful of health driving over the country on the 1927 Christmas seal.

THE HABIT OF THANKSGIVING

"I will praise the Lord at all times, His praise shall continually be in my mouth." Psalm 34:1.

There is a beautiful legend of a golden harp in an ancient monastery. Once the monastery was beseiged by robbers, who desired to carry off its treasures. The monks took the harp to a river which flowed close by, and sank it in the deep water, in order to keep it from the hands of the robbers. And the legend is that, though buried thus in the river, the harp still continued to give forth sweet and enchanting music, which was heard by those who came near.

Every Christian life should be like this golden harp. Nothing should ever silence its music. Even when the floods of sorrow flow over it, it should still continue to rejoice and sing.

One of the secrets of such a life is found in the cultivation of the habit of thankfulness.

The true spirit of thanksgiving cannot be saved up for Thanksgiving Day. A grateful heart must be born and bred in us—born of love to and confidence in God, bred in sunshine and shadow, prosperity and adversity. Like a certain kind of primrose, it must bloom all the year around.—Gastonia Bulletin.

"WHY WE'VE NOT GROWN"

About 30 years ago, while living at Matthews, N. C., the pastor of the M. E. Church, South, made a remark that seems to be worth considering. We were close neighbors, the parsonage lots joining. The three years that we lived thus, "door-neighbors," we were quite "chummy." He was a voracious reader. He read nearly all the books I had, during these three years. When he had finished reading Bassett's History of the Methodist Church, he said to the writer: "Why have you never grown any more?" The question being unexpected, I did not have a ready and satisfactory reply, and so far as I remember, said: "I do not know." He replied, "I can tell you—you ceased to 'fight.'"

I've often thought of this remark during all these years since. He seemed favorably impressed with the book, and if we had pressed the matter as in the beginning, our success would have been far greater.

It seems that often we have assumed an attitude of an apologist. The real reason for our existence is little known. We are looked upon by many, no doubt, as a set of revolters, without any sufficient cause. Even a prominent ministerial member of one of the "mother" churches made a "slip" at this point on our Conference floor, and was corrected. We had one man with enough "grit" to make the correction. The day for controversy is past, at this point, but not for "keeping history straight." How many of our young people have any correct knowledge of the reasons that culminated in the organization of the Methodist Protestant Church? It seems that it is taken for granted that everybody knows. But everybody does not know. We are fearful that we many have some men in the pastorate, even, that do not know. No doubt, some have a vague idea, but the real facts that culminated in the organization of the Methodist Protestant Church, we are fearful, all do not know, even among some who are filling the pastoral relation. This ought not so to be.

We believe it would be well for each pastor some time during the year to give a lecture, or "talk," especially to the young people, giving the real facts in the case—not in a controversial spirit, but the simple, but patent facts that led to the organization of the Methodist Protestant Church. This could be done in a concise manner and would surprise, and open the eyes of many. No reasonable person should object to the truth being told. There was a reason a hundred years ago, and a very strong reason, or reasons. The present generation does not know this reason, or reasons, but it is entitled to know, and it is but simple justice that this should be known. Justice to our fathers, and justice to the church of the present.

This should be done in a non-controversial, Christian spirit. Our young people should be able to give a reason for the faith that is in them. J. F. Dosier.

—The youth of today, though at heart we believe as noble and fine as ever, yet is harassed by many doubts and uncertainties, and in exteriors has broken away from much that our fathers thought to be essential. Youth flaunts its independence before all men's eyes, does many foolish and hurtful things, and is in a turmoil of mind and body which cannot last. Youth is dissatisfied with the present order of things, and is reaching out for something better. This unrest will prove to be sad and terrible if it stops short of Jesus Christ, but if it spurs the young people on to seek Him and never rest until they find Him, it will lead them to final peace and power.—*C. OUR STORY PAGE

THE LITTLE RED HOUSE

Once upon a time there was a little boy who was tired of all his toys and tired of all his picture books and tired of all his play. "What shall I do?" he asked his dear mother.

And his dear mother, who always knew beautiful things for little boys to do, said: "You shall go on a journey and find a little red house with no doors and with a beautiful star inside."

Then the little boy's eyes grew big with wonder. "Which way shall I go," he asked, "to find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?"

"Down the lane and past the farmer's house and over the hill," said his dear mother. "Come back as soon as you can and tell me about your journey."

So the little boy started out. He had not walked very far down the lane when he came to a very little girl dancing along in the sunshine. "Do you know where I shall find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?" the little boy asked her.

The little girl laughed. "Ask my father, the farmer," she said.

So the little boy went on until he came to the great brown barn, where the farmer himself stood in the doorway looking out over the pastures and grain fields.

"Do you know where I shall find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?" asked the little boy.

The farmer laughed, too. "I've lived a great many years, and I never saw one," he chuckled. "But ask the granny who lives at the foot of the hill. She knows how to make arrow-root taffy, popcorn balls and red mittens. Perhaps she can direct you to it."

So the little boy went on farther still until he came to the granny sitting in her pretty garden of herbs and marigolds. "Please, dear granny," asked the little boy, "where shall I find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?"

The granny was knitting a red mitten, but when she heard the little boy's question she laughed cheerily, "I should like to find that little house myself.," she chuckled. "It would be warm when the frosty nights come, and the starlight would be prettier than a candle. But ask the wind, who blows about so much and listens at all the chimneys. Perhaps the wind can direct you to the little house."

So the little boy took off his cap politely to granny and went up the bill. The wind was coming down the hill as the little boy climbed up. As they met, the wind turned about and went singing along beside him. It whistled in his ear.

"O, wind," asked the little boy, after they had gone along together quite a way, "can you help me to find a little red house with no doors and a star inside?"

The wind cannot speak in our words, but it went singing on ahead of the little boy until it came to an orchard. There it climbed up in an apple tree and shook the branches. When the little boy caught up, there, at his feet, lay a rosy apple. The little boy picked up the apple. It was as much as his two hands could hold. It was as red as the sun had been able paint it, and the thick brown stem stood up as straight as a chimney. It was a little red house in which the apple blossome lately had gone to sleep. It had no windows.

"I wonder," thought the little boy. He took his jackknife from his pocket and cut the apple straight through the center. Oh, how wonderful! There, inside the apple, lay a star holding brown seeds.

So the little boy called "Thank you" to the wind, and the wind whistled back again, "You're welcome." Then the little boy ran home to his mother and gave her the apple.

"It is too wonderful to eat without looking at the star, isn't it?" he said.

"Yes, indeed," answered his dear mother.—Carolyn Sherwin Bailey, in Mother's Magazine.

A LOYAL LITTLE MOTHER

Betty often stood in front of the store windows where dolls were on display, and longed to own one of these beauties. Sometimes she thought she would rather have a doll with brown hair, and again a flaxen-haired child with blue eyes would appeal to her very strongly.

But always she had had to turn away with a sigh, for there was just barely money enough at home to get those things which were needed, and after all, the home-made doll which Betty's mother had managed to contrive out of odds and ends, was very near to the little girl's heart.

The doll's name was Bertha Jean. Her body was made out of soft old stockings, and features were embroidered on her face in wool. Her hair was taken from the corner of a ripped place in the mattress and was really and truly hair, although it never grew on a human head.

Betty had a real doll carriage which Mrs. Blake, the banker's wife, gave her, because her own little daughter had outgrown it. And so many times Betty took Bertha Jean out for a ride in the morning sunshine, covering her snugly all up except the doll's face, for if the truth must be told, some of the children in that neighborhood were quite thoughtless and poked fun at Bertha Jean, calling her a "rag doll," and "Raggedy Ann," and other names which Betty did not like to hear, because she loved this odd-looking child of hers quite as well as some of the other children who lived near loved their expensive store dolls.

The clothes which Bertha Jean wore were made out of scraps—small left-overs, but they were always neat and clean, for Betty took good care of the little clothes her mother made for Bertha Jean.

Betty had just started in school. She had looked forward for a long time to the day when she would be big enough to go down the street and across the two roads necessary to pass over to reach the school, and it was going to be such fun to have a lot of other little companions just about her own age.

And how Betty loved her pretty young teacher, Miss Eleanor, who wore such dainty dresses and who always smiled so sweetly! Betty's heart simply thrilled whenever Miss Eleanor gave her a little pat on the shoulder, or slipped an arm around her.

But now something had happened which made Betty very sober, for Miss Eleanor had announced that there would be a doll party on Friday, and every little girl was to bring her favorite doll, and every little boy an animal toy of some kind.

Betty wasn't ashamed of Bertha Jean—no indeed! But just the same she shrank from the idea of having her doll laughed at by other children. She knew that hers, in all likelihood, would be the only home-made one there, and Betty was almost inclined to stay home from school and miss the party if her mother would let her, rather than to face the rest and to hear Bertha Jean made fun of.

"I think I'd go, dear," she said gently, "for you'll enjoy the party, and after all you must remember that Bertha Jean cannot hear and has no feelings to be hurt, even if the other children do laugh at her. But perhaps they will not, and I shouldn't be a bit surprised if a lot of them wanted to play with her. We'll dress her up in her best clothes and you can take her in her carriage."

So Betty went to the party and took her home-made doll with her. There were several grown-up ladies who were visitors at the school, and they seemed much interested in the little boys and girls, and the toy animals and the dolls which the children brought. But when they saw Betty's doll, they exclaimed in delight.

"Did you ever see anything so cute!" exclaimed one.

"Whoever made that doll is an artist!" cried another.

"I know what I'm going to do," burst out a third. "I'm going to try to get this little girl's mother to make some of those dolls for my Gift Shop. I am sure people would be quite wild about them in the city where I live!"

And so before Betty knew what was happening, she was the center of much attention, or rather her home-made doll was, and in place of making fun of Bertha Jean, the other children were all asking to have a chance to look at her and hold her, and were examining the cunning little clothes with real pockets, and buttons and button-holes, and shoes and stockings which you could take off and put on.

When the party was over, Miss Eleanor asked Betty to wait a few minutes, and then she and two of the morning visitors went home with Betty.

Betty did not quite understand all the conversation, but she did know that the strange ladies were offering her mother what sounded like a lot of money to make dolls and doll clothes for their shop.

When Miss Eleanor and her two friends went away, Mrs. Lee grabbed Betty and hugged her.

"Who would ever think," she laughed, "that making dolls like Bertha Jean and doll clothes, would bring me a lot of money! You've wanted a store doll, dearest, and I've wanted to give you one but I couldn't. Now I'll buy you one with the very first money I get from these ladies, and you shall have one with black or brown or yellow hair, just as you like."

"But I don't want a store doll—now," smiled Betty, hugging Bertha Jean up to her. "This is my really truly own child, you know, and I like her best of all."

"You're a loyal little mother," smiled Mrs. Lee—"and if you hadn't been, and hadn't taken Bertha Jean to the party, even although you thought the other children might look down on her, I never would have had a chance to sell a lot of dolls such as these ladies have given me orders for.

"You see, it pays after all, Betty, to make the best of what we have, and then we will often find that what we have is really very good after all!"—Selected.

A GOLDEN HEART

Melinda lived with her grandmother, who gathered herbs in the deep forest. All the playmates the girl had were squirrels and rabbits, but one day even they went away, and she was left alone. This is how it came about.

There was a small grassy open spot near their home with a little brook flowing through it. The whole year round it was gay with pretty flowers. The rabbits would come there and eat the tender plants and drink the clear, cool water. Melinda often brought them cabbage and lettuce from her grandmother's garden.

One day some careless boys left a bonfire, which burned the little glade over and scared the little wild creatures away. Melinda was very sad, for her grandmother told her that her little playmates would not come back until the ground was covered with flowers again.

So the girl went out and tried to find some, but they had all gone too far away. She sat down by the little brook and tears came to her eyes as she thought of her lost comrades. When the little brook found out what was troubling her it hurried away to ask the lovely flowers to come up and live.

When it invited the daisy to come, it said, "Oh, I couldn't do any good going up there and living all alone."

The clover also refused, saying that it had all it could do now, without going anywhere else. The dandelion replied that it was too far away from home.

The kind little brook tried to get them all, but they all refused. At last it asked the forget-me-not, a tiny plain blue flower. It answered the brook at once and said it would be glad to go. So the little plant traveled away with the brook until it came to the glade. There it grew faster and faster, by hundreds and thousands.

One day, when Melinda came sadly down to the glade, it was all covered with the tiniest blue flowers, looking like a bit of blue sky, dropped down from above. There was the rabbit, hopping around with her little ones, and the squirrel was sitting up and holding its paws for corn.

Now, Mother Nature saw the kind thing the forget-me-nots had done. "You truly have a golden heart, for you have done what you could," she said.

The next morning, when the sun shone on the forget-me-not, every one had a golden heart.—Selected.

The Growing Figure of Jesus

You have only to compare the apostles' creed with what men believe of Jesus today to see how Jesus has grown in the esteem of men. The apostles' creed passes abruptly from the birth of Jesus to the suffering of his closing days. Today men fondly dwell upon his years of ministering service as He taught the people and as He went about doing good. The apostles' creed seats Jesus at the right hand of God and leaves Him there until He shall come to raise the dead and judge the world. The apostles' creed thus left men gazing into heaven, wondering when He would come again. But the two angels who rebuked the disciples for continuing to gaze into the heavens and who predicted His return to the earth did not date His return at the end of all things, and it was not long until men realized that Jesus was again with them in their labors to extend His Kingdom on the earth. While not ceasing to think of Jesus as enthroned in the heavens, the Christian world has come to think of Jesus as present on the earth where even two or three are gathered in His name. Furthermore, Christians have come to expect the presence of Jesus in every individual soul that will open the door to His incoming. Yes. Jesus is not now to men a mere remote spectator of their conduct, but He is Immanuel, God with us, helping us to overcome in life's struggles and conflicts. And in this intimate relationship to men He is a mighty power for salvation as He could not be when conceived to be far away.

And yet Jesus has not changed as the centuries have passed. He is the same yesterday, today and forever. The creeds of men as they change express the varying measures of men's minds. Jesus is too grand a figure to be measured by us. As we grow larger we will know Him more and more, but He will always be to us Lord and Master, greater and greater as we grow in power of comprehension.

—Adversity is the trial of principle. Without it a man hardly knows whether he is honest or not.—Fielding.

Address matter for immediate publication in this department to Miss Mary C. McCulloch, 1705 Asheboro Street, Greensboro, N. C.

DISTRICT MISSIONARY RALLY

The district misionary rally for the sixth district was held in the Asheboro Methodist Protestant church on Friday, November 4th, at 2 p.m. This district embraces Davidson, Why Not, Richland and Randleman charges and Asheboro station. Miss Esther Ross, chairman of the district, presided. The meeting was opened by singing that great hymn, "More About Jesus;" then followed a number of sentence prayers with Miss Ross leading and Mrs. Hayworth closing the prayer. When the roll was called it was found that seven churches in the district were represented.

Owing to the fact that the Annual Conference was in session at the same time the rally was held we were pleased to have a number of ladies from other districts meet with us.

After the calling of the roll the chairman introduced Dr. Roberta Fleagle, our medical missionary to China, who is now home on furlough. Dr. Fleagle told us something of the great work she is doing among the sick in China, and of a number of ways we folks back home can aid her in the work over there.

One could not sit and hear her tell of the great needs in China without wanting to give more for the foreign mission cause. We can not all go but we can all send our money and our prayers.

We were glad to have with us Miss Annie Forrest, a returned Missionary, who is now field secretary of the W. F. M. S. In a few well chosen words Miss Forrest pictured to us some of the great needs in India and how much the missionary is needed there. We were glad to have both of these consecrated women speak to us and hope we may have that privilege again in the future.

We were glad to have with us in the rally Mrs. Geo. R. Brown, state president of the W. F. M. S., and Mrs. W. C. Hammer, state president of the W. H. M. S.

The rally closed with the Mizpah benediction.

MISS ESTHER ROSS, Chairman,
MRS. WM. H. NEESE, Secretary.

ANNOUNCEMENT

All members of the Missionary Society of Mt. Zion Methodist Protestant church are hereby asked to attend the regular meeting next Sunday, November 27, immediately after Sunday school. Come.

MRS. C. W. ALLEN, President.

—Preston H. Coble, of Liberty, was killed near Newberry, S. C., in a fall from a bridge on which he was working. The body was brought home for burial. Brothers Millaway and Dixon assisted in the funeral service.

DO WE READ THE HERALD CAREFULLY?

This writer has been a constant reader of The Methodist Protestant Herald for nearly a score of years and always looks forward each week for its arrival. The habit of glancing through its pages before departing from the post office lobby has been almost invariably practiced by this writer. The many reports from various churches and charges and the helpful editorials and other articles combine to make it a worthy religious journal.

But do we read the Herald carefully? This writer being a printer and close observer of the general make-up and typography of a publication, is attracted by any mishap which has occurred during the course of an edition. We realize the manifold deeds necessary in the production of a publication, the editing of "copy," the conversion of the "copy" into type, the assembling of the matter into forms, the reading and correction of the reading matter and the various "operations" necessary for the production of an issue of a publication.

With the permission (and pardon) of the editor we wish to cite the following errors in last week's issue which may or may not be due to the editor or his printers: In the report of Union Chapel, Granville Charge, the initials of the pastor were given as "R. L." when they are "H. F." At the heading of the report of Hattie Anderson for Sandy Ridge church on Kernersville Charge, it is credited to "Weaverville Charge." Any one reading the report closely will see the reference to "Brother Lowdermilk filling his appointment," and discover the error. Brother Cranford is pastor of Weaverville Charge. In the report from Yarborough Chapel, on Yarborough Charge, reference is made to the new pastor as "Rev. W. F. Surratt," when it should be "W.B." Surratt.

Reporters may become more careful in the use of correct initials and names of pastors. (Pardon me, Brother Editor, for the reference to errors.) C. B. WAY.

(Our thanks to Brother Way for these corrections.—Editor.)

A PITTSBURGH EARTHQUAKE

On Monday, November 14, at 8:45 in the morning, just when the fifteen hundred thousand people of the Pittsburgh district were entering upon the myriad tasks of this great industrial center of the world, five million cubic feet of gas exploded with a breath of fury that sent earthquake tremors throughout the whole city, and outward to the farthest environs of the town. Hundreds of people were seriously injured, and an undetermined number killed outright, while others are dying every hour in hospitals crowded to capacity by the victims of the awful tragedy. The property loss will run far into the millions, and, because of this veritable earthquake shock, hundreds of homes were either utterly destroyed or made untenable, and at least five thousand people are homeless in the Iron City to-night because of this tragedy.

The destruction wrought by this sudden catastrophe in the immediate vicinity of the accident, which occurred at the Equitable Gas Company's plant, on Reedsdale Street, on the North Side, is beyond description. In our walk through the stricken district, through whole streets of houses with broken windows, battered and trembling walls and broken roofs, we thought of no comparison quite so apt as that of shelled towns in the battle-zone of the World War. The scene was indeed so strikingly like that of Rheims, as we saw that storied city in 1921, still sick and sore with the unhealed wounds of her life-and-death struggle, that we needed only the battle-torn cathedral as a central figure to complete the verisimiltude of the sad and awful resemblance between the tragedy of war and the peace-time tragedy of Pittsburgh. Seven large public schools in the Manchester district of the city, serving thousands of pupils, are temporarily closed because the windows were blown out by the fury of the blast. The shock was felt everywhere within a radius of twenty-miles, and a broken flying fragment of the giant tank caused painful injuries more than two miles from the original scene of the disaster.—Methodist Recorder.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION RECEIPTS

Dr. E. F. Allman, $1.50; Rev. P. L. Kinnaman, $1.50; Rev. C. E. Ridge, $1.50; Rev. T. G. Madison, $1.50; Rev. B. M. Williams, $3.00; Rev. J. D. Cranford, $1.50; Rev. O. C. Loy, Jr., $1.50; Rev. D. I. Garner, $6.00; Rev. M. P. Chambliss, $9.00.

—The Men's Brotherhood of Grace church welcomed their new pastor, Rev. Ronald Tamblyn, last Friday night in a supper held in the Church Hut. An address was delivered by Rabbi Ellis, of the Jewish Synagogue, who is a very entertaining speaker, and is a ready mixer with people of all religious affiliations. A quartette from the city sang several songs. Brother Tamblyn had just reached Greensboro by a long auto ride, but came to the meeting and spoke briefly and pleasantly. His sermon last Sunday brought out an unusual congregation and made a fine impression.

—Calvary people were glad to welcome Rev. C. W. Bates and family last Sunday. Brother Bates preached his initial sermon to a good congregation on Sunday morning. He called the first quarterly conference for Tuesday night of next week.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Snotherly

William Snotherly departed this life October 20, 1927. At the ripe old age of 84 years, six months and 22 days. Surely it can be said of him: "He came to his grave in full age; like as a shock of corn cometh in his season."

In his early manhood he consecrated himself to his Lord and to the work of building up the Methodist Protestant Church.

He carried the bulk of the burden of building a Methodist Protestant Church at New London where he lived. With heavy odds against us the church was sold, and he with others moved his membership to Albemarle where he remained loyal until the Master called him home. Uncle Bill was a man of a kindly disposition. He delighted in helping young men to get started in life; and rejoiced in their achievements.

As a friend, he knew how to get close to you. The bigness of the soul and the warmth of his heart brought new hope into lives of his friends.

He loved his pastor tenderly. The writer remembered his parting with a treasured gold piece as an expression of his love to his pastor.

He was for a long time, a prominent figure in the quarterly conference of his charge. He was a recognized leader in his church. His faith was strong, his hopes secure.

Uncle "Bill," as he was familiarly called, served four years in the civil war, in Company K. 26th regiment. He was a good soldier, fighting for a lost cause, but was a more valiant soldier fighting for King Emanual.

In the first fight he lost but in the latter he gloriously won.

He leaves to mourn their loss a second wife to whom he was tenderly devoted; four noble children: J. H. Snotherly, the loyal friend to our Children's Home and the back-bone of Friendship Station; Mrs. H. L. Lowder, Mr. Lewis Mason and William Snotherly, Jr.

He was laid to rest in the old family burying ground at Bethel M. E. Church. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. D. Anderson, assisted by Rev. J. L. Trolinger, the writer and the pastor of Bethel church.

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won;
And thou art crowned at last."

W. D. REED.

Losses at Bethel Church

1927 has been a year of heavy losses to Bethel Church. The last two to go out by death were J. M. Roberson and Mrs. Mary E. Woody. Brother Roberson had reached the age of 73. His home was not far from the church and he was rarely absent from the services. He loved his church and had no fear in meeting his Lord. His place in Bethel is unoccupied and his presence is missed by all. His funeral service was conducted by his former pastor, Rev. G. W. Holmes, assisted by the writer.

Mrs. Woody was unanimously loved by her church and community. She had reached the ripe age of 74. Her funeral service was conducted by the writer assisted by her former pastor, Rev. G. W. Holmes, and Rev. H. L. Isley. These two made beautiful remarks about her. Her life was spent in doing good. Now she has gone to reap a glorious reward.

J. A. BURGESS.

Cheek

Mrs. Sarah Cheek, one of the older members of Chestnut Ridge, died as the conference year was closing.

In the absence of the pastor, who was attending conference, Rev. Contrell of the Baptist Church conducted the funeral services at Chestnut Ridge, November 2nd.

Sister Cheek was a good and faithful member of Chestnut Ridge Church. She lived to be about 76 years old. May God comfort all her relatives and friends.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Cook

Carl Cook, son of F. M. and Mary Cook, was born September 30, 1901, and died November 16, 1927. He was married to Fannie Surratt November 8, 1922. To this union were born two children. He was converted about four years ago and joined the M. P. church at Alleghany, where he lived a faithful member until death. He was sick only a few days, typhoid fever being the cause of his death.

He leaves behind his widow, two small sons, father and mother, five brothers, three sisters, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. But we feel that our loss is his eternal gain.

Brother Cook was a faithful church worker, having served for two years as superintendent of the Sunday school at Alleghany church. He will be missed at his church, in the community, but most of all in the home.

Funeral service was held from Alleghany church by the writer on November 17th at 3 p. m. and burial took place in the church cemetery.

The bereaved ones have our sympathy. May the God of all comfort bind up the broken hearts and may they look to Him Who alone can give the needed grace to sustain us in these trying moments.

Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, Littleton, N. C.

Rev. E. A. Bingham, Denton, N. C.
Rev. J. B. Trogdon, R. 7, Asheboro, N. C.

Not knowing when pastors move, we wait to change their addresses on our mailing list until they request it.

—Dr. and Mrs. Allman with a party of children from the Children's Home came to Moriah and Calvary churches last Sunday and gave a very acceptable program especially appropriate to Thanksgiving time. Dr. Allman states that more buildings are needed for the Home. Present capacity is not large enough to house all who are appealing for a place. Then a larger building for school purposes is needed.

STATEMENT OF WINSTON BRETHREN

The first meeting of the board of stewards of the First M. P. Church was held in the church on Thursday evening, November 9, by call of the chairman. Practically all the board was present, and participated in the meeting. New officers were elected for the coming year.

After the election of officers, and the transaction of some other routine business, the delegate to the Annual Conference, just passed, was call upon for a report. The report was not only lengthy, but complete and impressive as well. It dealt with the present local conditions in the church as well as the action of the Conference. It went back into the past to the beginning of the trouble in the church.

The church has been partly divided since December, 1924, and the delegate reports that, apparently, the same spirit of division has made its way into the annual Conference. Our delegate reported that he tried in every way conceivable to arrange for a pastor that would be satisfactory to all the local church, taking considerable pains to lay the local conditions before the stationing authority of the Conference. Finding it impossible to get the official board of the local church to agree and after giving the matter more consideration, he then recommended to the Conference that the local church be sold, and the proceeds of sale turned over to the board of church extension for use where it would do most good. This recommendation he also made to the board of stewards. This suggestion was received favorably and action was taken thereon, and it was decided to call a meeting of the first quarterly conference for the church, in order that a proposition might be submitted to the membership of the church in an effort to adjust differences, and the earnestness with which he presented this recommendation impressed the board. It is evident now that the proposition will have the support of a large number of the members of the church.

In the course of his talk, he took occasion to rehearse the causes that have contributed to the present unfavorable condition in the church with which he is familiar. It is difficult to forecast what the action of the church will be, but it is quitely likely that some action will be taken looking to carrying into effect the suggestion of the delegate.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Flat Rock, Vance.—Our "new" preacher filled his first appointment at Flat Rock third Sunday. Everyone seemed glad that our old preacher and our new preacher are one and the same. He gave us a splendid sermon, using as his subject, Yoking the Young People in Christian Work. New church officials were elected as follows: Trustees—A. E. White, S. H. Satterwhite, J. H. Satterwhite, U. J. Parrott, C. A. Wortham; stewards—S. W. Reavis, chairman, F. G. Hester, C. A. Wortham, B. W. Jones; class leader—Mrs. S. W. Reavis; Sunday school superintendent—S. B. Greenway; assistant superintendent, U. J. Parrott; secretary-treasurer—B. W. Jones. Mr. B. W. Jones has served as secretary-treasurer for three years. He is very efficient. His report yesterday opened our eyes as to the real workings of our Sunday school. Our Sunday school offering during year has amounted to nearly one hundred dollars. He reported over twenty dollars in treasury to begin the new year.

The new Sunday school rooms are going on to completion. They will add much to the efficiency of the school.

Our pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, expects to put forth an extra effort to organize Christian Endeavor societies at all his churches this year.

The Woman's Home Mission Society will meet with Misses Annie and Rosa Satterwhite on Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock. This will be their Thank-offering service. A Thank-offering program wil be given. It is hoped that every member of our church that subscribed for the Herald last year will renew it for another year. Nothing helps more than knowing what our church as a whole is doing.

This is my first report as reporter so trust it may prove worthy.

MARY V. WHITE, Reporter.

New Hope, Why Not Circuit.—Our new pastor, Rev. Joel Trogdon, preached for us last Sunday afternoon for the first time this conference year. He preached a good sermon. Brother Trogdon comes to us as an old friend, as he helped Brother John Hulin in a meeting several years ago at New Hope. We are praying for a good year's work. English Street Methodist Protestant Church, High Point, were fortunate indeed to secure Brother D. I. Garner for their pastor, but the members of New Hope Church and the majority of Why Not Circuit were disappointed at Brother Garner not returning to this circuit, as the fourth quarterly conference voted so strongly for his return. However we are hoping everything will work out all right. We always thought the majority should rule, but it didn't in this case, but we earnestly pray God's richest blessings will be bestowed on Brother Garner as he goes to his new field of labor. New Hope church stands by her pastor. I think former pastors will testify to that fact. I believe if we have the love of God in our hearts as we should we won't be so ready to find fault with our pastor.

The ministers are giving their lives to the service of God and they deserve something better than criticism, especially the young ministers who are trying so hard to make good.

Brother Garner while pastor helped us organize our Ladies' Aid Society and we worked and raised money enough to paint our church inside and we placed it in the pastor's hands to get the paint and secure a painter, which he did. He came back after conference and got the paint and we are awaiting the painter and hope in the near future to be able to report the church painted inside and other improvements that are needed so badly. We are having a splendid Sunday school with good attendance; prayer meeting every Saturday night, and class meeting once a month. We are planning to have a Christmas tree and a short program for the small children. Our township Sunday School Rally was held at Pisgah Methodist Church the second Sunday in November.

A good program was rendered from the children of the various schools in the township. Our county president and others were there and made interesting talks and altogether it was a good day. Our township Sunday school Institute will be held at High Pine the first Sunday in December in the afternoon.

Pray for us that we may accomplish more this year than ever before.

MRS. NOAH WILLIAMS, Reporter.

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—Our "new" pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, filled his first appointment for the new year here yesterday at 11 o'clock, and as usual preached an inspiring and interesting sermon to a most attentive congregation.

We are glad to have our same pastor back with us again this year. This is the fifth year he has served us so faithfully, so let us enter into the new year with renewed courage and with greater zeal than ever before.

Our Sunday school is still keeping up, both in attendance and interest. The past year was the best that has been for years, having an enrollment of 106 and we hope our membership will continue to increase. We have recently purchased curtains for our Sunday school which we hope will be of benefit to our school.

Last evening at 7 o'clock (November 20) our Christian Endeavor rendered a Thanksgiving program to a well filled house. A Thanksgiving offering amounting to $8.50 was collected for the Children's Home. Our society is planning for a "Thanksgiving Social" at church next Thursday evening, beginning at 7 o'clock, so come along with your best Thanksgiving smile, and help us enjoy a nice time.

LOUISE BOWEN, Reporter.

Love Joy, Why Not Charge.—We are progressing slowly but surely. We hope to report oftener this year than last year and we shall try to have something of interest to report each time.

Mr. J. B. Trogdon, our new pastor, filled his first appointment here the second Sunday. He preached to an attentive congregation. We were glad to have with us Mrs. Trogdon and son, and a number of other visitors.

Last month, the following officers were elected: Trustees—Leach Russell, W. L. Atkins, J. P. Saunders, Atlas Russell and J. E. McGee. Stewards—A. H. Reynolds, Garfield Hamilton, and Frank Russell. Class leaders—A. W. Hulin, E. H. Reynolds, and M. C. Reynolds. Superintendent of the Sunday school—D. F. Hulin and assistant superintendent—J. W. Saunders. Yesterday the old teachers were re-elected with the addition of a few new ones. Also the secretary and assistant secretary were elected.

We are glad to see the people taking a greater interest in Sunday school. This fact is manifested by the increase in attendance and the study of the lessons. We hope to reach a goal of one hundred in Sunday school each Sunday. Pray for us that we may reach this goal and that much good may be accomplished by the Sunday school. We hope that this may be a successful year in all departments of the church work.

Several members are taking the Herald but we should like to have it in every home. We think that if each member reads the paper as he should, he would never be without it again.

Best wishes to the Herald.

REPORTER.

Rockingham.—We are making very good progress installing our furnace. We have the furnace here and part of the walls built. We hope to complete this work within a short time now.

Our good pastor has been with us two Wednesday nights in prayer meeting since his return from Conference. He was also with us yesterday, November 20, this being his regular appointment. He delivered us a very inspiring sermon on the subject of, "The Life of St. John."

We thank the stationing committee and God for being so kind as to send us our good pastor for another year. He has meant much to us and our community.

Our Sunday school is doing very well. We have very good attendance and fine collections. We had a fine average for the past conference year.

We are expecting to have a Christmas program and tree. Mrs. D. E. McKenzie will have charge of the program.

Christian people, pray for us that we may make the most of this year.

With best wishes for the Herald and its readers.

(Miss) BIRDIE CONNELL, Reporter.

Kernersville.—The first quarterly conference of this charge will convene at Kernersville M. P. Church at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, December 6th.

A full attendance of all the official members in view of a good faithful year's work is much desired.

Rev. S. W. Taylor, the President, is to be with us.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Littleton Charge, Hawkins Chapel Church.—Pastor J. B. O'Briant held services at Hawkins Chapel church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, the usual service hour. We are sorry to know that we don't have him for the coming year.

He has served this charge for the past six years. He has done some splendid work to build up this charge. And he is loved by most all from this church. He was one that would visit the sick ones. We will still be glad to have him visit our homes.

Our new pastor will preach for us the second Sunday in December.

Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely with Mr. Baily Green superintendent, who has served for the past three or four years.

BEATRICE HAWKINS, Reporter.

Asheville.—Pastor Bates and family left for Greensboro Friday morning with the prayers and good wishes of all.

Services were held both morning and night, yesterday.

Brother E. C. Fawcett, our fine Quaker layman, made an address at 11 a.m. His text was, "Speak unto the Children of Israel that they go forward." In a most interesting manner he went over the story of Israel as illustrating present day situations.

The address was an inspiration.

At night Rev. J. S. Lyons preached. His subject was, "The Miracle of God's guidance." Mr. Lyons won our hearts. He is at the head of the religious department at the Asheville School. He will conduct our prayer meeting this Wednesday night, and will preach again next Sunday night. Last night five requested prayer for the conversion of friends.

Sunday morning Brother E. H. Pratt, our new Sunday school superintendent, presided over the Sunday school. The Christian Endeavor was well attended. The attendance at the church services was very good.

A letter from our new pastor, Rev. Fred W. Paschall, was read. Miss Verdie McIntyre, our delegate to Conference, reported. Her report was adopted.

Our acceptance of Brother Paschal was unanimously adopted by a rising vote, every man, woman, and child voting. G. M. Foster, E. H. Pratt, and C. C. McNeil were elected a pulpit supply committee.

Brother Homer Casto will preach for us Sunday morning.

Our Brotherhood meeting at the parsonage last week and our missionary meeting with Mrs. J. S. Williams were both well attended.

Brother Paschall will arrive December 17 for the Christmas holidays.

Concord.—There were very few changes in church officials at Concord, but our pastor was changed. Bro. Isley goes with our love and best wishes to his new work. We have not forgot but will remember him kindly the five years of laboring for the Master. We welcome Brother Loy and wife to our midst. May we each be a benefit to each other and much good be accomplished in this year.

Our Sunday school is moving along. Brother C. O. Furgeson succeeded himself.

Our hearts were saddened by the passing of Mrs. Mary Elkin Woody Wednesday, November 9. She had been confined to her bed since March 20 and had suffered much, which she bore patiently until God said, It is enough. Come, be at rest.

Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved ones. May the great Healer comfort them in this sad hour and bind them closer to each other and to Thee until they are called to meet her in a better land.

REPORTER.

Macedonia, Fallston Charge.—As I have not seen anything from this corner of the woods for a long time, I thought I would drop in a word. Everything is moving along fine. We thank the conference for sending Brother Morgan back to us again; he has been here four years already, and he is still fresh with us. He filled his appointment at our place last Sunday evening; he brought us a fine message but he always does that.

We are making some progress at our church. We have recovered with cedar shingles at a cost of $117.00, and we have the paint ready to put on as soon as we can get some one to do the work. Yes, we are small in number, only 63 members, but we still try to do all we can for the Lord, for he is blessing us every day for which we are so very thankful.

Our Sunday school is moving along fine under the able management of Brother Hull, our superintendent. He is a good man and a fine leader. The winter doesn't get too cold for us—we have an evergreen Sunday school. The interest is good and that makes the church alive.

Pray for us.

Union Grove, Orange Circuit.—We appreciated so much getting our beloved pastor back and trust this will be our best year.

We held our Thanksgiving service yesterday p. m. Rev. B. M. Williams gave us a good sermon on our gifts from the Heavenly Father. Our offering was $15.00.

Our Sunday school is still alive, but could be so much better.

Death has taken one of our members during the past year, Mr. Johnnie Ashley, and we miss his presence, for he was a regular attendant.

On November 6 Mr. Maryland Garrett, brother of Mrs. Henry Wright, passed away at Watts Hospital. He had been in poor health for some time and death was not unexpected. He was a member of Cane Creek Baptist church but was always helpful when things were to be done at our church, and he will be missed. Burial service was at Union Grove by his pastor, Rev. Mr. Gufton, assisted by Rev. J. F. McDuffie and his body laid in the cemetery by loved ones passed on.

We do hope and trust that the M. P. Church and all others will be revived this year. We all need to be filled with the Spirit.

We are planning and hoping to raise our Annual Conference Budget at once.

Kannapolis.—On last Monday our new pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, and family arrived from Cross Anchor, South Carolina. On Monday night we held a reception for them at the church, all of the members of the church being present, with a number of friends from Concord. There were several snappy speeches of welcome from the members of the church, both men and women. Then Rev. Lawrence Little made a short talk in which he congratulated the church here as well as Brother Cowan. This was replied to by Brother Cowan. The next number on the program was the refreshments, which were enjoyed by everyone present. After several songs and prayer and a snappy social hour we all went home hoppy over the outlook for the year.

On Thursday night we had a splendid prayer meeting with a goodly number present.

On Saturday night the Ladies' Aid gave an oyster, chicken and noodle supper at the church, which was well attended and enjoyed by all present. Again we had a good delegation of friends from Concord. The ladies realized about $20 from the supper.

On Sunday we held our first service with our new pastor. Good attendance at Sunday school; 46 present; collection over $3. There was good attendance at both the morning and evening services, and good attention was given to the preaching of Brother Cowan. He brought two very inspiring messages.

Four people on yesterday asked Brother Cowan to get their letters this week from the M. E. Church in this city and several others expressed their intention of moving their membership to our church.

We are glad indeed to welcome our new pastor and his family into our midst and the outlook for a good year is very fine indeed.

Pray for us that we may have a great year here in Kannapolis.

High Point.—On Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service the congregation had the pleasure of listening to a splendid sermon by Dr. R. M. Andrews, President of High Point College, in which he compared the two philosophies of life, Egoism and Altruism. The egoist says that self-preservation is the first law of nature, and proceeds to work for himself, and get all the wealth he can for himself, but on the other hand the altruist spends all his time, thought, and talent for the good of others. Dr. Andrews thinks that we humans should strike a happy medium in our views of life, and not go to either extreme view. This is "Christ's Formula for Fruitfulness," to exert our best efforts for ourselves and families, besides giving a reasonable amount of our time, strength, and material wealth to those less fortunate than ourselves. In keeping with this beautiful thought of the sermon was the lovely solo, "There is a Green Hill Far Away," rendered in a charming manner by Mrs. John C. Whitesell, with Organ accompaniment by Dan W. Smith, director of the choir. The choir rendered a beautiful anthem, "O For a Closer Walk With God." At the evening service the message on "Dependency of Christians," was delivered by Rev. E. L. Ballard, associate pastor, and the anthem was "Saviour, When Night Involves the Skies."

Next Sunday morning the congregation will be delighted to hear Dr. S. K. Spahr, Pastor Emeritus of Grace church, Greensboro, at the morning service, and at the evening hour the annual Thank-offering service of the Woman's Home Missionary Society will be held, and a number of girls and boys from the Children's Home will render an appropriate program. It is earnestly hoped that there will be a good attendance and a generous offering for the Home, which is a benevolent enterprise with a strong appeal to all of us.

The rapid flight of time and the recurrence of Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, wedding anniversaries, birthdays, and such bring to the thoughtful person thoughts "that do often lie too deep for tears—they remind us that our opportunities for doing good to our fellow-man are swiftly passing beyond recall, and if we fail to speak a little word of love or render an act of kindness we shall have cause for regret, "for we shall not pass this way again."

"They are slipping away, these sweet, swift years,
Like a leaf on the current cast;
With never a break in their rapid flow,
We watch them as one by one they go
Into the beautiful past."

Great interest is being aroused in the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society since it has been divided into Circles, which meet in different homes at the same time. On Monday afternoon Circle No 1 met with the Chairman, Mrs. L. J. Diffee on Johnson Street. Fourteen members were present and an interesting program on Stewardship was led by Mrs. Paul S. Kennett. The hostess served light refreshments, which were much enjoyed. Circle No. 2, Mrs. John H. Walker Chirman, held its meeting with Mrs. J. H. Allred with an attendance of ten members. Circle No. 3, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, Chairman, met in the home of Mrs. S. S. Coe in Emerywood, and sixteen members were in attendance. Thursday 40 members of the Society attended the three meetings, which is most gratifying. From all reports our Budget will be raised with ease.

A splendid Christian Endeavor meeting was held Monday evening, and the Topic, "Blessings We Often Forget," was ably presented by Miss Juanita Hammer. These young people continue to do splendid work.

We will have no regular Thanksgiving service in our church, but a specially helpful program for Wednesday evening prayer meeting will be given, and it is hoped that many of our people will assemble, at that time to praise and worship the bountiful Giver of all good things.

The members of the A. M. Idol Philathea Class are planning to distribute a large number of baskets of groceries and good things to eat among the less fortunate families of the city.

A number of our people motored to Wake Forest last Saturday to the High Point-Wake Forest football game. The local College team has been highly successful this season, having won six out of nine games played!

Professor T. C. Johnson's class in Journalism in the College has been contributing a page of news to the Sunday Enterprise for several months, but they will in future report for the Daily Enterprise, besides several other state papers. The Dramatic Club under the efficient leadership of Miss Todd, teacher of Expression, is the newest organization, and it presented three one-act plays on a recent evening, which brought forth much favorable comment. This club has its own workshop and prepares costumes and scenery, and it has been invited to join the State organization.

A unit of the Y. M. C. A. will be organized at the College in the near future under the leadership of Professor J. D. Hardy and others.

The members of the Junior church are selling Scripture Text Calendars to raise money for their subscription to the Building Fund of the church. These Calendars will make useful and welcome Christmas gifts.

The students of the City Schools will enjoy Thursday and Friday for Thanksgiving holidays, while the College will have but the one day, Thursday.

We are pained to hear the distressing news that came to Rev. E. Lester Ballard yesterday (Monday) from his home in Baltimore. His mother had the misfortune to fall down some stairs, when she received painful injuries. Mrs. Ballard is well known to our people here, having been a guest in her son's home last May for a few weeks, and we are hoping for her an early recovery from her injuries.

We are pleased to know that Miss Mozelle Ellison is recovering from injuries received in an automobile wreck a week ago. Her new Essex Coach, however, was partially demolished.

Her many friends are pleased to learn that Mrs. J. E. Tussey, who has been a patient in High Point Hospital for several weeks, is able to sit up again.

Fairview, Anderson Circuit.—We had with us yesterday, November 20, our new pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, from Asheboro. He came to us on trial. After hearing him twice, a vote was cast unanimously to keep him the ensuing year. I think he made a very favorable impression on the people at large who heard him and with the co-operation of the church I think the outlook for the new year very good.

The health of our community is very good at present. N. F.

Union Church, Halifax Charge.—When the Annual Conference convened, our pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, was unable to attend on account of illness. Our delegate secured his service for another year and it is with great pleasure that we welcome him back.

Mr. Spencer's Christian influence has reached deep into the hearts of his people, and brought forth lasting results for the promotion of God's cause here on earth.

Mr. Spencer has done much in the past and will do more in the future if sustained by the undivided support and prayers of his people, for, "the fervent and effectual prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

Let us strive, with the aid of our pastor, to make this the most successful year in the history of Union church. When our high aspirations are crushed to the dust, may we remember that, "not failure, but low aim is crime," and try, try again.

RUTH LEWIS, Reporter.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We have just closed a very successful year's work. We regretted very much to have to give up our former pastor, Rev. M. I. Crutchfield; he had labored so faithfully with us. We welcome our new pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, into our midst. We are looking forward to his first appointment the fourth Sunday in this month.

We have reorganized our Sunday school and the following officers and teachers were elected: Superintendent, B. A. McClimon; secretary, H. R. McClimon; choir leader, N. G. McClimon; pianist, Miss Kate Poole; teacher class No. 1, N. N. Smith; class No. 2, Mrs. Willie Greene; class No. 3, Mrs. B. A. McClimon; class No. 4, B. P. Smith; class No. 5, Mrs. N. G. McClimon; class No. 6, Miss Romaine Poole; class No. 7, Miss Kate Poole.

Miss Ruth Pearson has been elected president of the Christian Endeavor Society.

One of our oldest members, Mrs. Texie Greer, died November 20th. The bereaved ones have our sympathy.

ROMAINE POOLE, Reporter.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—We hated for our pastor to leave us, as he hadn't been with us but one year. Mr. Totten was very faithful to us at Zoar; he never missed a service through the year.

The rally service was held the fifth Sunday in October. Mrs. Totten gave us a very interesting and helpful talk on different things.

Our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Hall, delivered his first sermons Sunday at 11 and 7 at night. We feel that all are going to like Mr. Hall. We hope that he will mean much to the people, the church, and for the upbuilding of God's kingdom. The first quarterly conference will convene at Antioch on Saturday before the third Sunday in next month. Hope all the churches will be well represented.

Our Sunday school is doing very well. We will try to continue it through the winter if the weather permits. The Ladies' Aid will meet at the church on Thursday night before the first Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Furr from Stallings worshipped with us Sunday in the morning service. L. A.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Sunday marked the beginning of our new year with preaching by our new pastor.

Brother Hunter preached a very strong sermon stressing the great importance of church people getting their hearts right with God in order to make the right kind of progress.

I spoke of Brother Hunter being new. No man with anything like reasonable capacity for hearing could attend a session of our Annual Conference and not have new zeal and ambition at the end.

And we are new, as a charge are entirely new to him in one respect, that of church progress for the ensuing year.

We can truthfully say at this very opportune time. Thanksgiving, that we are thankful that Brother Hunter consents to continue serving us all these years.

It's no easy task to come to the same church for a period of even four or five years with something new every time, to say nothing of doing so for 15 or 18 years. While the writer hasn't followed Brother Hunter throughout his entire pastorate so close as for the last three years, I don't recall a single instance that he hasn't preached to us from a different text every time. Again let us be thankful that he has the courage to undertake the task of serving us with new zeal again.

We are sorry to have to report our Sunday school attendance dropping from 82 to 61 Sunday. Still we hope to more than gain our loss back next Sunday.

Appointments were made as follows: Committee for Christmas entertainment program composed of Mesdames C. W. Allen and E. A. Jones and Miss Lola Barber; collectors for funds to buy Christmas treat as follow: Ruby Stone, Ethel Kallam, Ethel Lane, Lettie Wall, Lola Barber, Adria Edwards, Aline Mickey, Beatrice Jones, Sybil Fowler, Kate Fulk.

With thankful hearts here is wishing every Methodist Protestant a real thankful week for Thanksgiving. C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Brother Williams preached his first sermon for the new conference year Sunday morning. We welcome Mr. Williams back for the fourth year. Every year that he has been with us seemed better than the preceding one. We hope that the best year of all is still in store for us. We have all learned to love Mr. Williams and family. The service rendered us by him will never be forgotten.

The Christian Endeavor Society gave a Thanksgiving program Sunday night. This was enjoyed by all present. A collection was taken for the Children's Home.

The first quarterly conference will meet at Efland the third. Hope all the officials and everyone else who can will be present.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely. We had 86 present Sunday.

Mrs. J. E. Taylor, one of our members, is in Watts Hospital, having undergone a serious operation. Her many friends wish for her a speedy recovery.

MRS. E. S. TAYLOR, Reporter.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Circuit.—We are glad to have Brother Ridge back with us. May everybody co-operate with him in the good work.

Our Sunday school has started off fine. It was just organized the first Sunday. Mr. Rufus Johnson is superintendent, Mr. Henry Lamar assistant.

Spencer.—We had our regular service Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, with our pastor, Rev. T. Glen Madison, back with us. We are glad to have him come back, and we are hoping for a bright and better future.

The Junior Christian Endeavorers are doing good work. They meet each Sunday, and we hope this hour will be a helpful one for our children.

We are planning a Christmas exercise for the children. We are hoping under the leadership of our pastor to make our church count for God and the Kingdom during the coming year. REPORTER.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—Sunday, November 20, was our first Sunday in the new conference year, and we were all glad to welcome our "new" pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, who has been with us for the last four years. We were glad to have our pastor return to us, because we feel that it will mean much to our church. Let us all work earnestly together that we may have a good year in the service of our Lord.

A large congregation was present to hear Brother Powell last night. He brought us an interesting message on the subject, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me?"

We are planning to have a Christmas tree on Monday night, December 26. Everybody come.

We have now purchased a fine heater for our church. If you don't believe it, come and see.

Pray for us that we may have a prosperous year and do great things for the Master.

BERNICE PEARSON, Reporter.

Henderson.—Last Sunday, November 13th, began the new conference year, and a large congregation was present at the morning services to welcome back our "new" pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter. We say new, because from the splendid sermon we felt that he truly had had a "renewing" of his spiritual life. From all reports of the Annual Conference it must have been a real joy and inspiration to all who attended. We are indeed glad to have Rev. Mr. Hunter returned to us and he has not only endeared himself to his congregation these past two years but to the community at large. Mrs. Hunter is also a most willing worker in all our church organizations, and we feel greatly blessed by having them in our midst again.

We have started the new year with much interest and enthusiasm, and are planning for better things than in the past. The stewards of the church met there yesterday, November 20, afternoon to receive the pledges of the congregation for the coming year.

On last Monday, November 14, the Ladies' Aid Society held their monthly meeting at the church. The president, Mrs. S. R. Watson, presided. The general business routine was carried out, and it was decided to do some papering at the parsonage. This organization has been a wonderful help to the church and parsonage. After the reports of various committees and other plans for the year, the meeting was closed by prayer by Rev. R. A. Hunter.

The Christian Endeavor Society is making a good start this year under the leadership of Miss Katie Cook. A Hallowe'en social was given on Monday night, October 31, at the Sunday school rooms, and a large number of young people were present. A very interesting program had been prepared and a continued run of contests, stunts and spooky stories made the occasion most enjoyable.

November 10th was Mrs. Hunter's birthday and the Philathea class met in a body at the home of Mrs. C. F. Tanksley, Sr., that evening and surprised Mrs. Hunter with a beautiful table lamp, for which she seemed most appreciative.

On Thursday night, November 17th, the Young Ladies' League met with Miss Myra Hight. The president, Mrs. H. A. Jordan, presided. After the devotionals, the general business of the society was transacted. It was voted on that the League buy a new suite of furniture for the parsonage hall. Many other plans were made for the coming year and commitees were appointed. At the conclusion of the meeting the hostess served refreshments.

I cannot close without a few remarks on the sermon. Rev. R. A. Hunter preached to us yesterday morning, November 20th. His subject was "Costly Living and Cheap Religion." His text was taken from II Samuel, 7th chapter, and 2nd verse, "I dwell in an house of cedar, but the ark of God dwelleth within curtains." This he most forcefully showed were the conditions abiding now in respect to some of our views in regards to the importance of the work and church of God today. Man's first thought is of self, naturally, and God second in many instances. Those who were present could not help but feel the true call of putting God's work first, and secreting within their own hearts the resolution to give Him the first place in all things. It was a wonderful sermon, preached, I am sure, in the loving spirit of a true disciple of Jesus Christ.

The Christian Endeavor had a very interesting meeting last night, led by Mr. Clyde L. Finch. The topic of Thanksgiving was discussed and the leader brought out the importance of giving thanks for our many blessings from day to day.

We truly feel that we are making a good beginning for our new year, and pray for us that we may all be new in a desire to go forward to new progress in the advancing of the Kingdom. REPORTER.

Bessemer City M. P. Church.—We have just closed one of the greatest revival meetings in our church for a long time. Revs. Pliss and Isenhour from Kings Mountain did the preaching, and the church was greatly revived and had about 46 conversions and six to join our church. We are praying that these young people will hold out faithful and be a great help to the church in winning others to Christ. We were glad indeed to have Brother C. E. Phillips from Monroe with us on Friday night. Hope he can come back and be with us some more. We are always glad to see him. Our new pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, has come to be with us, and helped some in our revival. He preached his first sermon November 20th. We all enjoyed his sermon. We are proud of our new preacher, because, for one reason, he is one of our boys, having known him ever since he was a little boy. We believe he is just what he preaches, and has the old time religion. May God bless him in his work this year. We are praying for this to be the best year yet.

Our Sunday school is still fine. We have added a new room for our Baraca class and have purchased chairs for our room. We ask all the readers of the Herald to pray for us that we may still go on to higher heights in God's work.

Our Ladies' Aid Society served a turkey dinner to the public Saturday, November 19th, and made very good success; the money to go on our piano which we purchased for our church. REPORTER.

Siler City.—We were very glad to have both our new pastor and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Dixon, with us last Sunday, November 20th, at all our services.

At the close of our Sunday school little Banks Fox recited a very appropriate poem on Thanksgiving. A large number of members, as well as many visitors from other churches, were present to hear Dr. Dixon deliver his message Sunday morning on the subject, "A Deeper Spiritual Life." The evening message was a very inspiring one—text John 1:42, "And He Brought Him to Jesus."

At a meeting of the members, which was held immediately after the morning service, it was agreed upon to invest the $500.00, which we now have in the Liberty-Siler City parsonage which will be built at Liberty as early as possible. Later we wil discuss plans by which we can add to this investment.

The first quarterly conference of the Siler City-Liberty charge will be held here next Wednesday evening at 7:30.

We are looking forward to the union Thanksgiving service of the churches of this City which will be in our church Thursday morning at 8:30. Dr. Dixon will deliver the message. REPORTER

Sweetening the Blow

An author who recently submitted a manuscript to a firm of Chinese publishers received the following letter covering its return:

"We read your manuscript with boundless delight. By the sacred ashes of our ancestors we swear that we have never dipt into a book of such overwhelming mastery. If we were to publish this book it would be impossible in the future to issue any book of a lower standard.

"As it is unthinkable that within the next ten thousand years we shall find its equal, we are, to our great regret, compelled to return this too divine work and beg you a thousand times to forgive our action."—Siam Observer (Bangkok).

"In the Beginning"

The Book of Genesis opens with the statement, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." The Gospel of John opens with the statement, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God."

Do both writers refer to the same time when they say "In the beginning?" The Genesis writer defines his statement by the date of creation. Whenever the world was created, whether thousands or millions or billions of years ago, that to the author of Genesis was the "beginning." He does not attempt to think back of that. The pre-existence of God the Creator is of course implied. But the Genesis writer does not presume to try to make any statement as to that pre-world era.

But John in his thought of the beginning seems to go back farther than the time of creation and to think of what was before the world was. His thought had been led by some wonderful historic events. Into this world whose creation the Genesis writer describes had come a Wonderful One whose being could not be accounted for by the fact of creation. To the casual observer he was a man, he belonged to the genus homo, but John had not been a mere casual observer; he had been in closest association with this Wonderful Man, and he had thought for years of the impressions received during those years of association; he had applied the logical powers of his mind to the facts held in his memory for perhaps fifty years, and he felt driven to a confident conclusion. That marvelous One did not belong to the rank of creatures, but must be exalted to the rank of Creator. Hence with the utmost confidence he writes, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." Jesus could say, "Before the world was, I am." He shared in that remote time the life of God. He was with God. He was God. Both separateness and identity are implied, though we may find it difficult to reconcile the two. Unity of substance and trinity of personality may not be very intelligible, but no one can show that it does not represent a fact in the divine mode of existence. We must not expect to understand God, but we must believe in God without understanding Him. John clearly enthrones Jesus as God. With one brief phrase he describes the whole process of the incarnation: "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." Some say that John does not anywhere refer to the virgin birth, but there is room in this large phrase for a dozen miraculous births. It was impossible that He should become flesh except through some supernatural event. The great importance of John's conclusion as to the person of Jesus is obvious. Had Jesus been only a part of the smitten, suffering world, there would have been no sure ground of hope that He might deliver men from the evils of the world. But if Jesus came from a source outside the world and superior to the world, then it might be seen that God had laid help on one that was indeed mighty. What a contrast between a Savior that began and ended with God and a savior that had his beginning and his end with men. Whether we look into the remote past or the remote future we behold Jesus with God, honored, enthroned, sharer of the divine purpose and the divine power. He is Alpha and Omega, the first and the last, and from beginning to end is with us to deliver and uplift us.

—The man who has but one idea in his head is sure to exaggerate that to top-heaviness, and thus he loses his equilibrium.—Aaron Hill.

Dr. Johnson's Question

In the report from the pastor of Gibsonville church occurs a question of great importance. The object of this question is to lead us all to consider how to give the juniors their proper place in the church service, the main preaching service. We want the juniors to stay for the church service, and yet we do not provide for them to take their part. Please consider earnestly this matter. Great results may come from the discovery of the way to do what is needed. The first thing is to recognize the fact that children as well as adults have the right to be spiritually provided for. If they cannot be provided for at the same time with the adults, then a separate time should be given them; that is, the adults should consent to dividing the time with the children. We believe adults generally would be willing and glad to do this, especially if the children's period were used by the children themselves in some appropriate way. Of course in this case there would have to be a competent and thoroughly interested leader of the children to prepare them for their part in the public service. The solution of this problem may lead to a solution of another serious problem, how to induce children of the Sunday school to remain for church services. We hope serious attention will be given to this subject and that some pastor may solve the problem in a way adapted to general use.

Why the Chinese Are Fighting

The war in China is variously understood. To some it is a struggle to rid China of foreigners. To others it is a contention between or among factions of the Chinese people for political and economic advantages. Doubtless different motives enter into the struggle. But we believe it would not be far amiss to say that the Chinese are fighting as dogs fight, as wolves fight, as Europeans and Americans once fought duels. They fight because they are actuated by hate. They fight because they have not had developed in their souls the motives that lead to peace and good will. All mankind are fighters until they are brought under the influence of those spiritual affections which it is the purpose of Christianity to awaken and develop. The present state of affairs in China reveals most strikingly the need of the work of true Christian missionaries. Christianity has put a stop to the fighting of duels in America and Christianity and Christianity alone will cure the Chinese people of their propensity to fight each other. Christianity will also settle the question of their right relation to foreign nations. What great and ugly difficulties Christianity will settle if only allowed to have right of way.

Nearly all the denominations are now troubled with theological unrest, many ministers and laymen questioning the ancient creeds and teaching doctrines that would have horrified our fathers. The modern way of looking at the Bible is very different from the old-time way, and even the central truth of the atonement is lightly regarded in many quarters. The doctrines of the Trinity, of the virgin birth, of eternal punishment, of the existence of the devil and hell and heaven and angels, and even the doctrines of immortality, of the deity of Christ, and the personality of God, are challenged in some quarters. The cure for this terrible state of affairs is not in less discussion, but in more of it. Objections must be faced and answered. If our fathers' reasons for the faith that was in them are not satisfactory to this generation, new reasons must be discovered and presented with the force of positive conviction. The cause of our theological unrest is a vast ignorance of the theology which has been allowed to grow up. Its cure is a return to theology with fresh zeal, and determination to discover the truth and hold fast to it.—C. E. World.

THE PROBLEM OF CHANGING TO OTHER BELIEFS AND PRACTICES

By Rev. Luther K. Long

In my childhood days I frequently heard a neighbor and my father discussing methods of preparing a field for sowing wheat. Mr. Cogle advocated shallow plowing, while my father defended his own practice of deep plowing and thorough packing by rolling and repeated harrowing. "By shallow plowing the under soil remains packed," argued Mr. Cogle, "and the surface is soon pulverized; so why waste time and strength turning up more depth only to pack it down again?" In later years I have heard my father say, "Mr. Cogle could always beat me talking, but I never failed to excel him in growing wheat." But this good neighbor of ours never changed either his mind or his method, though he really was a man of fair intelligence and could not well have escaped finding out that the best teaching and the most successful practice among leading farmers were against him.

It is by no means an easy thing for the average person to give up a theory by which he has long lived, or a method that has brought him whatever measure of success he may have attained, and take up with a view or a practice that he has been accustomed to oppose. That is why new times demand new men as well as new methods. That is why so few teachers, ministers, or business administrators are able to hold their leadership to the end of a long life—though they frequently keep the respect and affection of those with whom they have labored.

A missionary and his wife and five children are now on their way to China. He says he was glad to be called back, for he thinks the children will be safer in China, where they know the ways of the people, than they would be in unfamiliar America, where they are not able readily to adjust themsevles to the swift-moving motor cars and all the other death-dealing devices.

However, no man of mature years need feel too much discouraged with himself because his mind does not readily adjust itself to the changes in Christian thinking that seem to be so acceptable to younger people in these days. Most of us can only remain closely at home, away from the whirring wheels of progress, though there may be here and there one who is sufficiently alive all over to take advantage of all the safety dodges and devices. A minister's training is received, for the most part, in his youth and in schools where the accepted standards of the day's orthodoxy are inculcated. He becomes familiar with the arguments that have been thought sufficient for maintaining those views, and he learns the regular round of arguments and prejudices that are regarded as adequate for the destruction of any other theory of the truth. Summer schools and conventions, progressive books and magazines are helpful in keeping one in touch with the thinking that has been developed since one's school days. Fortunate the minister who thus wisely supplements his earlier training. But, in whatever way one gets at it, it is usually a long and often difficult process to shift from the inherited and inculcated ideas to the more reasonable and finer modern manner of looking at theological and practical questions.

Henry Ward Beecher is rightly looked upon as a minister progressive in his thinking and preaching, for such he was. He was the first among Congregational ministers to reject New England Calvinism, and he was among the first ministers anywhere to accept the theory of evolution as the most reasonable representation of God's way of doing things. But with all his greatness—and there has been none greater in the American pulpit—Mr. Beecher was limited by his early training and surroundings and by the times in which he lived. There has just come to light an estimate of him written nearly twenty-five years ago by the Rev. George A. Gordon, D.D., who recently retired from the pastorate of the Old South Congregational Church of Boston, after a service of forty-three years. Dr. Gordon says:

"Educated in his father's house, in college, and in early associations in the formal doctrines and nice distinctions of New England theology, he was well fitted to discern in the service of the church the limitations of his inherited belief. In his day the material did not exist for the reconstruction of theology. Intuitions and emotions, the witness of the great instincts of the soul, and the experiences of the heart are what one finds in Beecher. One is sometimes disappointed not to find in him the modern view in its integrity. But to condemn him for this failure would be an unjust judgment."

The late Rev. Professor William Newton Clark is a fine example of a man who reveals to us the long journey some men have been able to make in a single life-time. He began life in a pious Baptist home. He started his professional career as a Baptist minister who had passed through the usual preliminary training accorded to young men in his denomination. In the course of his long life he underwent many changes. His understanding of God, of Jesus Christ, of the Bible, became clearer, more reasonable, more Christian—even as his Christian experience and life matured and ripened. His little book, "Sixty Years With the Bible," tells in simple and instructive manner the story of these changes. It will richly repay any one for the time required to read it carefully.

Many ministers hesitate to give expression to the views which, in the course of years of study and growth, they have come to hold—and in which their hearts and minds find comfort and satisfaction—lest they give offense to conservative members of their congregations. The fact is that certain thoughtful laymen in most of these congregations are disheartened because they do not find in their pastors wise and sympathetic guides in these matters. There is no good reason why an intelligent, tactful, spiritually-minded minister should not satisfy the inquiring minds in his congregation without giving unnecessary offense to those who are still satisfied with things as they are.

Dr. Charles E. Jefferson is one of the most devoted and practical ministers of the gospel to be found in New York City, or anywhere else. He has recently spoken out concerning a single false and outworn idea about the Bible. I commend his words to the thoughtful consideration of the readers of the Herald. Dr. Jefferson says:

"The time has come for all members of the Christian Church to renounce openly and emphatically the old doctrine of verbal inspiration. The idea of Biblical inerrancy is outgrown. That teaching is false, demonstrably false. Christians owe it to Christ openly to discard it.

"The popular impression that the Church still clings to that antiquated idea handicaps it in all its work. It prejudices many sensible but ill-informed people against it. It damages the church in the eyes of the boys and girls in our colleges. Ministers are especially obligated to cut themselves loose from it, and to let the world know that they have done so.

"In those congregations in which there are many who are not yet instructed in the Bible, the falsity of the old doctrine should be frankly exposed. It is a mischievous idea and shsould be driven out of the minds of Christian people. It has plagued the world long enough. Our children should be delivered from it. The coming generation should not be blighted with it. So long as the church is supposed to hold a doctrine of inspiration which is obviously absurd and demonstrably false, the church is exposed to attacks which bewilder the young and confuse the minds of adults.

"Not a little of the hostility to the Christian Church in certain quarters is due to the impression that the church is irretrievably committeed to the exploded dogma of Biblical inerrancy. If the Bible has lost its interest to thousands of educated Americans, it is in part due to the fantastic and incredible theories with which the Bible has been bound up by its zealous and injudicious defenders.

"The time has come for plain speaking on the part of all ministers and officials and Bible school teachers. Silence is cowardice. It is not enough to let the old dogma alone. It must be publicly renounced and officially abandoned. No reputable scholar any longer holds it, but it still lingers in the minds of many of the uninstructed, and they too must be delivered."

I am anticipating with much satisfaction the coming of the time when we shall see Jesus as He is, when we shall know fully even as we are fully known, when our insight shall be stronger and clearer making it possible for us to apprehend various truths in their right relations. Meanwhile, my confidence is strong in the power of truth to commend itself to the intelligence of thoughtful people, and in the power of the human mind, aided by the Divine Spirit, increasingly to discover the truth that makes free.

ARTIFICIAL REST FOR THE LUNG

By Phillip P. Jacobs

Few, if any, of the chronic diseases that afflict the human body are so readily arrested as tuberculois. Given early discovery of tuberculosis, records of institutional treatment show that in favorable cases as high as 80 per cent to 85 per cent are restored practically to normal health. Autopsies reveal that hundreds of people die from all sorts of causes—people who at some time or other in their lives have had tuberculosis that has healed, apparently without their knowledge.

In the treatment of tuberculosis, there are four essentials: namely, sunshine, good food, freedom from mental worry, and rest, all to be supplemented by plenty of fresh air. The treatment of tuberculosis aims to throw Nature's balance in favor of the body. Its primary purpose is to let the normal processes of the body work with the least possible friction and resistance, to heal up the damage that has been done by the invading germs to the lung or other diseased part. In this effort, rest is of the greatest importance. Without rest, healing in tuberculosis cannot take place. It is as if one wished to heal a severe wound on the knuckle or the knee-cap and did not stop bending and agitating the affected joint.

When the physician, therefore, prescribes that the tuberculosis patient must lie in bed or in a reclining chair for hours and days at a time, the purpose is to relieve the lung of extra work. The number of breaths that it normally takes under exercise is thereby reduced to the smallest possible number at rest.

In many cases of tuberculosis, however, the disease has progressed to such an extent that artificial aids must be given to the lungs in order to produce the necessary rest. Three interesting operations are now being employed for this purpose.

Artificial pneumothorax is the oldest of the three operations and dates back to Forlanini, an Italian physician who first developed the idea in 1894. The operation consists basically of a slight puncture with a needle between the ribs of the chest wall and through the pleura or inner covering of the chest wall. Then, by filling the chest with an inert gas such as nitrogen, or with atmospheric air, the lung is collapsed and may be kept collapsed for several weeks. Occasional "refills" with gas will keep the lung collapsed and at rest for years. By this process of collapse also, diseased areas are compressed, and absorption of the poisons of the disease are made more difficult. Frequently the collapse method is used to control hemorrhage.

Still another operation to accomplish the same purpose is known as thoracoplasty. This operation is effected by cutting out short sections of the ribs near the center of the back and thereby again causing a collapse of the diseased lung. The additional value of thoracoplasty is that it makes it easier for the surgeon under certain circumstances to sever the common adhesions of the pleural sack of the chest wall and this cannot be done by the former operation without special apparatus and a great deal of skill.

In some instances, however, the adhesions can be severed by introducing a light into the chest cavity along with the original puncture, and also an electric cautery for cutting adhesions. The operator looks through a sort of periscope arrangement into the chest cavity and manipulates his cautery as desired. This operation was developed originally by Dr. Jacobaeus of Sweden.

Still a fourth type of operation is to sever the phrenic nerve. By doing this, a collapse of the lung is brought about, by paralysis of the diaphragm on the corresponding side, but the operation is a difficult and delicate one and cannot be used except in special cases. It is known as phrenicotomy.

The purpose of all of these operations, as has already been pointed out, is the same: namely, to put a diseased lung at rest. Through these operations, the lives of many tuberculosis patients have been prolonged a number of years. There are limitations, however, in their use and at the present time only selected cases can be treated by them. Rest and lots of it, plenty of grit and good medical supervision are essential to effect an arrest of the disease.

To educate the public regarding the prevention as well as the treatment of tuberculosis is one of the chief functions of the National Tuberculosis Association, which conducts its 20th annual Christmas seal sale throughout the country in December.

THE DAY OF THE GOLDEN RULE

By John H. Finley, Editor New York Times

Once more Golden Rule Sunday brings to mind the needs of the thousands of orphaned children in the Near East who have been supported by American friends of little children. The day falls on December fourth this year. The observance is always the same—the eating of a simple meal, one that brings to mind the life of these young wards of America in Greece and Armenia and the Holy Land; then, with hearts filled with sympathy for these parentless boys and girls who must all too soon go out into the world to care for themselves, the making of a contribution that they may have food throughout the year.

There are still hundreds of small children being made healthy and happy and many more hundreds of older boys and girls learning trades and crafts by which they will be able to support themselves when they have to earn their living. More than half of the youngsters in the orphanages are still under fourteen and they must be sheltered and taught until their turn comes to face life independently. Near East Relief has done a splendid piece of work in arousing initiative and independence in its charges, a thing hard to do in institutions, but it realizes that after all they are only little boys and girls, entering upon their career at an age when our American sons and daughters are still given parental care. It is therefore trying to keep a friendly eye on them for some time after they leave the orphanages, to make sure that they are not exploited, and that they may feel that for everyone of them there is some one to whom they may bring their problems and difficulties, some one who cares as a father or mother would.

It is for all these activities, some so definite, some so undefined but richly important, that the donations of Golden Rule Sunday go. Any donation may be sent to the Near East Relief, 151 Fifth Avenue, New York, whence it will go forth on its mission of maintaining life and building life for the future.

From Conference President

ON THE FIELD

Tuesday night, November 22, we were with Brother Suits and the Mebane people in their first quarterly conference. The conference was well attended and all of the business transacted in the spirit of harmony and hopefulness. Pastor Suits is popular, and he will have support, we are confident, in the progressive program outlined in his report. We were pleasantly entertained in the pastor's home. Just before leaving Mebane we called to see Brother Henry Nicholson and found him suffering from a crippled leg. We trust that he may be blessed with a speedy recovery.

Saturday, November 26, the first quarterly conference of Fairview-Glen Raven charge convened at Fairview church, the writer presiding. We regretted the absence of the pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams. He and his family were at the bedside of Sister Williams' mother, who was critically ill at that time. They have our deep sympathy and prayers. Bother churches were represented, and a spirit of progress was in evidence in the conference. Fairview has already contracted for the buildi ing of Sunday school rooms, and some of the material is now on the grounds. They are to be commended. This better housing will, of course, mean a larger and more efficient school. A splendid fellowship exists between pastor and people, and we expect a year of progress for this charge.

Sunday, November 27, was spent at home. We were in Sunday school at Grace and enjoyed learning at the feet of Brother J. Norman Wills, the efficient teacher of the Baraca class. At 11 a. m. we worshipped at West End and were edified by the sermon of Dr. Williams. In response to his invitation, we preached there in the evening service. This is one of our growing younger churches, and we are confident that the future will see it wielding influence in that section of Greensboro. The territory is large and promising, and the church is consecrated and progressive. Already they have contemplated Sunday school annex under construction, and the plans call for an early completion. The building provides for a departmental school, and will accommodate an attendance of 500. We heartily congratulate pastor and people upon their spirit of fellowship, and upon this large and progressive program. We shall watch the building programs of all of these churches with deep interest and earnest prayers.

College Assessment

The Herald will probably carry this week the assessment on all of the charges for the maintenance expense of the college. We are appointing December as "College Assessment Month." Please let every charge pay this assessment during this time. By doing this we will keep the college supplied with running money, and give the workers there an added Christmas joy. Spring church, on Spring Church charge, Rev. A. D. Shelton, pastor, has already set the pace by paying this assessment in full. We shall watch for the rapid succession of other charges. The full list will be given through The Herald each week.

Supplies

Effort is being made to supply, as rapidly as possible, the few charges that were left without pastoral supply at Conference. A little time will be necessary for this, but we hope to have a pastor on every charge very soon. So far as we are informed, these charges are all patient, and we assure them that we are not neglecting them and that their patience shall not be over-taxed.

Optimism

In this one-hundredth year of our church life, optimism should thrill our spirits. Our great Pilot has brought us in honor through the years of storm, and our ecclesiastical bark is now sailing smooth seas. Ours is a goodly heritage. Never was the future brighter for democratic Methodism. Surely God is with us, and will continue to use us in the furthering of His purposes. In His name, let us go forth with bouyant spirit to set up our banners, confidently believing that there is a place of service which the great Head of the church would have us fill.

THE GOSPEL OF REPENTANCE

Has the doctrine of repentance become obsolete? Why so little preaching on this subject nowadays? Has the world outgrown the need of it? Has a better way been found into grace and into glory? Or is the gospel ministry neglecting a most fundamental privilege and obligation?

It is a fact that the need of the exercise of repentance is as great and insistent today as it ever was. The world still lies in wickedness. Cities like Chicago and New York are deeper sunk in vice than Sodom and Gomorrah ever were. There are ten times more sinners in the world today than there were when Christ died. And these are not all outside the pale of the Christian Church.

It is true there can be no salvation, either here or hereafter, without repentance. "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish," says the Savior of souls and the Awarder of destiny. There can be no salvation by resolution, however sincere and praiseworthy. The thin veneer of good behavior cannot hide a multitude of sins. Good works, however beneficial and abundant, cannot purchase a seat in glory. Nor can ritualism impart the grace of eternal life.

There must be genuine repentance preached and exercised, or the plan of salvation is a failure. There must be deep sorrow for sin, or there can be no joy of forgiveness. There must be penitent confession of sin, or there can be no triumphant confession of Christ as Savior and Lord. And there must be a wholehearted forsaking of sin, or there can be no experience of "righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."—Selected.

Denominational Enterprises

FOREIGN MISSIONS—JAPAN

The reports of the Japan Mission for the Second Quarter have come to hand. Despite the fact that these reports cover that period of the year when the work in every department lags, more or less, they are very encouraging and in some departments the work is in a better condition than it has even been.

Educational—The Tokyo School for the Blind

This school is in charge of Rev. E. I. Obee. He reports that the school had a most excellent quarter for the summer season. The enrollment of thirty-nine is the largest it has been for some years. In this school are seven teachers all of whom are Christian. There has been some deficit in finances but that will disappear just as soon as the gifts of the Government begin to come in. During the Quarter the school received a special gift of 635 Yen (about $315.) from Count Mutsu with which to purchase some greatly needed models. The school is now better equipped than ever.

Nagoya College

Rev. Paul F. Warner is now in charge of this school for boys. He reports an enrollment of 1024 with thirty-four teachers, seventeen of whom are Christian. Three students were baptized during the quarter.

Of the work he writes: "As is the case everywhere, the work was retarded somewhat during the summer. The month of August is always a difficult one, financially. The salaries must be paid as usual, while there is no income from tuitions. Loans from several sources enabled us to meet the deficit. These loans were quickly paid from the September income. By means of the strictest economy we have been able to run the school this year with an exceedingly small appropriation from the Mission Board, even with less income from the students.

The fall term has opened with promise. We have received thirty-two new students. At the first monthly meeting of the teachers there was a genuine interest manifested on the part of all.

The new Church is proving a great blessing to us in carrying on the evangelistic work among the students. Every day sees some form of activity there: Bible classes, social meetings, or special evangelistic addresses. We are making a special effort, also, to increase interest in the Sunday services. A well organized Sunday School for the students is growing nicely."

It will be interesting to our people to know that the only appropriation asked of the Board for this school is an amount sufficient to cover property improvement and maintenance. The Japanese are very anxious to make the school self-supporting and have taken over the full support except the care of the property. This certainly is very gratifying. Since this school is the largest single missionary enterprise of the Church and since Government schools are now being established with much better buildings and equipment than we have certainly we should bend every effort to keep this school in the best possible condition so that we shall not lose our prestige.

Kindergartens

We have six kindergartens in Japan. They are Hamamatsu, Eiwa Jo Gakko, Oyame, Kakiwa, Futaba, and Shields. 384 children enrolled. In the Kakiwa Kindergarten a Daily Vacation School was held. There were seventeen sessions with an average attendance of sixty. Six children's meetings were also held with an average attendance of fifty. Most excellent work is being done in these kindergartens.

President's Report

The President of the Japan Mission is Chokichi Sakai. In his report he gives the following totals for the Quarter: Baptism—Adults, 21; children 1. Members received—By letter 9; full members 28, probationers 13. Full members now on roll 2164; probationers 307. Applicants for baptism, 51. Enquirers, 514. Sunday school enrollment, 2307. Officers and teachers, 143. Total offerings, 3,368 Yen.

LET THE CHILDREN SING!

Children are great singers. They love to sing, and they sing willingly and naturally. There is no artificial or mechanical tone or manner about their singing. It comes spontaneous from the heart.

The children of our Christian homes and under the care of our churches need to be taught to sing the right kind of religious songs and hymns. Many of the hymn books used in our Sunday schools are far from the kind needed to express the life experiences of the little child or the older one, nor do they tend toward a worshipful attitude. We heard a song leader in a Sunday school say not so long ago, "Come on now, children. Let's sing this next verse as if we were in a Ford, going to a picnic." Shall we not be more careful to see to it that hymn books more suitable to the experiences of the children, and that contain hymns that bring them closer to God, are used in our churches and Sunday schools?

But I did not start this article with the intention of writing an essay on Sunday school music. I have an appeal to make to you who are interested in the children, especially the boys and girls of our Children's Home. Only those who come into close contact with these boys and girls realize the great possibilities wrapped up in their unfolding lives, and their ability to do things as their lives daily unfold. Among the things they do is sing. They love to sing the hymns of the church as well as other songs—perhaps better. But alas! they have no hymn books from which to learn the hymns. Only a miscellaneous collection of dilapidated song books may be found around the buildings.

Will you help me make them a Christmas present of 75 copies of one of the best hymn books for children and youths in circulation today? You will have to act promptly if you will. Send me your check or money order for as many books as you are willing to pay for at 75 cents apiece, and I will acknowledge it through the columns of this paper. If you can only pay for one copy, that will be appreciated as much as larger amounts from those who are able to buy more. Several large contributions will help to keep the campaign from dragging, and assure the purchase of the books by Christmas. This will be a good investment, for the joy you bring to our own boys and girls in the Home will be your dividends.

Send your contribution to Rev. E. Lester Ballard, 807 N. Main Street, High Point, N. C.

—Europe is still seething. The nations are still suspicious of one another, still quarreling with one another. Men still talk expectantly of war. It will certainly come, with horrors that may end our civilization, unless the forces of Christianity get together and get tremendously busy. Every Christian Endeavor Society and every church should become an active peace society, doing what it can to promote international good will. Let us condemn every tendency toward war, and let us work for the Prince of Peace.—C. E. World.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE ROAD TO THANKSGIVING

Miss Lavinia Oldham was sweeping her front pavement with swift, capable strokes. A sharp November wind had brought down the last straggling leaves, and the diligence with which she was removing them was almost fierce. She was a tall, spare woman with faded blue eyes and graying hair. She wore a scanty black calico dress and a much-patched gingham apron. There was a rigid air about her; even her skirts did not swing when she moved, but hung stiffly about her thin figure.

She had almost finished her sweeping when she became conscious of some one standing behind her.

"Good morning," said an embarrassed voice.

Miss Lavinia leaned her broom against the fence, adjusted her spectacles and looked around. It was Letty Morris, daughter of the village's only maid-of-all-work. She was very tiny for her fourteen years, and had a thin, pale face with sparkling brown eyes. The hat she wore was evidently of her own manufacture, and her coat had been originally intended for some one much larger than herself.

Miss Lavinia looked at her sharply. "Well," she said, "what do you want?" She set her hands on her hips with elbows at sharp right angles and waited.

Letty's eyes fell before the stern glance, and her lips quivered. "I didn't want anything. I was just passing, and merely said good-morning," she faltered.

Miss Lavinia picked up the broom. "Is that all?" she said severely. "I supposed you had come to say something about the quarter-payment on the mortgage. Remember, it's due Thanksgiving Day."

"Please, Miss Lavinia," Letty burst out tearfully, "can't you let mother have a little longer time to get it? She has the promise of work all week, and William works in the grocery after school hours now. We've got the quarter-payment all ready but we lack the interest money—I mean the $10 we paid and can't find the receipt for."

"I suppose your mother sent you," Miss Lavinia replied, resuming her sweeping.

"No, she didn't," Letty answered quickly, "and she wouldn't like it if she knew it. She said this morning that there would be some way provided, she was sure. William was here and paid you the interest money, and I can't see why a receipt is so necessary, since we both know he paid it."

Letty's face flushed and then turned pale with terror when she realized what she had dared to say to this grim old lady, whose quarterly extractions of money was the one dark blot on their otherwise clear landscape.

Miss Lavinia was plainly angry. "Business is business," she snapped. "The only way I have been able to put by a few dollars to keep me in my old days was by watching the corners. I gave William the receipt and if you haven't got it, it's your lookout, not mine. I haven't it, that's sure." Without even looking in Letty's direction, she turned and stalked fiercely toward the house.

"We'll have it ready for you, Miss Lavinia," Letty called in her sweetest manner, "and I hope you have a happy Thanksgiving."

"H'm!" Miss Lavinia said to herself, after carefully turning over in her mind Letty's last words. "It'll be a happy one, I guess. I don't know what I've got to be so happy over, more than any one else. No kin in the world; but I count that a blessing, because they are always wanting you to do something for them. And what little money I have keeps me worried all the time as to its whereabouts and safety.

"That little, meachin' Morris girl wishing me a happy Thanksgiving. I guess they haven't anything to rejoice over. Five children to raise, and what Mrs. Morris earns by the day is all she has to do it with. I don't think she's any too careful with her money though. I saw her pay five cents a-piece for oranges and give them to the children. They can get along without such as that. I can't afford to eat them myself."

She went on into the kitchen and began preparations for her meager supper. She tried to think her accustomed thoughts, but somehow her mind kept reverting to Letty's sweet face and appealing voice. "Well," she said finally, making an effort to dismiss the whole affair from her mind, "I'm not going to worry; the money's due me, and I'm going to collect it."

The Morrises were at supper when Letty came home.

"Where have you been so long, child?" Mrs. Morris asked anxiously.

"I had to wait a long time in the store, and I talked to Miss Lavinia awhile, too," Letty answered quietly, slipping into her seat at the table.

Her mother glanced at her quickly. "You didn't say anything to her about the money, did you?" she asked.

"Yes, mother, I did. I had such a good opportunity that I couldn't help it. It was of no use, though; she said something about business being business."

"We don't need any extension of time now. Mrs. Barnes advanced me the money for my work this week and next. I hope things will run a little more smoothly during the next three months," Mrs. Morris said with a sigh.

"Miss Lavinia Oldham is an old ogre," spoke up William, who was eleven and much given to saying whatever came into his mind.

"Hush, my dear," his mother reprimanded. "It's an honest debt, and you can't blame her for collecting money that rightfully belongs to her. Your father borrowed the money from Miss Lavinia, and gave her a mortgage on this house years ago. Father's gone now, so the debt is between Miss Lavinia and us."

"Yes," he answered hotly; "but she doesn't need to make us pay that interest over again just because we can't produce a receipt. She knows I paid it as well as I do. I said, and I repeat, that she's an old ogre."

"You mean ogress, William," laughed Letty. "But you are mistaken, I know. I think she is a good woman inside, but just doesn't want to admit it. I think she is shriveling up; I mean her heart, of course, because she has no one to love her."

"I wish we could get that all paid before long," complained seven-year-old Robert. "I'm sick of beans and potatoes all the time. Wish we could have bananas once in awhile." Robert had an inordinate fondness for bananas, and had fully made up his mind to be a missionary in some clime where that fruit abounds.

Strong, capable, warm-hearted Mrs. Morris. She surveyed her little brood with mingled fondness and perplexity. Sometimes she felt as if she could not stand up under the load. Six to be fed and clothed and housed, and her meager earnings over the wash-tubs were the whole of the family's income. She knew that she could not manage were it not for her eldest child, Letty. She was the exact counterpart of her mother as far as capability and warm-heartedness were concerned, assuming complete charge of the younger children and the house during Mrs. Morris' absence.

Tears came in her eyes and a lump rose in her throat as she thought of what Robert had said. She so longed to buy the children a few little luxuries—potatoes and beans even palled on her at times—but all the money above actual need must be applied on that hateful mortgage, if she was to keep a roof over their heads.

"Never mind, my dears," she said brightly, as she rose and began clearing the table. She was swallowing hard to conceal her discouragement. "I've a secret for you. I did some heavy work for Mrs. Barnes today, that she usually hires a man to do, and she gave me an extra dollar. Day after tomorrow's Thanksgiving, and we're not going to have beans and potatoes, either. We're going to spend that dollar for a real feast!"

"Oh, goody! goody!" chorused all the little Morrises at once.

"What'll we have, mother?" Letty asked excitedly.

"I don't know yet. Let's do our work first, and then we'll make out our menu."

Another united whoop came from the four small throats as they scampered off to their tasks.

Miss Lavinia washed her supper dishes, putting them away methodically. Then she took her sewing, and sat by one of the front windows. For some unknown reason, Letty Morris's face was indelibly stamped on her mind, and it angered her. "I'm a fool," she said to herself fiercely; but, try as hard as she might, she could not get away from it.

She was not such a wicked person as many thought her; under that prim, disagreeable exterior she carried a soft heart. Some of the older people of the village could remember when she had been very much of a belle, and the old brick house had witnessed many gay occasions. As she grew older she became more reserved, and after the death of her parents she lived to herself entirely. The years of loneliness, with nothing to occupy her mind except her house and few business interests, had caused her to grow bitter and selfish. Her past life and the few misdeeds that she had committed rose up before her; her misdeeds had been few indeed, for she had tried to be an upright woman, according to her own code of morals. When she tried to put them aside, Letty's face appeared once more. She sat for a long time and thought and thought; people came and went on the street outside, but she did not see them. When the hall clock struck eleven, she carefully fastened the doors and went to bed.

All night she lay there, staring at the ceiling. What a mighty struggle was taking place in her mind! The struggle of a strange something that had once been a dominant power in her life, to be supreme over her selfishness and self-conceit. When the first streaks of dawn appeared in the sky, the battle ended, and she saw herself and her mode of life with new eyes. When she compared herself with that other person she once had been, she could scarcely believe that they were the same.

She arose and dressed herself, deliberately, hunting out a faded house dress and apron. She twisted her hair into a tighter knot than usual, and pinned a towel securely about her head. "There's a-plenty to be done," she said to herself as she descended the stairs.

The whole house was swept and dusted from attic to cellar, a very perfunctory operation, for there was no dirt or dust to be found, in the first place. The blinds were rolled up in the front parlor, and the old hair-cloth furniture, that had scarcely seen the light for years, was allowed to stand in the bright sunshine. All the vases were brought forth from their hiding-places and filled with great bunches of bittersweet from the garden. When she had finished her task, Miss Lavinia surveyed her transformed house with pleasure.

Then she went into the pantry and took down her mother's cook-books from the top shelf. She tried to remember just how long it was since she had last looked inside them. Such an orgy of marketing and cooking and baking and stewing that followed! The old cookie-jar was brought out and filled to the top with raisin and nut cookies. Rows of fat pumpkin pies graced the shelves, and there was a huge platterful of jam tarts. From some remote corner of her mind came the long-forgotten information that all children had a special weakness for strawberry-jam tarts. The fattest goose in her whole wabbling flock was slaughtered and made ready for the roasting, and a ham was sending out savory, spicy odors from the oven.

It was evening when the kitchen was finally set to rights; a great panfull of molasses candy set on the table to harden was the last of the preparations. Miss Lavinia smoothed her hair before the little glass in the kitchen, and changed her apron. Once more she surveyed her house, and then set out across the lots in the direction of the Morris cottage.

Her sharp rap on the door brought Letty with all the others at her heels. The advent of an evening visitor was a rarity in the Morris house, and the pleasure of crowding to the door was one they would not forgo, despite Letty's pleadings.

"Is your mother at home?" Miss Lavinia asked with the old-time severity in her voice.

Before Letty had time to answer, Mrs. Morris came forward. "Come in, Miss Lavinia," she said cordially. "I have the money ready."

"I haven't come for the money; it isn't due till tomorrow. I'd thought of having a little Thanksgiving this year; but with just me to eat, it doesn't pay to cook up much. I'd like to have you and the children come." For the first time she began to wonder vaguely what she would do if they refused.

Mrs. Morris was speechless with amazement. Was Lavinia Oldham standing on the front steps for some other purpose than to collect her money? Was she hearing aright? The children stood in a group around their mother, as much dumbfounded as she.

"Why, yes, Miss Lavinia," she said finally. "This is such a surprise; but we'll be glad to come."

Miss Lavinia made no reply, but walked down the steps and out to the gate. The awe-struck little group stood watching her. She turned and faced them as she latched the gate. "I'll look for you early," she called.

Speculation was rife in the cottage after this strange visit; all the children tried to talk at once. Mrs. Morris had some misgivings. Was there a flaw in the mortgage? she wondered.

"I was right," said Letty, triumphantly. "I knew she was a dear, good woman needing love, and now she is just finding out that she needs it."

The little Morrises were scrubbed and brushed and buttoned into their best very early on Thanksgiving morning, and by ten o'clock they were on their way to the Oldham house.

Miss Lavinia greeted them most cordially; there wasn't a trace of sternness about her; even her tone of voice had changed.

Such a day as they had! Painful memories of the monotonous beans and potatoes vanished into the air, and the children fairly reveled in roast goose and raisin cookies. They were allowed to play over the house at will, and Miss Lavinia said it had been more than fifty years since the old brick walls had watched children play, and she shouldn't wonder but that they couldn't believe their eyes. Letty and her mother helped in the kitchen, and Miss Lavinia's companionable chatter was a revelation to them. It was like a family united after years of separation.

They stayed until long after dark, and then a very sleepy, tired and happy group of youngsters were marshaled into wraps preparatory to home-going.

William aroused himself from the stupor that had enveloped him since dinner, and called to the other children: "Let's give three cheers for Miss Lavinia; she's a good sport!" Three characteristic Morris whoops resounded through the empty rooms.

Miss Lavinia smiled happily, and fumbled in her apron for a moment. She brought forth a folded piece of paper, and looked closely at Letty.

"This is yours, dear," she said. "Come here!"

Letty came forward timidly, and Miss Lavinia put the strange gift into her hand. She opened the paper slowly, examined it for a moment, and then looked at Miss Lavinia, her face very pale. She tried to say something, but the words seemed to stop in her throat, then burst into tears. "Why, Miss Lavinia, I—"

Miss Lavinia embraced her tenderly. "It's yours. The lesson you have taught me is worth far more than the few dollars that mortgage represents. It was your little, loving heart that showed me the right road—the one I used to travel when I was your age, but have missed so sadly in the late years. Speaking to me as you did day before yesterday made me see what a foolish woman I have been, and you and the rest aren't ever going to be sorry for it, either. I've got a confession to make, too. I know what became of that interest receipt! I had the lid off the cistern the day William was here, and when he dropped the paper the wind carried it to the edge. Before I could get it, it fluttered into the water. I don't know why I was trying to make you pay it over, unless it was because every one says I am stingy, and I thought I would show them I really was."

Mrs. Morris could not speak; her heart was too full. She put one arm around Miss Lavinia and the other around Letty, and the three stood in understanding silence.—Selected.

THANKSGIVING

Father of all,
Lord of the wind and the wave,
Thou who in all of thy mercy
Cometh to save.
Out of the brown old earth
Came the fullness of grain,
Sunshine and shadows—
Plenteous rain.

Father of light,
For the lowing of kine,
For the sheep that browse on the hillside,
Test of thy love divine;
For the wealth of bloom and the fragrance,
For the flutter of birds on the wing,
For all of these, Father, we thank thee,
And thy praises we sing.

Father of mercies,
We thank thee for the harvest of love,
For the garnering in of the friendships;
That Peace like a dove has come to us in our sorrows,
For these thine be the praise.
The Lord he gave and he taketh—
He bendeth the bow in twain;
We pass through the cleansing fires,
Through the furnace of sorrow and pain
He knows what is good for his children—
He fitteth the burden with care.
Never a cross is too heavy,
Nor greater than we can bear.

So praise and bless him forever,
The Father and giver of all,
Who loveth and guideth his children,
That they neither stumble nor fall.

GRANDMA'S THANKSGIVING

Grandma had promised the children a story before bedtime, and she was reminding them that only a half hour remained, and if they did not look out they would miss it.

"What shall the story be about?" asked grandma. "Oh, about Thanksgiving," said little Bess.

"I'll tell you about a Thanksgiving long ago," said grandma.

"Once upon a time, many years ago, some people who lived in England—called Puritans—were not happy in their old home, so they crossed the ocean to make another home for themselves in the country called America.

"One beautiful day in September, after bidding their friends good-bye, the little band set sail in their ship, the Mayflower.

"For four long months they were on the ocean, but at last they landed on the shore of Massachusetts, in December, 1620.

"It was so cold, the men left the women and children on the ship while they went on land to build log houses for their families to live in.

"When the springtime came the people planted corn; but it was too soon and Jack Frost pinched the tiny shoots as soon as they came out of the ground and the corn died.

"Still they tried to keep cheerful, knowing there was a big ship coming from England with corn and other good things on board.

"Days and weeks went by and no ship came. The store of food got less and less. How eagerly they watched, the children looking far over the water to catch a glimpse of the ship that was to bring them food!

"One morning some one spied a white sail in the distance which came nearer and nearer and at last came into the harbor. How happy they were! Now there would be plenty to eat.

"The church bell was rung, and all the people, large and small, came together to give thanks to God for sending the food.

"There were good dinners cooked that day, and every boy and girl had as much as he or she could eat.

"The next spring they were careful not to plant the corn so soon, and in the fall they reaped a good harvest and plenty for the next winter. A day was then set apart giving thanks to God for the first harvest in America. In 1789, November 26th was made a national day of Thanksgiving, and in 1863, Abraham Lincoln proclaimed the last Thursday in November as a day of Thanksgiving to God for the blessings of the past year."

"Is that the reason we keep Thanksgiving tomorrow?" asked Joey.

"Yes, dear," answered grandma, "and I wonder as you kneel in prayer if you have anything to be thankful for."

"Yes, indeed we have, grandma," said Bess, her eyes filling with tears; "we are thankful for you and papa and mamma and all the good things we have. Dan and Mary Brown have no papa and mamma or grandma, and when I asked Mary if she was glad 'twas Thanksgiving, she only said, 'What for? We only have bread and coffee, same as we always have.' I wish they had some of the good things we have, so they could be thankful."

"Well, dearie," said grandma, "suppose in your prayer you thank Jesus for your many blessings, and ask Him to bless Dan and Mary, and then we'll invite them here to spend Thanksgiving, and see what we can do to make them glad and happy."

"Oh, that will be lovely," said the little ones as they lifted up their hearts in prayer and thanksgiving to the dear Father above who had so richly blessed them.—Water Lily.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

BESS CHAPEL TO DENTON

Thursday evening after Conference, a truck from Denton brought Rev. C. M. Henderson's things and took ours back the next day. The Bess' Chapel Women's Home Missionary Society planned to give us a supper before we left, but on account of our hurrying off to our new charge the arrangement was not completed. We wish to thank these good women for their remembering us so kindly and for their cooperation and helpfulness during our three years' stay among them. We wish to thank all the members and friends at Bess Chapel and Fairfield for their part in making our stay with them pleasant and profitable to kingdom progress. May God's richest blessings be theirs during the coming year.

When we arrived at Denton, we found that the ladies of the church had put the parsonage in good condition for us. The men were rebuilding the back porch, and putting a new cover over the well. We appreciate very much what the Denton people have done to help us get straightened out in our new home.

Several of the members at Denton and in the country have remembered us with good things to eat, but on the evening of Thanksgiving Day the Denton Methodist Protestants along with a few Baptists and M. E.s stormed the parsonage about fifty strong and heaped the dining room table with a large variety of groceries. They also brought three chickens and a truck load of wood. The monetary value of the donations amounted to about $25.00. The spirit that promted it and the fellowship cannot be valued in money. We thank these good people for remembering us in this way.

The first quarterly conference of Denton Circuit will convene at Denton Church on Saturday at 7 p.m., December 10. Important business is to be transacted, so all official members are urged to be present.

E. A. BINGHAM.

FROM BROTHER BRASWELL

Dear Brethren:

I am back home once more. My wife is here with me. We are now located for the present at my daughter's, Mrs. F. C. Garman, 224 North Kerr Street, Concord, N. C.

Brethren, if there was ever a time that I need your sympathy it is now. I have been in the hospital off and on since April 1st, and I will have to return in a few days for bladder treatment. And it has taken all of my finance. I will highly appreciate any help from the brotherhood or any individual.

I missed the joy of being with you at Conference.

Yours in His name,

D. A. BRASWELL.

AN APPRECIATION FROM ENFIELD CHARGE

Enfield and surrounding country are saddened by the removal of our pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins.

All ages in all conditions will miss him. In the "gayer hours" he had "a voice of gladness and a smile," and in times of sickness and sorrow a gentle sympathy which strikes the right chord in the hearts of the people.

His vision and goodness, his keen insight into human nature, his ideals of a richer, fuller Christianlife, won for him the confidence and love of the entire community.

We pray that he and family may have a pleasant and successful year, and sometime may live among us again.

We are indeed fortunate to have so fine a man as Rev. J. C. Auman to supply this charge, and are hoping and praying for a year of cooperative Christian service.

A FRIEND.

Randleman Charge.—The first quarterly conference will be held at Level Cross Saturday, December 10th, at 2:30. A full attendance is desired. Important business requires our attention. W. H. NEESE.

Pleasant Grove.—Our work since conference has started off a very satisfactory way. The newly elected Sunday school teachers and officers are taking hold of the new year's work with renewed energy and the outlook for a successful year's work is very encouraging. The large attendance at our weekly prayer meetings is also encouraging. Then, too, the willingness of the members to lead and take part in these meetings is also encouraging to the pastor. The attendance at Sunday school for the past few weeks has been lessened to some extent because of sickness in some of our homes. Brother R. J. Kennedy and two little girls have been indoors with the "flu" for several weeks, but have recovered and are now at their usual places in church and Sunday school.

Last Monday several public school districts, of which Pleasant Grove community is one, voted to unite and build a large consolidated school. This school will be located in Pleasant Grove community and will be a standard high school. Our church people in the community are very enthusiastic over the matter, knowing as they do, that it will mean much for our church and the people as a whole. New homes and places of business are being built all along the highway between High Point and Thomasville. This, together with the coming of a new high school, means a great opportunity for our church. Our church people know this and it is giving new life to our work. The ample resources behind our people here bring to them a responsibility and opportunities that but few churches have.

We are now beginning our fifth year as pastor of this church. During all these years pastor's salary has been paid promptly at the close of each month, but this year they are starting off with advanced payments. Already nearly $250.00 has been paid on salary and $25.00 on A. C. B. This has been paid by the people and not from their endownment fund. In addition to this they are continually giving the pastor vegetables and other things needed in the home. We have no words adequate to express fully our appreciation for all these acts of kindness. Since writing the above, the death angel has come into the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Payne and taken their oldest child "Loyd Bundy." This little child drank carbolic acid and died later in the High Point Hospital. Funeral and burial at Pleasant Grove conducted by the pastor and Rev. J. H. Moton. The grief stricken parents have the sympathy of a large circle of friends and relatives.

G. L. REYNOLDS.

Laurel Hill.—Sunday, November 13, we began our new conference year. We were all glad to welcome our "new" pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, who has been with us for the past four years. Bro. Morgan delivered us a good sermon.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely. We are having good attendance every Sunday. Three weeks ago we elected officers for the coming year. Mr. A. A. Sain was re-elected as superintendent. Mr. Sain is a man that stands for God. Each Sunday he gives us a few thoughts to encourage our Sunday school. We are praying, looking, and hoping for a great Sunday school this year.

We have a wide-awake bunch of members at Laurel Hill. They are ready at any time and are always willing to help the church. One of our members has recently had our church re-painted. We are planning to buy some beautiful new carpet for the church soon.

Mrs. Davie Sain had the misfortune of falling off of the porch and breaking several bones. Mrs. Sain is one of our loyal members. We are praying for her speedy receovery.

Pray for us that we may have a prosperous year and do great things for our Master.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Haw River Circuit.—Something New Under the Sun: Who ever knew a pastor to be pounded twice by his people after he had closed his work on the charge? That is just what has happened to this scribe, the last one given by Mizpah church, Reidsville taking part. A severe pounding it was, too. Mizpah doesn't do things half-way.

We will not forget the kindnesses shown us by the good people of this charge. God bless them all.

Brother Curry has taken up the work where we left off. He is being well received and is getting a strong hold on the people. Haw River is fortunate in getting this splendid good man and his fine family in their midst, and the writer is delighted with the prospect of having fellowship with him this year. His salary was increased $350.

W. D. REED.

P. S. My address is Benaja, N. C.

Lineberry, Davidson Charge.—We are glad to have Rev. C. E. Ridge with us again. He has proved to be a faithful and much beloved pastor. May the Lord bless him and his family.

There was a very good attendance at Sunday school, also at Christian Endeavor Sunday night. We are very glad indeed that the young people are taking the interest they are in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. Brother A. H. Reid was re-elected superintendent of our Sunday school. Brother Reid is an excellent superintendent and a soul-stirring man. Most all the teachers were re-elected.

Miss Kate Frank has been re-elected pianist. Miss Frank has been acting as pianist since the marriage of her sister, Mrs. Bryce Reid, (nee Miss Louise Frank) a few months ago.

Miss Inez Ridge was re-elected organist for the junior choir.

The past year has been a great year in our Christian work; if it be the Lord's will we will endeavor to do more the coming year. With the co-operation of the people and the help of God we hope to press forward.

We regret to learn that one of our oldest members, Mr. W. T. Morris, who has been sick for quite a while, does not improve much.

Only three members of this church have died in the past year, these being Mr. R. L. Loflin, Mrs. Noah Morgan, Mrs. B. E. Morris. They were among the oldest of the members of the church. It was very hard to give these dear people up, but we feel that our loss is their eternal gain.

May the Lord continue to bless us and remember us in tender mercies. We ask the prayers of all Christian people.

ROBERT LANIER, Reporter.

Welch Memorial Church.—We were glad to be returned to Welch. We enjoyed three years service with this good people and hope that, this fourth year will be the best of all. We were heartily received on our return; the first Sunday in the new conference year we were met with one of the largest audiences it has been our privilege to preach to for some time. Not only have the congregations for the preaching service been increasing, but the Sunday school attendance has increased each Sunday. We are very optimistic in our expectations for the church this year. We made a very good start by receiving into our fellowship two new members the very first Sunday, and we have others in mind who have promised to unite with us in the near future. We are proud of our splendid Christian Endeavor Societies; they are doing a great work. The Senior Society distributed twenty-five baskets of provisions to the poor of the town on Thanksgiving Day. They are doing other things very commendable. The church did not forget the pastor and his family at this Thanksgiving season; as an evidence of their thoughtfulness of us, they came on Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving with a real pounding; time or space will not permit me to give an account of those who came, or the number of articles brought; we can say this, everything that was brought was useful, and very much appreciated; after all had assembled, I started to say in the cook room, but the cookrom would not hold them all, the dining room was also filled with folks standing around, we could not offer them seats, for we were unable to supply the seats, so we all stood and bowed our heads, in prayer and Thanksgiving to the Lord for the kindness shown to us by His people, and invoked God's blessings upon them. On Thanksgiving evening, Dr. Allman and his helpmate, Mrs. Allman, came over with the children and rendered a splendid program which was very much appreciated. We are always glad to have them with us, the offering that night only amounted to ten dollars and we were not satisfied with it, so the following Sunday we took another special offering for the Home, and received sixteen dollars which makes a total of twenty-six dollars as our Thankoffering. This service and offering were sponsored by the Home Missionary Society of our church, and for which they are to receive credit for the amount given. We have two live Missionary Societies as well as a live Ladies' Aid, they all mean so much to the church.

With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers, also a request for an interest in your prayers.

T. E. PIERCE, Pastor.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Our new pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, brought us two very interesting and helpful messages yesterday, November 27.

The people seem to be well pleased with him. We are looking forward to a great year's work.

The first quarterly conference will be held at this place on Saturday before the second Sunday in December.

Miss Sallie McClimon and Mr. R. T. Bennett were married November 24. Mrs. Bennett is a member of this church. She is the daughter of Mr. B. A. McClimon, our Sunday school superintendent, and is a very active church worker.

Mr. Bennett is a member of the Baptist church.

We wish this couple much happiness.

REPORTER.

Albemarle.—Our fourth quarterly conference convened on Wednesday, October 26, at which time the conference unanimously instructed the delegate, Mr. R. L. Leonard, to bring Rev. Mr. Anderson back. We were fortunate indeed to get him and family back, for we really think we have as good a preacher as can be found in the N. C. Conference.

After our pastor returned from Annual Conference, Mr. D. J. Hatley presented him and Mrs. Anderson with a beautiful new white brick bungalow to make as their home as long as they live in Albemarle, and we are hoping that will be a long while.

On Thursday, November 10, the Ladies' Aid Society held their annual Floral Show, Bazaar and Supper which was well attended and enjoyed by all present. The ladies realized $122.00 from their sale and supper.

Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely with Mr. R. L. Leonard, Superintendent. We have a very good attendance and offering each Sunday but hope to grow stronger this year.

The Christian Endeavorers hold their meetings on Thursday evening of each week and these young people are doing a splendid work.

On the second Sunday of the Conference year we installed officers of the church. Several of our young people were given office and we are looking forward for a good year's work.

On Wednesday night, November 7, the first quarterly conference will meet. Hope all the officials and everyone else who can will be present. We are planning to do greater things this year than ever before. Pray for us that we may do more for the church and the Master.

BERTHA HATLEY, Reporter.

Haw River Mission.—Haw River is still on the map. There has not been a report for quite a while but we have not been asleep at all. We are still trying to push forward and do some good work for our Lord.

President Taylor came to us on Wednesday after Conference and made plans for our year's work.

Rev. G. W. Holmes was sent to us for the second Sunday in November and he preached two fine sermons and the church liked him so well we called him for our pastor for the year's work and he was with us again yesterday, the fourth Sunday; he gave two more of his gospel messages.

We have a good Sunday school. We had 104 on roll and 111 present. We have a fine choir organized with Joe Holt choir leader. We have prayer meeting every Wednesday night using the Christian Endeavor topic. We are going to try to raise money enough this year to clear the debt on our church. I do believe it can be done if every member will come on and help shoulder the load.

Pray for us that we may have a great year.

REPORTER.

High Point.—Rev. Dr. S. K. Spahr, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., who has so acceptably served the pastorate of Grace church, Greensboro, for the past four years, was greeted by a large and attentive congregation last Sunday morning. He has been secured to fill the pulpit of the First church at the 11 o'clock service on Sunday for several months. In his introductory remarks he told us that he has been preaching the Gospel for 55 years, a fact that is hard to realize when one sees a man so vigorous in body, mind, and spirit as Dr. Spahr. He says that he anticipates much pleasure in speaking weekly to our congregation, which might almost be termed a cosmopolitan one, made up as it is of boys and girls from the Children's Home, students and Faculty of High Point College, young people, business and professional men and matrons of our city, and he hopes to be able to bring help and encouragement into the minds and lives of these various groups in their problems and perplexities. Dr. Spahr based his discourse on the text found in Acts 10:29, "I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?" which he called "A Reasonable Question." Simon Peter was sent by God to lodge by the sea side with Simon, a tanner, which was considered a lowly calling. What will God not do to bring light to some hungry, starving soul, for He places great value upon the soul of one man. Peter led Cornelius to be baptized, and he became a leader in the early church. Dr. Spahr answered the "Reasonable Question" thus: by asking him to come to our church to preach every Sabbath morning, he thinks we want him to preach Christ as "the fairest among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely," to bring comfort and heart's ease to the bereaved and distressed, cheer and encouragement to the suffering and afflicted, loving kindness to the erring and unfortunate, and strength and courage to the busy man of affairs and the mother in the home, "cumbered with much serving." Dr. Spahr's opening prayer was a benediction, which brought tears to many eyes by the sweetness of his voice and his great understanding heart. The congregation counts itself most fortunate, and is looking forward with keenest delight to his ministry among us, which we feel is going to be a great blessing. The choir sang the beautiful anthem by Stainer, "I am Alpha and Omega" in an unusually bright and spirited manner, and Mrs. J. Hobart Allred rendered "Spirit of Love" in her usual charming style. When the doors of the church were opened, a bright, promising boy, Yancey S. Cecil, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Cecil, was baptized by Rev. Mr. Ballard with water from the Jordan river, and Mrs. M. P. Sechrest, wife of one of our most loyal and esteemed members, united with the church by transfer from the First Baptist of this city. We welcome her most heartily to our fellowship.

At the evening hour the Annual Thankoffering Service was observed by the Woman's Missionary Society. A number of boys and girls from the Children's Home came and presented a splendid program to an appreciative audience. The following children presented songs, recitations, a harvest drill, and a Pageant, "Spirit of Mercy;" Mary Crickmore, Mildred Markland, Laura Braswell, Virginia Beam, Lola Mae Byrd, Flora Coble, Ruth Beam, Alice Koontz, Edna Doby, Mattie Ruth Guyer, Nancy Dixon, Margaret Coble, Hobart Brown, George Crickmore, Charles Craven, Ray Guest, Howard Garmon, and Rowland Garmon. These numbers were well given, and the children show excellent training and unusual poise in their appearance before an audience. We beg to mention two unusually good numbers: "When We Haven't Said Our Prayers," by George Crickmore, and Edgar Guest's "House By the Side of the Road," by Laura Braswell. The Pageant, "Spirit of Mercy," was presented in a most creditable manner. The programs were printed by the boys on their own press. Superintendent Allman made some remarks, and told especially of some boys and girls who have been reared in the Home, and are now out in the world bearing a share of its work and responsibility, and are "making good." He announced that the Annual Bazaar of Fancy Work and Chicken Supper will be held at the Home on Thursday, December 8. A number of young girls of the congregation served as ushers, Misses Sara Everhart, Mildred Krieger, Frances Bodenheimer, and Beatrice Harbinson, and they took up the offering, which amounted to $103.00.

The Junior Mission Circle held its monthly meeting on Monday afternoon at the church with Mrs. R. M. Andrews leader.

At the weekly Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening the topic discussed was, "If I were to be a Home Missionary where would I want to work?" which was led by Miss Mary Koonce.

The mid-week prayer meeting is looking up, and twice as many as usual attended last week. It is hoped that we may continue to improve, and thus make happy the heart of our faithful young associate pastor.

Unusually interesting and helpful programs for the Home Missionary Society meetings have been made out by the Committee appointed for this purpose, and it is planned to add some new features in the way of music, readings, and talks by out-of-town speakers.

We are pained to learn that Mrs. W. P. Pickett is again kept at home by illness. Mrs. J. H. Jennings who has been a patient in High Point Hospital, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to her home on Lindsay Street.

High Point College is planning to send three delegates to the International Student Volunteer Conference which is to be held in Detroit, Michigan, December 28-January 2. Two of these delegates will be chosen from the Christian Endeavor Society and the other will be a member of the Faculty. Schools sending delegates are allowed one for every one hundred students, thus the College is entitled to three delegates. These delegates will be chosen by the students Wednesday morning at chapel service.

Mebane.—Sunday morning at eleven o'clock our annual Thank-offering service of the Woman's Home Missionary Society was held. Special music and talks on our various Home Mission points featured the program. Total collection at this time which goes to our Children's Home amounted to $66.50. Of this amount $45.00 was contributed by the Baraca class. A very good number were present for Sunday school. Sunday evening we listened to a splendid sermon by our pastor.

On Monday afternoon of last week the William-Nicholson Mission Band met with Hazel and Kathleen Qualls, with very good attendance. The program consisted of songs, scripture reading, sentence prayers, and readings on Thanksgiving. During the social hour apples and home-made candy was served.

Monday evening at 7:30 the Worker's Council met at the church after having been inactive for some time for various reasons. Problems of Sunday school and church were discussed at this meeting, also a recommendation to the Sunday school for our Christmas program was passed upon. We hope our Workers' Council can meet from now on with an increase in attendance. On Wednesday afternoon, November 23, Mr. Tyson Smith and Miss Lucile Jobe were united in marriage by Rev. D. R. Williams at the Methodist Protestant parsonage at Graham. These are fine young people, members of our church and Sunday school, and we wish for them much happiness through life. They are at home at present with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brady.

Our first quarterly conference was held at the church on Tuesday evening of last week at 7:30. We were glad to have with us at this time our Annual Conference President, Rev. S. W. Taylor. Very good number present, and I'm sure we all enjoyed the splendid talk by Mr. Taylor and the suggestions for our year's work. Our pastor also had a splendid report and recommendations to present to this meeting. Rev. Mr. Taylor presided at the conference. REPORTER.

Vance.—Notice: The first quarterly conference of this charge will convene at Spring Valley church on Saturday before the second Sunday in December (December 10th). It is hoped that all the churches will be well represented. Rev. S. W. Taylor, President of the North Carolina Conference, is expected to be with us at that time. He will preach for us at the eleven o'clock service and have charge of the business session in the afternoon. Come on, brethren, and let's start the year right. M. P. CHAMBLISS, Pastor.

Hollister.—Our pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer, filled his appointment with us Sunday morning at the usual hour. He brought to us a wonderful sermon. Wish more of our people had been present to hear it. Mr. Spencer has had his teeth pulled out recently but that doesn't stop him from preaching. He can preach as well without them as he could with them.

Preparations are being made for our Christmas program. Misses Bell Wood and Sallie Wood have charge of the program. We are hoping to have a good program.

Our first quarterly conference will meet at Ringwood church Friday, December 16, at 2 p.m. All official members are urged to be present.

We will have services as usual every fourth Sunday at 11 o'clock and every second Sunday evening at 7:30. We hope to increase attendance at the regular services during this new conference year.

Pray for us that we may accomplish more this year for our Lord than we have in the past years.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Asheboro.—Asheboro people enjoyed the sessions of the Annual Conference and feel that it is very beneficial to the church to have this body of men and women. Our people are pleased to have Rev. J. E. Pritchard returned as pastor, and he and Mrs. Pritchard have a warm place in the hearts of the Asheboro people.

The officers for the new year were installed the third Sunday at the eleven o'clock service; practically all of them were present and the service was very impressive.

The first quarterly conference was held Tuesday evening, the 22nd, and many plans were discussed for the work of the coming year, among these were the Vesper Services for the month of December.

As this is my first time to report I will not make it very long.

EXIE CALICUTT, Reporter.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Charge.

"Our little systems have their day,
They have their day, and cease to be."

It was my rule, while pastor of Mecklenburg charge, when a young man sought the hand, for a life companion, of one of our fair daughters, that they both must remain on the chargge (that is, if they consulted the wishes of the pastor). But in the interval of Conference sitting and the change of pastors for this charge, something has happened: my rule has been smashed. Here came a man from Birmingham, Alabama, and won the heart of one of the charming young ladies of Bulah section. But as a kind of pacifier of my outraged rule, it was the happy privilege of the writer to be called to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shell, to officiate in the marriage of their pretty daughter, Miss Evelyn, and Mr. Henry Lemmonds, of Birmingham, Alabama. The wedding was solemnized in the presence of a few select friends at 6:00 o'clock, p.m., November 17, 1927.

Soon after the ceremony, we were invited to the dining room, where a very delightful supper was waiting to greet us, and a real feast followed, after which the bride and groom took their departure for Charlotte to take train for Birmingham, Alabama, at which place the happy couple will make their future home.

Miss Shell is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shell. She is attractive, lovely, brilliant, and unsurpassed in her community for usefulness and aptitude, in whatever circle her duty called her. Her large host of friends, and especially the church, will keenly feel the effects of her departure, and greatly miss her splendid talents.

Mr. Lemmonds is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Lemmonds. He holds a responsible position with the city police force of his city. The parents of each are sturdy citizens, and we predict for this charming couple a happy and useful career. May they fulfil the high expectations of their blood and race. ROBERT SHORT.

Mebane Charge.—Our work is starting off nicely. We held our first quarterly conference Tuesday evening, November 22nd. Brother Taylor was with us and proved an inspiration to all present.

Some recommendations were adopted which we are sure, if carried out, will mean progress for the work during the year. Reports were good, and indicated that there was great interest along about every line of church work.

We enjoyed having Brother Taylor with us very much, and we greatly appreciate his helpful suggestions. We feel sure we are safe in predicting a good year for this charge.

Since our last report we have received many tokens of kindness which we appreciate very much. EDWARD SUITS.

Orange Circuit, Hebron.—We were all exceedingly glad to have our pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, returned to us. The work has started off nicely. Officers have been elected and installed for the year. We are very grateful to Messrs. J. R. Boone and L. C. Sykes for placing a nice church sign board in front of the church.

This adds much to the appearance.

The ladies of the W. H. M. S. gave a play Thanksgiving, which was a decided success. The collection which was about $17.00 was our Thank-offering for the Children's Home.

Our new Sunday school superintendent is making good on his job. Hope our attendance at Sunday school will pick up some. It is not as good as it should be. There are so many in our community who, it seems to me should attend Sunday school, but do not.

The Sunday school will hold Christmas services in some form. That to be decided later.

The children will also receive a treat.

All the official members are expected to attend quarterly conference at Efland church next Saturday. Also the members of the W. H. M. S.

Best wishes.

MRS. LELIA GILL, Reporter.

Gibsonville.—Does any one have a workable plan by which something worth while for the children may be put into the eleven o'clock church hour? I would like to know about it. This for the small church not financially able to employ a leader to conduct a Junior church service and does not have enough volunteer workers to carry on the necessary Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work and conduct a Junior church service without repetition or duplication, that is, without using as leader for the Junior church a worker with whom the children are associated in Sunday school or Christian Endeavor or both. It would seem that when these youngsters come into the Junior church service they should meet a different personality in leadership.

Last Sunday's activities produced some gratifying results. The Sunday school attendance was around high water mark. The Men's Bible class, Mr. W. J. Jennings, teacher, raised fifty odd dollars in about three minutes to meet an obligation on the purchase price of the parsonage.

At the evening church hour the Woman's Home Missionary Society held its annual Thank-offering service, giving as the main part of the program "The Thank-Offering Box Convention." The hour was enlivened by bright music and a humorous-serious recitation by Mrs. Carl Allen. The offering amounted to more than twenty-seven dollars, more than one fourth of the quota of the local W. H. M. S. for the year.

We have lost since conference one member by death, Brother W. A. Brown; the first death among our membership since I came as pastor a year ago.

The pastor and family have been remembered from time to time by members and friends in a substantial way. It is fine to live among people that enable you to know that it is hog killing time without going to the calendar to see how late in the season it is or to the thermometer to see how cold it is; also to know it is 'possum hunting time without having to go to the fields to see if the persimmons are ripe. T. M. JOHNSON.

Harris Chapel, Vance.—Our pastor filled his first appointment at Harris Chapel November 13th, and a good congregation was present to welcome him back. He privileged the older people to nap, while he talked to our youth; but we had no idea of letting a good, inspiring speech pass on without sharing it.

A Christian Endeavor Society has been organized, with the following officials: Miss Nellie McSwaine, president, Miss Ruby McCann, vice-president, and Mr. Julian Wyche, secretary.

We had a very interesting service last Sunday evening, November 20, led by Miss Nellie McSwaine. The topic of Thanksgiving was discussed, and Miss McSwaine, in the loving spirit of a true disciple of Jesus Christ, made us realize that we often forget our blessings. Miss Virginia Burroughs, a junior, gave a talk on "The Origin of Thanksgiving, and the Faith of the Pilgrims." A large congregation of young people was present to enjoy this service.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely showing a good increase in attendance and collection. Our secretary-treasurer has given us a very encouraging report of last year's work, showing a considerable cash balance.

We have started the new year with much interest and enthusiasm, and pray that we may be inspired to press forward in doing things that will mean great progress in the advancing of the kingdom.

REPORTER.

Vaughn, Littleton Circuit.—We had our first sermon by our new pastor Sunday, Mr. Crutchfield. There was a large congregation present who enjoyed the splendid sermon. He urged the people to pray for him this year and that he may do his best with his ill health.

After the sermon was over he called a business meeting of the members of the church and elected a secretary and reporter.

On Friday, December 16th, the quarterly conference will be held at Littleton. We are planning to cover our church; we have the shingles all ready to start to work Monday, but the man who was to help us has a sore hand. Hope to start soon.

Our regular preaching services are on the fourth Sunday morning at eleven o'clock and afternoon at seven-thirty o'clock.

We are praying that this next year will be the greatest year in work of the Lord for our pastor and church and everyone else.

REPORTER.

Bethany Church, Randolph Circuit.—We are all delighted to have our pastor, Brother A. O. Lindley, returned to us for another year. He comes to us with new zeal. The splendid sermon he brought to us the third Sunday speaks for itself.

Our special meeting in August was a great success; some were converted, and joined the church; the church also was greatly revived. Rev. J. E. Pritchard of Asheboro was our help. He brought to us splendid sermons.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Bethel M. P. church Saturday, November 26th.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. Mr. D. T. Gaster who for many years has been our superintendent has been re-elected. Mr. Gaster is very faithful indeed. W. P. Julian was re-elected secretary.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society met with Mrs. J. G. Julian Saturday, November 19th. We meet next month with Mrs. J. M. Aldridge.

We have had a good year at this place, and as the old year passes out, and the new year draws near, let us all endeavor to make it a still better one.

MRS. C. E. JULIAN.

First Church, Concord.—A large congregation was present at all services yesterday. The Sunday school attendance was 255 with a Thanksgiving offering of $40.07 for our Children's Home. At the morning hour Mr. Hendry preached from First Kings 8:18, "It was good that it was in thine heart." This was an unusually good sermon and the large audience was very attentive throughout the service. At the close of the service the following new members were received into the church—Mr. and Mrs. Coy Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Winecoff and Miss Eunice Smith, daughter of Mr. Smith. All these coming by letter from Forest Hill M. E. Church, this city. This makes a total of six new members already since Conference. Our goal is 100 for the year. Rev. Lawrence Little who is at home for a few days was present and assisted in both services. On next Sunday a campaign will be started in our church, running for 10 days or two weeks known as "The One to Win One Campaign." A large majority of our members have pledged to at least try to win one soul for Christ. Rev. N. G. Bethea of Lexington will do the preaching, and we are hoping and praying for great results.

Brother J. R. Helms who has been ill for several days is better at this writing, we are glad to report.

Rev. D. A. Braswell was brought home from State Hospital at Morganton last week and is now in the Concord Hospital in a critical condition.

Our new Sunday school superintendent, Mr. J. S. Polk and family, were missed at all services Sunday. They were at the bedside of Mr. Polk's mother who suffered a stroke of paralysis Saturday. One of the best things our church has enjoyed in a long time was the Brotherhood supper and reception for our pastor and wife held last Tuesday night in the basement of the new Sunday school building. The reception followed the monthly Brotherhood supper and was presided over by Rev. Lawrence Little. After a few remarks from Mr. Little, Mr. W. J. Widenhouse representing our church spoke and paid a very high tribute to Rev. and Mrs. Hendry and their work during the past year and pledging them our co-operation during the coming year. Rev. W. P. Robinson of Bayless Memorial Presbyterian Church then welcomed Mr. Hendry in behalf of the Ministerial Association and was followed by Mayor C. H. Barrier, for the City. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hendry responded in a very touching way, after which Rev. N. G. Bethea of Lexington made the principal address. The speeches were all full of wit and humor and were thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Four M. P. ministers and their wives were present—Rev. and Mrs. Hendry, Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence Little, Rev. and Mrs. N. G. Bethea of Lexington, and Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Cowan from Kannapolis.

Work on the new Sunday school building was resumed this (Monday) morning and we hope to soon be able to finish it.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Asheville.—The Bazaar on the night of the 22nd was certainly well conducted. The Christmas articles for sale were attractive and their prices reasonable. The dinners were fine. The proceeds amounted to a little over twenty dollars. Much credit is due Mrs. H. O. Charnock and her committee for their hard work and the splendid manner the affair was conducted.

On Wednesday night, the 23rd, Rev. J. S. Lyons conducted our prayer meeting. His address was one of the finest. He explained the practice and the benefits of the "morning watch" by the average Christian. He was to preach for us last night, but was called out of this city. His friend, Professor J. O. VanMeter, also of the Asheville School faculty, substituted. Brother VanMeter spoke on "A Defeated Personality." His address was thrilling. He told how many otherwise gifted persons become failures because of some one sin, known or hidden. This Wednesday night he will finish his address, by telling us "How it Happened." This will be the story of his own salvation.

Sunday morning Brother Homer Casto preached for us. His message was most helpful on "That I may know Jesus, and the power of His resurrection and the fellowship of His sufferings." Brother Casto will preach for us again next Sunday morning.

Miss Eudora Youmginer worshipped with us Sunday. She is teaching in High Point.

The attendance at all the services was good. Ten more in Sunday school than on the Sunday before. The interest is most encouraging. Miss Verdie McIntyre and Mr. Pratt and the Misses Hanner and Miss Flossie Stout are giving us good music. Miss Norvella McIntyre was in our services Sunday. There are a number of visitors at all the services. Brother Paschal will arrive about December 17th.

REPORTER.

Kernersville Charge, Sandy Ridge.—Brother Lowdermilk filled his appointment this morning and preached a wonderful sermon from the Text: "The wages of sin is death." And oh, how sad it is to see so many who are living the kind of life that will receive the wages of death.

It is so strange that people will go on in sin when they know what the end will be. It is so much sweeter and nobler and greater to live the Christian life. To feel each night when we lie down to rest that we have lived our best and that if Jesus were to come for us during the night that we could say: "I'll lay my head on Jesus' breast and breathe my life out sweetly there."

'Tis so sweet to trust in Jesus. How I wish that we could get every unsaved one to trust in Jesus. May we everyone who is a Christian be more faithful than ever before. May we let our light shine as never before. It is alarming how our young people are drifting out of the church and out into sin. Let us pray as never before. Prayer is the only remedy and I feel sometimes that if father and mother prayed more son and daughter would be a better boy and girl. I feel that our church is going to make a better record this year than it has in several past. Our Sunday school has improved greatly and we are expecting greater improvement. We don't have as many present as we ought to have but the interest is spreading and I feel sure that we are going to have a good Sunday school during the winter months.

Let's stand by our pastors this year and pray for the best year yet.

REPORTER.

Littleton Circuit.—Our Sunday school is going on nicely. We hated to give up the preacher we had. The last sermon he gave us was November 4. It was splendid to all who heard it. Our new preacher, Mr. Crutchfield, will be with us the second Sunday in December. Mrs. V. C. Pittard, member of Hawkins Chapel church, has broken her arm, but it is better now. Mr. A. D. Pittard, another of our members, has gone to the Sanatorium. He thinks he has T. B. Hope he will be back soon.

MISS ELIZABETH HAWKINS,
MISS RUBY SHEARIN.

Reidsville.—Will Rogers, the noted writer and lecturer, says that all he knows is what he reads in the papers; but I can go him one better and say that I know some things that have not appeared in the papers. And some of the things that have not been printed are more informing as well as more interesting than many of the things that have been printed. I cite one instance.

On Tuesday evening of last week, to be exact, a dray backed up to the back door of the parsonage. It was loaded. That was the only reason it had for backing up to the back door of our parsonage. But it didn't stay loaded long. Its contents were skilfully transferred by J. D. McCollom, his sons and daughter, into the yawning mouth of an empty pantry while the pastor and his wife aided and abetted in the act. We had been pounded, severely pounded, by the members of our church with coffee, sugar, flour, potatoes, cakes—pound and fruit—canned goods of various sorts, and a big fat hen all dressed to enter the ministry. Grateful? Certainly, but if any one who reads these lines can think up a better word to use under such circumstances let us have it, we want to use it.

We have been warmly received for the second year. The work is progressing slowly, and we are hopeful of a good year. No church in the conference can boast of a more loyal membership than Reidsville. If some of our larger churches did as much in proportion to membership and financial ability as Reidsville does, they would soon flourish like the green bay tree, and be in position to take care of a half dozen mission churches. But I must not say too many good things about our church here, lest the other preachers in the conference turn a wstful eye this way, and I find myself without a pulpit.

To each one who had a part in this splendid pounding, Mrs. Brown and I express sincerest thanks.

GEORGE R. BROWN.

ANOTHER GREAT POUNDING

Thanksgiving night about fifty-six of our friends from Lebanon and Welch Memorial churches came upon us very unexpectedly, bringing almost everything for table use. This is one of the largest poundings we have received for years. It had been well planned and was truly a great surprise to us. Since we have no charge this year we were not expecting such tokens of love and appreciation. However, it teaches us that faithful work in the past is never forgotten. After they had made their deposits we tried to assure them how greatly we appreciated being remembered in this way. We then sang "Blest Be the Tie," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee." This was followed by a prayer in which we endeavored to commit them to the Lord. A number of the brethren and sisters spoke in a most encouraging way of our work among them in years past. To be sure it was an uplifting time.

May God bless everyone who took part. We felt that the old adage was true—"Better to have friends than money."

J. H. MOTON.

LADIES' AID SOCIETY OF KERNERSVILLE

On the afternoon of November 22, the Laides' Aid Society of Kernersville M. P. Church held their regular monthly meeting with Mrs. S. C. Albert.

This society consists of thirteen active members, eleven of whom answered to the roll call. Now some people are superstitious about the number thirteen and doubtless would say that we are unfortunate to have that number of members; but in this case we think thirteen just as lucky as any number, for this little band of women have proved themselves to be hustlers.

At a recent "Bazaar" conducted by this society we cleared $86.95.

This being the time for the election of officers for the new Conference year the following were elected: President, Mrs. Lucian Hepler; vice-president, Mrs. J. A. Linville, and secretary, Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk. We trust our president shall have the co-operation of every member as did Mrs. Walter Linville who was our efficient leader of last year.

At the close of our meeting delicious refreshments were served, and as we departed for our homes we felt that Mrs. Albert had proved herself a delightful hostess.

With best wishes to every reader of the Herald.

MRS. E. G. LOWDERMILK, Secretary.

VOLUME XXXIV GREENSBORO, N. C., DECEMBER 8, 1927 NUMBER 5

Did Paul Believe in the Virgin Birth of Jesus?

Two of the four gospels, Matthew and Luke, tell of the virgin birth of Jesus. But there are skeptics who insist that if the report were true we should expect all writers to tell about it, and especially should we expect John and Paul to tell about it. It has been argued that the silence of Paul regarding the matter is good evidence that the report was not true. This seems to be a very unfair position to take. Paul wrote to make men believe in Christ. It is true that his virgin birth was strong evidence of his divinity. But how could Paul prove that the virgin birth was a fact? Why offer as evidence that which he could not make valid? Paul laid all emphasis on the resurrection of Jesus as proof of His divinity because that was a fact he could prove by many witnesses. He would have been a poor logician had he written to the Ephesians, Corinthians, and others, urging them to accept Jesus because His mother was a virgin.

But while Paul did not explicitly teach the virgin birth of Jesus there is evidence in his writings that he had heard of the virgin birth and believed in it.

Repeatedly Paul gives evidence of his belief in the preexistence of Jesus. In Colossians 1:16 he says: "By him were all things created." "He is before all things and by him all things consist."

What in Paul's mind was the modus operandi of the incarnation? How was the Son of God made flesh? There are perhaps several conceivable ways. A new human being might have been created as Adam was to be the counterpart of the Son of God during his years among men. In that case he would not have been of the race of Adam, only like the race of Adam in the period of its purity. Or the Son of God might have formed an alliance as intimate as possible with some individual of the human race; for example, a son of Joseph and Mary. Into such a person there would have entered all the moral qualities that belong to the average human being. Or, in the third place, the Son of God might have chosen an alliance with man to be realized through birth from a human mother only. Which of all these ways did Paul think of as the real way of Jesus' incarnation? In Galatians 4:4 he writes: "When the fullness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman." Had Paul thought of the coming of Jesus in any other way than by a virgin birth, would he have used this expression? It does not seem probable.

As to John, he bears sufficient testimony to his belief in a supernatural origin of Jesus in his declaration, "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us." If he did not believe in the virgin birth he believed in some mode of entering the world fully as mysterious and supernatural as the virgin birth. But why stagger at the virgin birth of Jesus? What other view is there that so fully explains all the facts? Scientists value a hypothesis by its capacity to explain facts. The virgin birth explains as other hypotheses do not. We have no doubt that both John and Paul believed in it.

The World's Loud Laugh

It began long ago, perhaps in the days of Enoch. Enoch had peculiar notions and did some queer things. He talked as though he believed in Something greater than this world. He actually seemed to be walking and talking with Some One his neighbors could not see, and they laughed at him. The world's great laugh had started. It grew louder in the days of Enoch's great-grandson, Noah. He was a queer man, even queerer than his great-grandfather, Enoch. He had a foolish notion that a great flood was coming and that he must build a ship to save his family and part of his cattle. And this notion had the power of a fixed idea. It possessed him continually and moved him to action. He began to gather materials for his ship. How his neighbors laughed when they heard of his purpose. They talked about it and laughed great guffaws of laughter. They called him the "dry-land sailor." But he labored on and the longer he labored the louder they laughed.

And when Abraham came upon the scene the world broke out into laughter anew. Abraham was getting ready to move. "Where are you going, Abraham?" "I don't know," said he. "Did you hear that?" said they. "A man going to move and does not know where he is going." And they laughed loud and long.

And the world laughed again when the prophets came and tried to tell of great things in the future if only men would deny themselves in the present. "What an absurdity," said the world. "Why should we sacrifice certain good of the present for uncertain good in a remote future?" And the prophets were branded fools of the third order and men laughed them to scorn.

Then there came One greater than all the prophets and He tried to tell men of a great good, not promised in a remote future, but actually presented by the immediate present. All the glorious things foretold by the great prophets are now available, "the Kingdom of the Heavens is now actually at hand: rise up and enter in." Did men do it? A few did, but the many only laughed at him. When he spoke of wealth and its proper subordination, they derided him. When He hung upon the cross, giving to the world its supreme example of obedience to God in his voluntary submission to death, even the death of the cross, still they derided him, they laughed a laugh like the hissing of serpents.

Ah, the world's laughter is the laughter of fools. Men that can laugh at the most sacred things, men that can laugh in the face of God, men that can deride their own Savior when He hangs in the pains of awful death for them, what shall we say of such men? Surely their eyes have been blinded by the god of this world. Their laughter is a senseless and insane laughter.

LAW OF THE PAPAL QUESTION

The following article, "Law of the Papal Question," is so clear, strong, and pertinent, I call attention of all readers of the HERALD to it, with the hope that each will read, think, and that seriously, of the situation that confronts the American people. There is no ground for pooh-poohing this momentous issue. It will have to be met, sooner or later, and the sooner the light is turned on the better. The great majority of our people are in absolute ignorance of the situation, and the fearful danger that confronts us. Two governments, two empires, diametrically opposed to each other, cannot exist in the same territory at the same time. J. F. DOSIER.

By Judge Gilbert O. Nations, in The Protestant, Washington, D. C.

Conflict between civil and papal authority is inevitable. It is due to fundamental conditions of law. Bigotry and fanaticism may intensify its fury and aggravate its pernicious consequences but cannot produce the conflict. Bickerings and strife and bloodshed are but incidents and symptoms of the deep and continuous malady.

Patience, forbearance and concordats may palliate the crisis, but they fail to reach the basic disorder. It is due to the presence of rival sovereignties and incompatible bodies of law. For a thousand years has it perplexed and chastised the world. It is disturbing every great nation. Its universality demonstrates its inherence in political relationships now existing. Not till the cause is completely removed will the conflict end.

Three great legal systems occupy the western world. They reflect distinct ideals of government and irreconcilable views of sovereign authority. In trusion of any one of these systems into lands occupied by another can result only in disaster. No two of them can regulate the lives of the same people or coexist in peace.

The legal systems mentioned are the civil law of Rome, the canon law of the Papacy and the common law of England. Each is characterized by the political environment in which it grew, the sovereign authority by which it was shaped and the purposes it was designed to accomplish. Their differences are inherent and vital. The authority of each is final and exclusive. Obedience to any one is disobedience to the other two. From this condition there is no escape.

The ancient Greeks excelled in philosophy and literature and art; the Romans in law and government and military power. As triumphant legions swept Latium and Italy and the known world successively within the sway of the imperial city of Rome, the civil law became the instrument of justice from Scotland to Arabia and from the forests of Germany to the desert of Africa.

Pretors and provincial governors compiled and digested the judicial systems of all subjugated peoples and incorporated them into the Roman law. Greek scholars and philosophers were sold in the slave market of the eternal city. Aspiring young Romans finished their education in the schools of Athens and Alexandria. Hellenic thought permeated Roman society and rounded out its intellectual wealth and versatility.

The classic jurists were at once Roman lawyers and Stoic philosophers. They wrought the inexhaustible materials gathered by the pretors into the peerless fabric designated as the Law of Nature. It was the greatest legacy of Rome to the medieval and modern world. It still lives in continental Europe and Latin America.

Shortly after the birth of the Roman Empire, the Church of Christ was founded at Jerusalem. Three centuries of bitter persecution accelerated its growth. As it spread north, south, east and west, contact with the political world supplanted its pristine democracy with a nascent hierarchy which Constantine took into partnership with the Empire in the fourth century.

Endowments from public revenues and private bounty poured into the episcopal coffers in all great cities. The hierarchy became immensely rich. Canons and decrees of the church councils were given imperial sanction and incorporated into the civil law. When, after thirteen hundred years of growth, the law of the Empire was compiled under Justinian as the Corpus Juris Civilis in the sixth century, the law of the church was accorded ample space in that monumental compilation.

As the growing hierarchy fitted itself into the mold of the Empire, prelates in the chief cities vied with one another and with civil dignitaries in rank and power. Those in Alexandria, Antioch, Constantinople, Jerusalem and Rome assumed the title of patriarch. But the spread of Mohammedanism eliminated Alexandria, Antioch and Jerusalem, leaving Rome and Constantinople to compete for ecclesiastical dominion of the world.

The Roman genius for law and government gave tactical advantage to the ancient capital. Under the crushing blows of Teutonic invasions the Empire in the West crumbled to ruins. The Cæsars disappeared from Rome in the fifth century. The title of Supreme Pontiff worn by Augustus and all his successors was transferred to the head of the church. He assumed exclusive right to the name of Pope which had previously been applied to all prelates, especially in the East.

So did the Roman bishop become the successor, not of Peter, but of the Emperors. No western city rivaled the ancient capital in wealth and prestige and power. Lesser prelates were content to rule their sees under authority of the new Sovereign Pontiff as proconsuls and proprietors had ruled under the Emperors bearing that exalted title. It was not the Apostles but civil dignitaries of the Empire whom they succeeded.

In the eleventh century the Greek and Latin churches parted asunder. Thenceforward there was no one to dispute the supremacy of the Roman Pontiff in the West. The dawn of the twelfth century saw the rise of a great law school at Bologna in northern Italy. Beside the eminent jurists who lectured there on the Corpus Juris Civilis, there appeared noted canonists who expounded the law of the Church.

To facilitate his work, a monk named Gratian compiled the voluminous but scattered and discordant materials of the canon law of the Papacy into one connected whole commonly known as his Decretum. In the following century Pope Gregory IX added a volume known as Liber Extra and Boniface VIII supplied another known as Liber Sextus to this historic work. In the fourteenth century it was further enlarged by the Liber Septimus of Clement V.

In its completed form it took the name of Corpus Juris Canonici—Body of the Canon Law. It is the counterpart of the Corpus Juris Civilis—Body of the Civil Law—of Justinian. Further amplified by later church councils, especially that of Trent, and by legislative enactments of the Popes, it remained for centuries the authorized statement of the comprehensive legal system of the papal autocracy.

Graduates in civil law at Bologna returned to every part of the continent to practice their profession, to compose the judiciary and to become legal advisers of Emperors and Kings; while graduates in canon law held like positions under Popes and prelates. Both groups took an impotrant part in the struggles for supremacy between civil and ecclesiastical potentates. The law faculties of later universities were made up largely of Bologna alumni.

The last compilation of the canon law was made in Rome under orders of Pope Pius X. Under direction of the papal secretary of state the work occupied more than a decade. It was promulgated ten years ago by Benedict XV under the title of Codex Juris Canonical—Code of Canon Law.

But under the crude medieval facilities for navigation, the British Isles were sufficiently detached from the continent to prevent the development of the civil law of Rome there. While the primitive law of the Teutonic invaders on the continent gave way to the superior law of the fallen Empire, the Nordic law excluded the Roman law from British and partially vanquished the canon law after centuries of fierce and disastrous combat.

The English sense of justice is scarcely surpassed in the history of the world. The pursuit of culture, the growth of commerce, the march of civil and religious liberty and the conservation of human rights have left on the common law an impress which can never be effaced.

Transplanted to the United States and to other English-speaking lands, it is the priceless heritage of the most virile and progressive peoples of the earth. Latin America and the State of Louisiana are under the civil law of the continental lands whence they were colonized.

While fundamental differences characterize the civil and common law systems, still more pronounced incompatibilities differentiate both from the canonical system of the Papacy. Both secular systems recognize the state as the source of all land titles. But the papal authorities deny that principle in toto. They declare title to church properties entirely independent of civil authority. For that reason they deny the right of the state to tax or expropriate the wealth of the church or to impose on it any burdens or liabilities whatever.

Application of positive law to moral and religious issues is perhaps the most vital departure of canon law from all other systems of justice. All other jurists limit the law with its sanctions to the regulation of outward conduct and overt expressions by word or deed. But the papal law visits the direct physical penalties for unexpressed thoughts and aspirations. Under that principle it has burned exalted Christian saints at the stake.

Other juridical systems accord to the state supreme power to regulate conduct, to administer justice, to dispose of the public domain, to educate the people, to share public life and policies and to promote the general welfare. The canonical system denies those prerogatives or subordinates them to the paramount assumptions of the Papacy.

Notwithstanding the basic inconsistencies of the canon law with both the other systems, it is everywhere foisted on communities subject to the one or the other. Prevalence of the common law in England and the United States excludes the civil law. But in both countries enthroned prelates of Rome are administering the canon law despite its utter incompatibility with the law of the land.

While the civil law excludes the common law from continental lands and from Latin America, it is not permitted to exclude the canon law. The enthroned hierarchy in all those countries is enforcing the irreconcilable law of the Sovereign Pontiff. The Papacy recognizes no national boundaries. Its sovereign authority is imposed indiscriminately everywhere to the full extent that conditions render possible.

The Pontifical tribunals exercise jurisdiction of the very matters which are subject to civil jurisdiction. Education, property rights, taxation, marriage and divorce and subjection to state law and authority are definitely treated in canon law and adjudicated in ecclesiastical courts in flat derogation of state constitutions and statutes.

This fatal condition has nothing to do with religion or religious prejudice. It is rooted in positive law. It faces the American people. It is omnipresent. It is the root and kernel of this papal question. It is susceptible of but one adequate remedy. The intruded papal sovereignty must be expelled. The canon law administered in derogation of our own must be suppressed. All persons and property within the territory of this Republic must be held completely subject to its jurisdiction. No other course is compatible with patriotic duty and incontestable national rights.

THE CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

Evidently the Executive Secretary of the Board of Young People's Work, Rev. Lawrence Little, has put forth considerable effort to prepare satisfactory material for a Christmas program. The service, "God's Matchless Gift," is specially appropriate, emphasizing the central idea of the day as well as the work the Methodist Protestant Church is trying to do through its constituted Boards of Missions, Education and Benevolence. In addition, there is a pantomime entitled "At the Door of the Inn," which should prove deeply interesting and impressive, as well as supplementary material in case the committee should not be able to use the pageant.

Why?

It is sometimes asked why the Budget Council should go to the expense of preparing material for a Christmas service. The reason is, that so many of our people desire it. Several hundred orders are receievd each year and the expressions of approval and satisfaction are frequent. Furthermore, in some localities Christmas is the best time of the year to make an appeal to our people in behalf of the work the various Boards are trying to do. It is therefore an opportunity for promoting the denominational program projected by the General Conference.

The Offering

Every church using the Christmas service is expected to receive an offering for the General Conference Budget. These offerings have been increasing each year and they should continue to increase if the work the denomination is attempting is to prosper. In fact, the Christmas offerings have been an important source of income for the Boards and without them they would have been handicapped in their work.

Not Too Late

By the time this article appears in our church papers it may seem somewhat late to attempt the preparation of a satisfactory program. However, the material is of a character to be readily mastered. Send in your order to Rev. Lawrence Little, Concord, North Carolina, at once and you will receive the supplies promptly.

Once More

If your church did not receive a special offering for this purpose last year, will you not see that it is done this year? And if an offering was taken, why not determine that it shall be increased at least ten per cent?

FRANK W. STEPHENSON,
Exec. Sec'y, Board of Education.

The Hundred Years' War

"There never was a time in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church when there was such manifest restlessness and dissatisfaction with the denominational polity and administration as there is at present. This feeling of discontent it found among laity and clergy alike. There is a general conviction that something ought to be done. Of course such agitation always arises previous to a General Conference session. Much is said and plans are made, but when the session has ended, one seeks in vain for any evidence of progressive legislation or forward outlook.

"Will the 1928 General Conference adjourn and join the spirits of departed Conferences with the same tale that much has been said and very little accomplished?" — D. Harold Hickey in Zion's Herald of November 30, 1927.

—It is not he that reads most, but he that meditates most on divine truth that will make the wisest, choicest, strongest Christian.—Bishop Hall.

FROM THE FIELD

Winston

Tuesday, November 29, we were with the Winston church in their first quarterly conference. The conference was well attended, and a spirit of harmony prevailed. On Wednesday night, December 7, the congregation will meet to decide on a pastor for this year. The outlook seems encouraging for the work there, and we are hoping and praying that the Spirit of God may guide this old church into years of large and increasing service.

Lebanon

Wednesday night, November 30, it was our privilege to be with Brother Hutton and his good people at Lebanon. Here we had a delightful felowship and a progressive quarterly conference. This church is well located, and is destined to have an increasing growth with the years. The quarterly conference secretary of this church, Miss Guyer, is one of the most efficient that it has been our privilege to know. The church is very fortunate to have her services. The quarterly conference secretary of this church, Miss Guyer, is one of the most efficient that it has been our privilege to know. The church is very fortunate to have her services. The quarterly conference report shows an active C. E. Society that is really doing things worth-while. The church cannot but receive a stimulus from this organization. The spiritual, financial, and organizational interests of the church will be fostered and encouraged towards larger ends. Pastor Hutton has the work on his heart, and he will, no doubt, have the full co-operation of his people, as he leads them through a year of Kingdom progress. Pastor's salary was raised to $1,800 at the fourth quarterly conference. The fourth Sunday Sunday school offerings are being applied to A. C. B., and we believe they will raise the college assessment during December. Our faith is that Lebanon's record of growth will be maintained and enlarged during this year.

Orange

Saturday, December 3, was spent pleasantly with Rev. B. M. Williams and the people of Orange charge. The meeting was in the Efland church. A full program for the day had been arranged by Pastor Wiliams, and was carried out largely as arranged, though the rain interfered seriously with attendance. It was my privilege to preach at 11 a.m. After an hour's intermission the Woman's Home Missionary Society had an interesting program, and this was followed, at 2 p.m., by the meeting of the first quarterly conference. All the churches except Hebron were represented, and the business of the conference was transacted with promptness and enthusiasm. The pastor's report dealt intelligently and progressively with the year's work ahead, and was heartily adopted by the conference. They plan to pay, during the month of December, college assessment and A.C.B., thus leaving the remainder of the year for raising pastor's salary and G. C. B. Brother Davies, of Union Grove church, is the financial secretary of the charge, and he and the pastor have worked out a financial program that they hope will result in the payment of all claims this year. One hundred dollars of special obligations was all practically provided for by the conference. Improvements on the Efland church are in contemplation, which will mean much to the cause there, if carried out. Pastor Williams has the confidence and the co-operation of his people, and has a big program planned for the year. We are expecting great growth along all lines for Orange. Dinner was served by the ladies of Efland church and was greatly enjoyed.

West Forsyth

We were to have spent Sunday, Monday and Tuesday with Brother C. H. Whitaker and the churches of West Forsyth, but the weather decreed otherwise. We will, however, be with him today, Tuesday, at Tabernacle church, and hold his first quarterly conference. Sunday morning, we attended Grace church, and were edified, both in the Sunday school and by the morning preaching service.

December

This is "college assessment" month. The apportionment did not appear in the HERALD last week for lack of space, but will appear, no doubt, this week. If pastors and people will give prompt and vigorous attention to this, we shall be grateful, and the college will be happy. Let us hope that there may be a rush of charges to head the list.

Christmas

The happiest and the holiest of all the festive seasons is approaching; how are we going to observe it? The first Christmas was a time of worship, of praise, of adoration. Heaven and earth united in rendering honor and glory to the Christ child. Should it not be so still? Then why all of our noise, and reveling, and debauchery? The papers will soon be talking about Christmas liquors, as though our Christ were a heathen Bacchus. Strange, passing strange, this way of celebrating the birthday of our Saviour! Let us quit it, and make the day one of gladness and worship, that the Christ who gave us Christmas may be honored.

Church Extension Pledges

Please pay these pledges—all or in part—at the earliest possible date. The Board of Church Extension does not have funds with which to pay salaries of last year. Please, brethren, help us in this emergency. Remit to Rev. J. C. Auman, Enfield, N. C. He is the treasurer of this fund.

Evangelism

The Key Word of our Conference program for 1928 should be evangelism. The church has no greater need, and nothing that we can do is more certain to secure for us divine favor. Currents counter to all that we have been taught as vital, are beating hard at the foundations of our faith, and nothing but spiritual power in the church of Jesus Christ can stem these currents. "It is not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." The world is in distressing need of a new consciousness of God, and how can God supply this need if he does not do it through His Church? We are calling on the ministry and the laity for personal consecration and united prayer that God may visit his church in a mighty demonstration of His power, and that the time may speedily come when thousands shall find their way to the loving heart of God because of the high tides of evangelism in the church.

FOREIGN MISSIONS—JAPAN

Evangelism

The field of evangelism in the men's work is divided into two districts—Nagoya and Yokohama. Rev. E. I. Obee is Superintendent of the Yokohama District and Dr. Leigh Layman is Superintendent of the Nagoya District.

The Yokohama District has two charges. There has been steady growth in both charges, each having a number of inquirers. In the Oyama Mission there is a splendid Sunday school as well as helpful and interesting church services. The Tsurmi Mission is served by two theological students, both of whom are earnest and aggressive. Special evangelistic meetings are planned with good prospects for fruitful results. During the quarter 585 tracts were distributed and 60 visits made.

In the Nagoya District there are seven mission stations and eighteen preaching places. In all of them Sunday school and preaching services are held regularly. A part of the work is very difficult and of slow progress. And yet, Dr. Layman writes: "This has been a good quarter on most of the district. The hope that we would have the best year yet is meeting our expectation."

A new house has recently been built at the Tokonamo Mission which has given new life to both pastor and people. This furnishes a place of worship that everybody is proud of and practically every meeting sees the benches filled, and often the side-rooms have to be used.

There are 71 inquirers and 545 enrolled in the Sunday schools; 1,470 tracts were distributed and 621 calls made in 317 different homes.

Miss Mary E. Williams has charge of the women's evangelistic work in Nagoya. Sunday school sessions, numerous meetings for young people, women's meetings, factory meeting and Bible classes constitute the work done by Miss Williams. During the quarter there were 72 visits made. Inquirers 7, and baptisms 1.

China

Little can be reported relative to our work in China because so little can be done, owing to war conditions, especially since so much of the fighting has been going on in the Kalgan District. However, the school work, except the Middle School for boys, has been going on. According to the last word received, both Mr. Williams and Mrs. Larson are in Kalgan.

In a letter dated October 6, Mr. Williams writes, "I returned to Kalgan (from Tientsin) Thursday. Everything has seemed to be going well. Saturday afternoon I rode my bicycle to Hsuanhuafu to spend Sunday. Rev. Yao left for the same place by train on Saturday morning. On Sunday he baptized four men, two of whom were soldiers." Soldiers are thick in this section and skirmishes may be expected at any time.

In a letter written to Mrs. W. M. Sturgeon by Mrs. Larson, about the same time, she says, "You will be thankful to know that no harm has come to the compound. God has been all around and about us. We all realize it more than ever.

"You have read about it in the papers, how Shansi troops came in, drove out the Feng T'ien soldiers, then were driven back themselves. Now there are thousands of Feng T'ien troops here and they are naturally angry, as all of their provisions were looted as soon as they left the city. So now they are occupying homes and shops throughout the city, and people are anxious."

On my return from visiting a number of the southern conferences it was my joy and privilege to stop over in Louisville, Kentucky, and spend a few hours with Rev. and Mrs. C. G. Soderbom. I found them both enjoying thoroughly their furlough in America. This is Rev. Mr. Soderbom's first trip to America and he thinks it is a wonderful country. The time we had together seemed far too short to talk over all the things we had in common on our hearts. They will remain with Dr. and Mrs. Coons until Saturday, November 26. After that they will visit Mrs. Soderbom's brother, Mr. N. W. Lawson, 36 Hartweg Avenue, Fort Thomas, Kentucky, where they will remain until the first of next year. Then they are planning to visit Mrs. Soderbom's old home in Newark, N. J.

Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom are ready and willing for deputation work. While they are so near Cincinnati it will be a fine opportunity for our churches in that section to have them. Then they will be glad to stop over with any of our churches on their trip to the East and spend as much time as needed. They will be in Columbus shortly after the holidays. Any church or churches desiring a visit from them may write me and I shall be glad to plan the visit. The only expense will be their traveling expenses and entertainment. They both travel on clergy rates. A number of our churches ought to have them. Let me hear from YOU.

They gave me two very interesting letters from China. The one from Mr. T. H. Chao, one of our Chinese teachers, who is taking a year's study in the Shantung Christian College; the other from the Tung Shih Pu, the native committee looking after our work in Kalgan in the absence of our missionaries. Both letters will be published in each of our church papers and the Missionary Record.

HOME MISSIONS

I have not recently been publishing any Home Mission articles in the church papers. My time has been almost entirely occupied in visiting the Annual Conferences. Full reports have been made by others of these conference assemblies and I have not felt it wise to have a repetition of these events.

It has been my privilege since August 10 to visit 15 of our conferences. This has required thousands of miles of travel. I have been blessed with perfect health and have greatly enjoyed the fellowship of the ministers and deelgates. This is a great opportunity in one's ilfe. Not only has the association been most delightful but friendships have been formed that will continue through life.

I wish to state that while some features of the work of the churches may be perplexing, even discouraging, altogether there is a hopefulness in the future outlook for the denomination most heartening. The loyalty of the people to the denomination is unquestioned, while the desire to improve conditions in the Annual Conferences, and respond to the appeals of the General Church for co-operation in the various departments of our denominational activities are everywhere in evidence. Note, if you will, the determination and earnestness of the churches in the campaigns for our Educational Institutions, and the great enthusiasm manifested in nearly all the conferences relative to the Summer Conferences in the development of the young life of our churches. When the work of the church is viewed from these and other angles that might be mentioned it is not difficult to be an optimist as to the future of the denomination.

As a rule, the Annual Conferences are coming to realize the necessity of concentrating their efforts in establishing new congregations and the erection of new churches in the larger towns and cities. The recommendation of the General Conference of 1924 was that a new Methodist Protestant Church be organized and properly housed in an important town or city in every Annual conference during the quadrennium. While this recommendation has not been carried out in every instance, some progress has been made.

It is a goal well worth keeping before our Annual Conferences. I feel certain that it will receive greater consideration during the next quadrennium, and a more earnest effort will be made to succeed. It is one of those great church movements which requires time to get before the people and to line up the Church Extension Boards for effective service.

It is one of the principal means by which the borders of the denomination are extended and the numerical and financial interests are increased. Within the bounds of our Annual Conferences there are towns and cities where there are opportunities for starting churches, and into many of these a number of Methodist Protestants have moved, which would form a nucleus and give the movement a start. I could easily name a number of such towns and cities.

On my last Western trip I spent a day in Newton, Iowa, with Rev. C. R. Green, the President of the Iowa-Missouri Conference, who is located in Newton and who, in connection with his duties as President, is endeavoring to establish a church there. Newton is a city of nearly 15,000 population. It has large manufacturing interests. These great plants call for skilled labor. It is said the population has doubled in the last six or seven years. There are no foreigners or negroes. The people are almost entirely Protestant Americans.

Brother Green, and the Conference Church Extension Board, have purchased a tract of land. They propose to retain sufficient ground for a church and parsonage and sell the balance. When I was there in October the plan was to erect a tabernacle before Christmas and begin services. Brother Green thinks there were as many as two hundred Methodist Protestants living there who have moved from the outlying charges. As I studied the field it reminded me of Milford, Delaware, in the Maryland Conference, where some years ago such a great work was accomplished, and out of which a strong and progressive church has grown. Brother Green is an expert in rural church work. He has been eminently successful in the past. We are hoping for equal success in his efforts in the city.

EDUCATIONAL INTERESTS

Some time spent in the field with President G. O. McMillan resulted in additional subscribers to the "Westminster College 500 Club" and finding more friends of the school. The response, of course, is not unanimous, but the interest is greater and the anxiety to see the college succeed is widespread.

Under the leadership of Mrs. G. O. McMillan, the wives of the ministerial students have been organied into a special society for fellowship and study. They meet once a week and discuss literary subjects as well as problems incidental to the life of the minister and the minister's wife.

Westminster College is greatly indebted to the Ladies' Aid Society of the local Methodist Protestant church, of which Rev. W. H. Hunter is the pastor. Last year they placed twenty art-glass windows in the college chapel at a cost of nearly $1,500 and recently they purchased chairs for the class rooms and library at a cost of nearly $300.

Aside from the financial needs Westminster College is greatly in need of books for the library and equipment for the laboratories. Friends of the school could render a real service by donating good books or by making special contributions for the benefit of the laboratories. These matters require immediate attention. Dean J. G. Willis will gladly inform inquirers of the books and equipment specially needed.

Many of the children of the Methodist Protestant families would gladly go to college if they only had the means. They are as fine young folks as can be found anywhere, with character, ability and ambition. Loans from friends or the Board of Education are all some need to enable them to attend college, but in many cases scholarships are necessary also. Gifts of five hundred to three thousand dollars create scholarships producing an income which means not only support for our schools but students from Methodist Protestant homes as well.

The Board of Education this year received the largest number of orders for Rally Day programs of any other special day in its history. This response to the work the Board is trying to do is deeply appreciated. It should mean added income and that in turn means added usefulness. Our schools are doing the finest work in their history and ministering to the greatest number of students. They are economically managed but are constantly handicapped because their expenses increase with their growth. It is also important to increase the funds used to assist our ministerial students. This will be done as fast as our income warrants.

Sunday and Monday, November 21 and 22, were spent in Kansas City looking after our interests there. Our three churches are under the pastoral leadership of Prof. C. W. Obee, Rev. W. M. Snyder and Rev. Charles H. Reed. These brethren are enthusiastically devoted to their work and for the most part have encouraging things to report. Each feels he has one of the most promising fields in the denomination and is planning and working for larger things. On Monday afternoon with Prof. R. O. Youmans, Mr. A. L. Cook and Revs. Snyder and Reed we visited a section of the city on the Missouri side where an unusual opportunity to locate a church has been offered. Steps are being taken to enter this field at once.

This year the Rally Day orders reached the splendid total of 513, the largest number ever received by the Board of Education for a special day program. We recently learned that many of our churches use the samples sent out and do not order additional copies. And some pastors find it expedient to arrange a program of their own. It is our impression that more of our people observed Rally Day this year than ever before. The only indication we have as to what the offerings may amount to is the monthly report from Mr. Staley. On November 1 he had received $845.77, so this year's figures promise well.

Some of the Rally Day material is still on hand and should be used. We will be glad to furnish small amounts to anyone who might be able to make good use of it.

Frank W. Stephenson, Exec. Sec'y, Board of Education.

THE CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

I have just received sample copies of the Christmas Service prepared by Rev. Lawrence Little, Secretary of the Young People's Board. This service is issued under the auspices of the Budget Council of the General Conference, and is intended to furnish a suitable service for all our churches and Sunday schools during the Christmas celebration.

It is a most attractive service, so arranged as to meet the needs of all classes of schools and churches. The offering is for the General Conference interests and counts on the General Conference Budget. It is to be hoped that it will be generally used and that the offerings taken in all the churches will be a large increase over previous years.

OUR STORY PAGE

SAVED THE BABY'S LIFE

A True Story

After riding twenty-five miles across a bare expanse of prairie in western Kansas, we, my brother and I, came to a little village and upon inquiry as to where we would find the Methodist preacher, a little house was pointed out to us and we drove up to the door. This house was half dugout and half sod built up above the level of the ground, covered with a roof of rough lumber and over that two layers of sod. The dimensions were about 14x16 feet and only one room.

Here we found our friends of other days when they had lived in the home town in the east. Now he was frontier missionary whose circuit covered half a county, and there with his faithful wife and five small children they lived in these desolate surroundings that they might carry the gospel to the people of the plains.

There was no mistaking the joy on their faces and in their voices when they saw who we were and that the long-promised visit was at last realized.

After the simple evening meal the father took the baby, a very frail and delicate little girl of less than a year, in his arms, and calling the rest of the children, said to my brother, "We will take a walk. We always take the baby out for a while after the heat of the day is over."

After they had gone I said to the mother, "It seems too bad that little Maud should be so frail when the other children are so healthy."

"Oh," she said, "she is so much better now than she was through the winter that we feel very much encouraged. But she never has been strong, and we have felt many times that she might leave us almost any time."

We talked of their work and I asked her if she ever felt that the sacrifice was too much for them to stay out here with their children. She told me how good the people were to them, and how much they appreciated their efforts in their behalf. "Of course they are poor," she said, "and we don't have much to live on; but we have had some lessons of trust in our heavenly Father that have been worth everything to us. I can never tell you what the Woman's Home Missionary Society has been to us since we came here. I believe they saved our baby's life last winter." I asked her to tell me about it, and she gave me this story that has stayed in my heart ever since and has caused me to thank God over and over for the splendid women who pack the missionary barrels for the frontier preachers and their families.

"We had trouble," she said, "from the very first to find anything to feed our baby that would agree with her. We had tried everything the physician had suggested and she grew steadily weaker and thinner, until at last we found a particular brand of condensed milk which, when prepared in a certain way, she would retain and seemed to thrive upon. What a relief it was to have her rest at night, and to see that week by week she was gaining.

"One day when he started to the store, I asked her papa to bring me another can of the milk, for the one I was using was nearly empty. When he came back he said they were out of condensed milk at the store, but that he had found a freighter who was going up to the railroad for a load of lumber, and that he had sent for it by him, that he would be back the next day, and I must not worry. I used sparingly of the milk I had, and the next evening waited anxiously for the return of the freighter. When he did come it was only to report that the supply in that small town was exhausted, but said he was going the next day to a larger town on the railroad and thought surely he could get it there.

"Two more days and I had just used the last I had for my baby. All I could do was to wait and trust God. I tried to feed her other things, but she refused them all. Finally, before the two days were passed she would take the food offered only to throw it up and cry constantly.

"When my husband came home after the second time and told me he could not secure the milk, I burst into tears, and could not be comforted. He tried to cheer me up and said the man had found a barrel of freight there for us and had brought it down, and would soon bring it over to the house. We supposed it was home missionary supplies, for we had received a letter saying it had been sent.

"When it came I could take no interest in it whatever, for my baby was hungry—starving! What cared I for clothing when my precious one was slowly dying! But the other children were eager and my husband rolled the large barrel down the steps and got the hammer.

"When he removed the lid and lifted the paper from the top of the barrel the first thing the eager eyes of husband and children saw was 12 cans of the particular brand of condensed milk we had tried so hard to get.

"I snatched a can from the blessed barrel and with tears of gratitude rolling down our faces we told the children to wait until we fixed the milk for the little sister, and then we would see what else was in the barrel .

"It seemed to me that night as I held my quiet, sleeping child in my arms that I longed to kiss the hands of those precious women who had saved my baby's life."

We could hear the laughter of the children returning from their walk, and after a happy evening together we were ready to retire. "What! Nine people in one room 14x16 feet?" you ask. That did not worry me, for I knew my friend would find a way. Across one end of the room were two beds. The chairs and tables were moved outdoors and beds were made on the floor for the children. A curtain was drawn between the two beds. After my friend, her baby and I had retired in one bed the men came and occupied the other, and with windows and door wide open, we were soon sound asleep.—Mrs. W. V. Burns, in Western Christian Advocate.

I WOULD, DEAR JESUS

I would, dear Jesus, I could break
The hedge that creeds and heresy make,
And, like the first disciples, be
In person led and taught by Thee.

I read thy words, so strong and sweet;
I seek the footprints of thy feet;
But men so mystify the trace,
I long to see thee, face to face,

Wouldst thou not let me at thy side,
In thee, in thee so sure confide?
Like John, upon thy breast recline,
And feel thy heart make mine divine?

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

High Point.—In spite of the storm and inclement weather last Sunday, there was a good congregation present to hear Dr. S. K. Spahr at the morning service. He delivered a beautiful sermon from the text as found in Galations 6:1, "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." He referred to the fact that in his recent address to Annual Conference in Asheboro, President T. H. Lewis deplored the fact that every year several hundred members are reported "lost" to the denomination, having moved away or wandered away from the church after having been overtaken in a fault. Dr. Spahr thinks that there ought to be a committee in every church whose duty it is to band themselves together to restore the fallen and win them back to fellowship in the church. Many men who now stand high among their fellows in the church and missionary world, have been overtaken in faults, even seven times. Once a crowd, in which John Wesley was standing, was jeering a poor drunken man, when Wesley exclaimed, "But by the grace of God, there goes John Wesley!" In his long ministry Dr. Spahr remembers only one man who deliberately turned his back on God and His church. He wanted to be rich, and did not wish to be hampered in his methods by what good people would think of them. His end was most deplorable, and he died hopeless and friendless.

"Then gently scan thy brother man;
Still gentler, sister woman:
Though baith may gang a kennie wrang,
To step aside is human."

Very appropriate to the sermon was Mr. Schultheiss' solo, "The Penitent," rendered in his usual delightful manner, his voice being of remarkable sweetness and power. The choir rendered the lovely anthem by Shelly, "Angel Voices Ever Singing."

At the evening service the message was delivered by Rev. Paul S. Kennett, the popular professor of history in the college. Mrs. J. C. Whitesell and Mrs. J. H. Allred sang "Come, Holy Spirit," by Jerome, very beautifully.

At the prayer service last Wednesday evening, after special prayers for the sick members of our congregation, Capt. A. M. Rankin, Mrs. T. T. Ferree, Mrs. W. P. Pickett, Mrs. J. A. Tussey, and others, Rev. E. L. Ballard gave a beautiful talk on "Love," which was unusually fitting for the approaching season of Christmas with its blessed and hallowed memories. Jesus showed His great love for the human race by creating the world and all its beauties before He placed us here; then He showed infinite love and compassion by sending His Beloved Son, Jesus, to earth to suffer and die for us, "as a propitiation for our sins, and not ours only, but the sins of the whole world." Then he spoke of the sin of indifference or ingratitude for all His loving kindness and tender mercy, but His great and tender heart yearns always for us and our love.

The general monthly meeting of the Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary Societies was held at the church Monday afternoon with 29 members present. An excellent program, which was prepared by Circle No. 2, was given; responsive readings from the Scripture, which had been typed, were distributed by Mrs. C. L. Whitaker. Mrs. John C. Whitesell sang very beautifully, "My Task," with piano accompaniment by Mrs. R. M. Andrews.

We were much pleased to have Miss Lela Wagner, a student in the college, with us, and she gave an interesting talk on India, and told a pathetic story of a girl, who wanted so much to go to the missionary school, but was told there was no room for her and the question was asked, "Did you or I take a small job?" Miss Wagner is a volunteer for life service. Fifteen cakes for the chicken supper at the Children's Home next Thursday evening were promised by members present. Mrs. R. M. Andrews asked for volunteer hostesses for her Junior Mission Circle, and 12 responded. Also, the sum of $3.40 was contributed for materials for the meetings. Mrs. J. C. Whitesell is kindly assisting Mrs. Andrews in this work, and they report 23 children present at last meeting. A summary of work done by the Home Missionary Society as given by Mrs. Pickens shows that we have contributed $57 to the student loan fund in High Point College, $116 to Pine Ridge, Ky., school, $137 to Children's Home, including our late Thankoffering, $10.30, to Bethel Home, and $1.00 to Pittsburgh Mission since beginning our missionary year on April 1.

Circle No. 2, Mrs. J. H. Walker, chairman of Foreign Society, held a sale of fancy articles for Christmas presents last week and realized about $30.00 from it.

The Sabbath School Workers' Council is planning a supper and get-together meeting for Tuesday evening. Mrs. H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, will be present and being a pleasing speaker with much experience in work among young people, doubtless her address will be most helpful.

It is hoped that the bazaar and chicken supper at the Children's Home next Thursday, December 8th, will be well patronized. Fancy articles made by the girls will be on sale, part of the proceeds of which will be given to them for Christmas money, and a delicious chicken supper will be served at 50 cents per plate from 6 to 9 o'clock.

We regret exceedingly to announce that Capt. A. M. Rankin has suffered a relapse and has been taken to Dr. Crowell's Clinic in Charlotte, where he will undergo an operation Tuesday. Mrs. Rankin is with him, and Mrs. E. L. Auman and his daughter, Mrs. Lewis E. Teague, will leave early Tuesday morning for Charlotte. The prayers of the entire congregation arise for this splendid, well-loved friend and layman.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—On account of bad weather, there were no services at Corinth Sunday. There will be services second Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. We hope to have a large crowd present to hear our new pastor.

Rev. Mr. Crutchfield spent Saturday night and Sunday at the home of M. J. Morris.

We will certainly miss Mr. O'Briant; he was our pastor for the past six years, and served us faithfully. We will be glad to have him visit us anytime in our homes or at our services. We pray that he and family will have a very successful year.

The first quarterly conference will convene at Littleton church Tuesday, December 13, instead of Friday, December 16, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Rev. S. W. Taylor, president, will preside. All official members are urged to be present.

On the night of November 4th a box party was given at Mr. M. J. Morris's home. The proceeds amounted to $30.00, which went to pay on a piano. We are glad to say we have finished paying for our piano and bought a new heater for the church.

Mr. Barney Morris, of Davis Wagner College, Norfolk, Va., spent the Thanksgiving holidays at his home.

Let's stand by our new pastor this year and pray for a good year's work.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Charge.—Second Sunday in November we began our new Conference year. We were delighted to have our pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman returned. He preached a splendid sermon which was greatly enjoyed by all.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely with Brother Taylor Garrett as superintendent. Our secretary-treasurer's report shows a considerable increase in membership and collection over last year. We are planning to have a Christmas tree and program.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies will hold their next meeting with Mrs. C. W. Finch Tuesday, December 13. Our societies are doing good work, although small in number we hope to be able to do great things for the Master.

We wish for the Herald and its readers a very merry Christmas. REPORTER.

North Davidson Charge.—Since Conference the work is starting off nicely. We have been to all the churches once and some twice; everybody seems to have a mind to work, and make this a better year than last.

We are planning to hold some kind of Christmas service at all the churches. We hope to have a good service.

Next Saturday we are going to hold our first quarterly conference at Bethesda. Hope to have a good representation from all the churches.

Our new brick church south of Lexington on No. 10 highway is getting along fine; the brickwork is nearly completed; we hope to get the roof on before long.

Before and since Conference the people have remembered the pastor; Brother Ed Waitman and Brother R. B. Sink gave us a nice hat, and the Brotherhood class at Shiloh gave us a nice pair of shoes, and Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Berrier gave us a big sack of flour, Brothers C. A. and C. F. Green at Mount Pleasant gave us eight bushels of sweet potatoes, Brother Fred Berrier a big sack of potatoes, Miss Emma Berrier one row of sweet potatoes out of her patch. Brother Tom Berrier, who is now in Florida, sent us a check for $20 as a Thanksgiving present. Mr. and Mrs. Reed, from Mount Pleasant, gave us a chicken and sack of potatoes, and on Thanksgiving Day Bethesda gave us a real surprise, for while we were working around the house the cars began to blow and when I came to myself the yard was full of cars, about 18 or 20. We talked and had a real good time for a while, and when they got ready to go home they unloaded their cars, and literally filled the back porch full; it was piled up until it looked like a real grocery store, because they left all kinds of good things to eat.

We certainly thank these good people for these nice things. It makes a preacher and family happy when we can serve a people like this. We hope to give them our very best service, and may our Heavenly Father richly bless them all.

Yours in the Masters' name,
R. S. TROXLER, Pastor.

Roberta.—There were not any services Sunday on account of the bad weather.

The work has begun on the Sunday school room and elevating the choir. They have just started on two, but we hope before they quit working there will be ten completed.

This is an epidemic of measles going through our little village, and it cuts our attendance short at our church services.

The Ladies' Aid is planning on re-carpeting the church when the new work is completed.

A merry Christmas to all the writers and readers. REPORTER.

Lincolnton.—In spite of the sleet, ice and mud many battled their way to church Sunday.

The fourth Sunday in November there were 168 in Sunday school; the school is growing in interest and numbers.

Rev. D. B. Johnson, who from time to time for many years has served as superintendent, is doing his best to make the school the best in the history of the church.

There is very much enthusiasm among the children as to what class will get the banner and the dollar that the superintendent has promised to the class that makes the biggest contribution.

Children, pastor and people are looking forward to the rendering of a fine Christmas program.

The audiences at preaching service are increasing and in spite of bad weather we had a good audience and one profession, Loy Rhineheart, who will join the church with us Sunday. Mr. Rhinehart is a bright young man of twenty.

Ministers, preachers and laymen, if we would be obedient to the "heavenly vision," souls would be saved and added to the church weekly. Who is to blame for letting the devil in the saddle? The church!

Members of the church, pay God's price and your church will become a soul-saving station.

Best regards to the Herald and its readers.
W. L. CARSON.

Saxapahaw Circuit.—The members of Saxapahaw charge are saddened by the removal of our beloved pastor, Rev. H. L. Isley. We will miss him at church and in our homes. He was a comfort in sickness and bereavement and in the gayer hours he had a voice of gladness and a smile. His vision of goodness, his keen insight into human nature, his ideals of a richer, fuller Christian life won for him the confidence and love of the entire circuit. We will continue to pray for him and that he may be successful in all his efforts and sometime be our pastor again.

We are fortunate to get such a good man to fill his place as Rev. O. C. Loy. We welcome him in our midst and pray for his success and a year of co-operative Christian service. A MEMBER.

State Street Church.—The extreme bad weather kept some of our folks from church Sunday, but there was a good attendance considering the weather. The children are eager to begin their practice for the Christmas entertainment.

The members of the Missionary Society enjoyed a helpful and interesting meeting at the parsonage last Thursday afternoon. The president, Mrs. A. H. Evans, always prepares a good program and Mrs. Curtis Koonts brings such interesting and well prepared lessons from the study-book.

The oyster supper given some time ago was such a success that a larger is being planned for about the last of next month or first of February. REPORTER.

South Lexington Church.—It seems winter is here. As we look out, we see the snow-covered fields and we are fully convinced that the summer days are over.

Our Sunday school is doing good work. It has increased both in number and in interest. There is always room for improvement in God's work. Let each one "boost" our school and get the unsaved of our community interested in the work of God and the saving of souls. There is so much to be done and the Christian people must do it. The world is dying for just a "little bit of love."—love for our brothers, neighbors and friends; love that will cause us to do unto others as we would that they do unto us. Let each Christian resolve deep down in his heart that they will try harder to create more of this love, wherever they go.

We have started our Christmas program. We are looking forward to have a real interesting program.

There is some sickness in our school at present.

The ladies' quarterly class has been having a few suppers for raising money to secure baskets for the sick, and afflicted of our school and community, to bring Christmas cheer to the ones who are sad. This is a good work. May the Lord bless every effort for good. Pray for our school that we may do much and lasting good is my prayer.
REPORTER.

Union Chapel.—A large congregation was out the fourth Sunday morning to hear Rev. H. F. Fogleman. He delivered a beautiful and helpful sermon, using as his theme, "Prayer." The annual Thanksgiving offering was taken at this service, which amounted to $37.00, and this was a little more than the offering a year ago.

It seems to me that the greatest problem of the rural church is efficient leadership. I do not know whether the city church is confronted with this problem or not, but the only solution is to train the children today. I am afraid we often spend too much time trying to get older people to do things, when we should be training the children so they will make willing and efficient leaders when they grow up.

It is true that we never get too old to learn, but it is very difficult to train older people for leaders in Christian work.

We are putting forth an effort to train the young people of our church. We have recently organized a mission band and young people's auxiliary. The mission band is divided into three circles, and the leaders of these circles are Miss Leah Davis, Mrs. R. M. Edwards and Miss Clellie Hedgepeth. The meetings will be held in the different communities and there are some children in these communities that will have the privilege of attending these meetings that do not attend Sunday school.

Mrs. L. E. Barnes is directing the young people's work, and we believe that much good will be done through these organizations.

The Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met with Mrs. S. V. Floyd Friday evening, December 2nd. We had only a few members present and had to omit a part of the program. The bad weather kept some away and some of our members had a part on the program that was given at the high school. Miss Emily Floyd conducted the devotional, using the Jewel Box, and we were led in prayer by our pastor. Mrs. R. M. Edwards acted as secretary in the absence of Mrs. Pardue. After the business was transacted, Miss Eleanora Floyd asked the questions. We decided to hold a public service some time in January for the purpose of getting as many new members as possible. Our next meeting will be with Mrs. W. A. Pardue.

Mr. J. M. Harris has been taking treatment at the Maria Parham Hospital for two weeks. We are glad that he is improving so rapidly and that he expects to be home soon.

Mr. John W. Overton passed away Friday, November 18, and was laid to rest in Union Chapel cemetery Saturday afternoon. The funeral service was held at the church and was conducted by our pastor. Mr. Overton was a faithful member of our church for many years. He leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter. Our tender sympathies are extended to them and to all the relatives and friends. REPORTER.

Orange Charge.—Pounded. The people have received us kindly. Just before Thanksgiving Day Brother Arthur Holmes brought us a nice turkey. Brother James O. Webb gave us about a dollar's worth of good honey. The real surprise came at night, December 1, when a number of the Hebron folks visited the parsonage and left a supply of things suitable for the parsonage table.

We are grateful to each of these for their expression of kindness.

Our first quarterly conference met with the Efland church December 3. The program was carried out as previously announced. Owing to the rough weather the congregation was small. Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the N. C. Conference, was with us. He preached a splendid sermon at 11 a. m. The ladies of Efland served Brunswick stew and other things at noon.

At 1 p. m. the Woman's Missionary Society met. Mrs. O. E. Bivins, president, gave a splendid report of the Efland societies' work for the year. Brother Taylor gave some helpful suggestions to the society.

At 2 p. m. the quarterly conference met, Brother Taylor presiding. The usual business was transacted harmoniously.

The old board of parsonage trustees were elected to succeed themselves.

Brother C. H. Jones was re-elected secretary of the conference. Brother Jones has held this position for a number of years. He is a splendid secretary.

The reports from official members present were encouraging. Stewards reported College claims paid in full at three churches, as follows: Efland, $36; Hebron, $27; and Union Grove, $17.

The conference accepted pledges made by delegate and pastor at Annual Conference: Church Extension, $25; 1 per cent for Superannuates, $37; delegates' expense to Annual Conference, $18. This was all pledged for except $20. Hope to raise that soon.

Conference adopted pastor's report to raise College claims and A. C. B. in December. As three churches have already raised College assessment, we hope to get both these claims in December.

The work for the entire year was outlined. Officials are taking hold with new zeal.

Efland and Hebron have building and repairing programs on. More about these later.

We were especially delighted to have Brother Taylor with us for the day. His encouragement is worth much to us. Come this way when you can, Brother Taylor.

Sincerely,
B. M. WILLIAMS.

Halifax.—We are entering upon our fourth year as pastor of this charge. Everything is starting off well, and we hope that this will be the best year on this charge. The members are already beginning to follow their past custom to pound the pastor in the beginning of the new year. One of our good members of Bethesda church gave the pastor and family a nice Thanksgiving turkey. Others have been giving the pastor gas. I guess they want him to visit. Others have given sugar, so we will try to look pleasant. Others have been supplying us with potatoes and other things. We want to thank our neighbors for the nice waiters of good things to eat sent us during our recent illness. I don't think that there is any more loyal, big-hearted people to be found anywhere than you will find on Halifax charge.

We were sorry we were not able to attend the recent session of Conference. It was the first Conference we have missed in 22 years, but we are glad you had a good Conference and that we are back on this charge. We also want to thank our many friends for their many kind expressions of appreciation for our return.

Old Brother F. N. Porter, one of our faithful members of Hollister church, died yesterday and will be buried this afternoon. A suitable obituary will appear later.

Our first quarterly conference will convene with Ringwood church on Friday, December 16, 1927, at 2 p. m. We want all of the officials to be present so we may lay the plans for the coming year.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Asheville.—Sunday was rainy. Brother Casto was ill and could not come. Professor Van Meter gave us a wonderful message on "Surrender," from Romans 12:1, 2. He made us all want to confess, and give up to Jesus, and be renewed in our minds, and know the perfect will of our Father. In spite of the rain, 40 heard him. There were 36 in Sunday school, and 35 at the evening service; 10 at Christian Endeavor, led by Miss Louise Hanner. It rained last Wednesday night, yet 14 heard Brother Van Meter tell us how to be worth-while Christians. Last Sunday night Rev. J. S. Lyons told us of his thrilling experiences in New York and Baltimore the past ten days; how he was led to Calvary Episcopal church in New York at an evening service and heard the testimony of all classes as to the saving grace of Jesus; saw the flaming revival carried on by Dr. Shoemaker, the rector; was led to an interview in Baltimore which resulted in the reclamation of one of the most influential ministers anywhere.

It is a benediction to have Brothers Casto and Van Meter and Lyons to bless us each Sunday with their messages. This Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. F. R. McIntyre a small group will meet for prayer and instruction in soul-winning. The prayer meeting this week will be a blessing.

Last week another one of our charter members passed away, Mrs. Mary Hiatt Patton. She was converted in the pastorate of Rev. T. J. Ogburn in Buncombe county.

Sunday afternoon Rev. J. S. Williams conducted the funeral of an infant, the child of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vess. The father had never attended any church since quitting our Sunday school several years ago.

REPORTER.

Henderson—The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies held their monthly meeting with Mrs. J. B. Fox November 21st. Mrs. Emily Reavis was assistant hostess. The president, Mrs. L. R. Gooch, presided. The general business of the society was conducted, and reports from various committees were read. The devotionals were held by Mrs. Clyde Finch, using the Jewel Box. Mrs. R. A. Hunter read the "Stewardship of Woman" from the Record, and it was most interesting. Mrs. L. R. Gooch outlined for us the first chapter in our new study book, "A Safe Way for the Children." This she did in a most impressive and pleasing manner. The Question Box was conducted by Mrs. E. C. Kittrell and very interesting it was. The meeting closed by a special prayer for those mentioned in our prayer-calendar, offered by Mrs. S. R. Harris. The hostesses then served ice cream and cake.

On Tuesday night, November 22nd, the Philathea class held their regular business meeting with Mrs. Silas Powell. The president, Mrs. A. B. Young, presided. Rev. R. A. Hunter conducted the devotionals. The routine of business was then carried out and all reports were very good. The class voted to send provisions to a needy family Thanksgiving and a committee for this was appointed. Other matters of importance were discussed and the meeting was closed by prayer. The hostess, assisted by Miss Louise Powell, served delicious sandwiches and coffee.

Rev. R. A. Hunter held the Thanksgiving service Thursday morning at 10 o'clock at our church. A very good attendance was present and the offering was taken for the Children's Home.

On Wednesday night, following the prayer services, a meeting of the teachers and officers of the Sunday school was held. Many plans were discussed and it was decided to have a contest on class attendance for the coming year. There seems to be a falling off in attendance and interest and the teachers and superintendent are very anxious to improve this.

The Holy Communion service was observed at our church yesterday, December 4, and despite the snow and ice a goodly number was present.

Our first quarterly conference will be held this Wednesday night, December 7th, at the church after prayer meeting.

We regret to report that our former Sunday school superintendent and faithful worker, Mr. J. M. Baity, is a patient in Maria Parham Hospital, recovering from an operation for appendicitis. We all wish for him a speedy recovery.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—Our pastor filled his first appointment since Conference November 20 with very good attendance, but not near as good as it could have been. The attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was very good; 15 more in Sunday school than on the Sunday before. We were very glad to have Mr. Elwood Hunter, who is attending college at Chapel Hill, and Miss Pauline Hunter, who is attending college at High Point College, with us Sunday, November 27; also as our visitor, Mr. Bailey, from Raleigh. Both Mr. Hunter and Mr. Bailey told us some interesting things about the Methodist church at Chapel Hill.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting which was held the third Sunday night, the topic discussed was "Blessings We Often Forget." The meeting was led by Mrs. H. C. Whitman.

We did not have Sunday school or Christian Endeavor Sunday on account of bad weather.

Last Tuesday evening the Workers' Council met at the church. Problems of the church were discussed.

The Sunday school will hold a Christmas service on Christmas night.

The first quarterly conference will convene at Tabernacle on Tuesday, December 6.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies will meet next Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. C. E. Holder.

MRS. ARZIA DAVIS, Reporter.

Hickory Grove, Guilford Circuit.—Last year was the best year we have had at this church in a long time, yet we feel there was much that was left undone that should have been done.

We have changed the appearance of our church considerably by building a new recess pulpit, painting inside and out, bought new carpet, lamps and have made several other improvements. Ladies' Aid Society raised $415.00 of this money. We have a wide-awake society, and we are willing to help the church in any way we can. On one quilt we made $317.00.

Our Sunday school is getting on nicely. We elected our same superintendent, Brother A. L. Jones, for another year. We have 120 enrolled and the attendance has been fine. Collections have been good, and a great interest has been manifested, yet there can be great improvement along this line. We have a goodly number in our community that don't attend church or Sunday school that would be good help if we could get them interested.

Our church lost five of its members by death right recently: Brother J. F. Hassell, Mrs. Emma Little, Mrs. James Cooper, Mrs. Lou Chadwick and Aunt Bettie Oakley. These were consecrated Christians and were ever ready to stand for the right and their church. We feel our loss is great.

We regret very must to give up our former pastor, Brother Loy, and his good wife. These are splendid young people and have been so much help to our church and community, and we congratulate Saxapahaw on getting them, but as Conference thought best to make the change and send us Brother Ashburn, we are going to try to do still greater things this year.

Brother Ashburn was with us the fourth Sunday and preached at 11 o'clock an old-time gospel sermon, and received one young man into the church, Brother Henry Cook.

Pray for us that we may have a prosperous year and do greater things for our Master.

REPORTER.

Spring Valley, Vance Circuit.—We are very glad to have our same pastor back again. Brother Chambliss has been a great help to our church and community, and we feel that to have him serve us as pastor again means a great gain to us.

He filled his regular appointment the third Sunday afternoon in November. A very goodly number was out to hear him, and he gave us a very helpful sermon.

We paid all church claims in full last year, and had some over, and we are starting out the new year with that in view again. We have a busy band of workers.

The Christian Endeavor Society held a very interesting service last Sunday night. The subject was, "Count Your Blessings." Along with this service a splendid Thanksgiving program was carried out also. The offering was $8.00. Our pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, was with us and gave us a very splendid talk.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely, but could be so much better. Last year was the best year we have had for years, having an average attendance of about 75. We hope to raise this average this year.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society is planning to have an oyster supper in the near future to help on the balance due on our benches. Hope as many members as possible will be present. Important business.

The first quarterly conference will convene at Spring Valley December 10. The new president will preach at 11 a. m.

We have some on the sick list. We wish them a speedy recovery.

Best wishes to all. REPORTER.

Fairview-Glen Raven.—I regret very much I could not be in my first quarterly meeting on account of the illness and death of my wife's mother. Wish to thank President Taylor for his service at that time. Wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Garrison for the nice drugget they bought and sent to the parsonage some time ago. On Wednesday night, November 23, the good people of Glen Raven church gave us a nice pounding. We are very grateful. Thank all for their thoughfulness of their pastor and family. We hope to be able to repay them in some way for their kindness shown us.

Our Thanksgiving offering for the Children's Home was very good, $20.00.

Our crowd was small yesterday on account of the weather. T. A. WILLIAMS.

Salem.—Our new pastor, Brother Loy, filled his first appointment at Salem last second Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He also preached for us again last fourth Sunday afternoon. He left with us two splendid sermons.

Brother Isley goes with our love and best wishes to his new work. We are hoping he will not forget us, but will come to visit us again. We will be glad to have him with us any time.

Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely with Mrs. H. G. Paris as superintendent, who has served for the past 10 or 12 years.

We are planning a Christmas program for Christmas eve. Everybody come.

Pray for us that we may have a prosperous year and do great things for the Master.

SALLIE PARIS, Reporter.

Mecklenburg Circuit.—We were greatly surprised last night while visiting a neighbor. We saw some autos pull up in the yard where we were visiting, and soon learned we were at the place where they had agreed to meet before coming to the parsonage to pound the preacher with good things to eat. On finding out we were there they turned and went away. I noticed they went to the parsonage, so I hastily went home to see who had come to see us and found about 20 persons there waiting in the cold rain with lots of good things to eat.

I feel grateful to the stationing committee for sending me here. I feel sure I have a good work. I have been at all of my appointments and had good-sized congregations at each place except at Stallings, our home church, and the rains and snow kept folks at home.

I want to thank all the good folks for all the nice things they brought. We are hoping we can be able to help to feed the hungry souls as bountifully as they have prepared for our bodies. W. C. HALL.

Greensville Circuit.—The work of the new conference year is now getting well under way and we are hoping, trusting and praying that this, the fifth year of my stay with this good people, may be the best yet. Some of our churches, namely, Philadelphia and Matthews Chapel, have adopted and will use the envelope system this year. Four, and perhaps all five, of my churches will celebrate the birth of our dear Saviour by suitable decorations, Christmas trees, and giving entertainments. The Christmas spirit is already getting high among the children.

We have recently greatly improved the comfort of our church auditoriums by putting in new heating plants and improving the old ones. Matthews Chapel has re-arranged auditorium and put in two new heaters. We were greeted at Philadelphia on last third Sunday night by one of the newest and most modern heating plants to be had, a real piece of church furniture. All parts of auditorium were well heated which made one think of beautiful spring-time and flowers. A large congregation worshipped in comfort. One member, who lives at Emporia, not only gave largely to bring this condition to pass, but sent along a ton of coal.

On last Sunday morning when I drove up to Hobbs Chapel I found the old heating plant there greatly improved. We now have improved roads to all my churches. We can leave parsonage and reach either of the five church in 20 to 25 minutes. I had better hush or someone will be wanting my charge.

We have the largest garden in the Conference, one and 55-100ths acres. We now have growing strawberries, blackberries, dewberries, raspberries, and 35 of the finest apple and peach trees beginning to bear.

I'll now give a few questions for each member of the church to ask him or herself and let conscience answer:

What would my church be if all its members were just like me?

How would my pastor and family live if all members of his church paid just like me?

How would missionaries be sent across the sea if all members of Christ's church gave just like me?

When would the Gospel be preached to all the world if all the church members were as stingy as me?

How would denominational colleges and children's homes be built and maintained if all members of the church gave just like me?

If five dollars were the maximum gift per family, your church would give seventy-five to one twenty-five instead of five hundred and forty-five.

Take the amount you pay and multiply by the number of members of your church and you would see how your church would stand financially.

If ten to one-half of members pay the church's bills, if the other half will multiply nothing by nothing the result would be nothing; therefore, the church would have nothing to carry on Kingdom service.

It would be so nice if everyone would remember his vows to Almighty God and pay them, as God gives his or her the ability.

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

South Winston.—Our work is starting off nicely. We feel sure that we are gaining ground on many lines, perhaps on all lines, especially on attendance and the spiritual.

The Sunday school is on the increase; we had 107 present yesterday at Union Ridge. We feel encouraged to push onward and upward for the King.

Our new church at Southside is doing very well considering the surroundings. Sunday school is not as good as we hoped for, but we are encouraged to fight on to gain the victory; 44 present yesterday.

I preached at Union Ridge yesterday morning at 11 o'clock. We had a nice congregation. Administered the communion to the largest crowd we remember for some time; 69 persons communed. Spiritual tide was fine.

Brother Compher preached for us last night, and I preached at the Southside church. Very good service; there were 11 communed there.

We would solicit the prayers of all the Herald readers for our new work at Southside. We are all poor in material things, but we have a rich Father. We have our lot paid for, but no funds with which to erect a church building. If any hear the Father speaking to them to help, we hope they will obey and anything will be appreciated, and the Lord will surely bless you.

With best wishes to the Herald family, I am,

Yours,
P. L. KINNAMAN, Pastor.

Vance Charge.—On Tuesday afternoon, November 22, the Missionary Society of Flat Rock church held its regular monthly meeting with Misses Annie and Rosa Satterwhite. Devotionals were conducted by Miss Rosa Satterwhite, reading 103rd Psalm, followed by the Lord's Prayer.

Roll called, minutes read, and dues collected; then came the reports. The treasurer, Mrs. U. J. Parrott, reported $47.36 as the amount collected to date, leaving only $2.64 to be collected on our $50 pledge; everyone was glad to hear this good report.

The five-fold program was then taken up. Mrs. T. P. Hester presented the first part, Miss Mary V. White, the second, Mrs. W. B. Reavis, the third, Miss Mary V. White gave a brief report on the fourth and fifth. This made a very interesting program, followed by a reading on Thanksgiving by Mrs. U. J. Parrott.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

Ebenezer.—We were very glad to have Brother Powell back with us. He preached a splendid sermon the second Sunday.

Our Sunday school is extra but we are planning to make it better.

The weather is getting cooler but we can bundle up, so let's try to come out to church. We must try to make our Sunday school bigger and better.

(Miss) RENA ROOK.

From Japan to Enfield.—After a calm and pleasant voyage across the Pacific, the writer and his family arrived in High Point on the 28th of July. Making High Point headquarters, we have spent the time up until the meeting of the Conference visiting our people and friends. One of the great pleasures of earth is the renewing of friendships. The saddest thing for us was the fact that so many had dropped out of the ranks during the years of absence. This was especially noticeable when we attended the last session of the North Carolina Conference.

At Conference the writer was assigned to the work at Enfield. After all these years of school work it seems good to be back in the pastorate again. We have been warmly received, by many and various ways of expression. On our arrival last week we found three nice ladies awaiting our arrival to bid us welcome. In the kitchen was a well-loaded table on which was 'most everything imaginable that could be eaten, and a few things that could not be eaten. With us this is an unusual experience, hence we fear we have not the proper phraseology to be used in reply to such great expressions of interest and sympathy in the new preacher. Some left their names and others didn't, hence we cannot thank each one individually, but I am using this opportunity to thank each one of you for these expressions of your Chritsian love for the cause which I represent. May our year's work together be such that you will have no occasion for feelings of regret.

There is considerable sickness among our people here. At the Enfield church Brother Jordan's wife and two children are ill. Mrs. Jordan has just returned from the hospital, and the two children are in bed with the "flu." Brother Hubert Whitaker's little girl has been suffering with her ear, but I am glad to be informed, however, that she is improving; and just yesterday our loyal and faithful worker, Mrs. J. R. Reavis, was taken ill.

At Whitaker's Chapel Miss Lelia Holliday is undergoing an operation in the Park View Hospital, Rocky Mount.

For all of those who are sick our hearts go out in sympathy and we wish for them a speedy recovery.

Last Sunday afternoon the writer conducted the funeral of John Bradford Pittman at Whitaker's Chapel. His death was rather sudden. He was living at Norlina. He spent Thanksgiving with his people and was taken sick on his return. All those who knew him said he lived a life above reproach. He loved his church and always gave to its support. He spent right much of his life out of the state and was married while away. His wife died, however, some 12 years ago. He leaves to remember his passing in tears four sisters and a host of friends.

FROM WHY NOT TO ENGLISH STREET, HIGH POINT

I want to say to the charge I am leaving that my stay among you though mixed with sorrow yet was very pleasant because of the Christian spirit I found with you good folks. I shall ever remember your kind and gentle Christian lives. Thank every one of you for your cooperation with me in doing the following things. A partial summary of the work done on charge. Conversions while on work, 70; accessions, 30; Ladies' Aid society organized at New Hope church with sixteen members at close of year. Two churches painted at a cost of more than four hundred dollars; another one had the paint bought with which to paint the inside of their church. May I say to you, Cooperate with your new pastor and by so doing go forward in helping to bring in the kingdom of Christ.

We are now located at 1417 English street. We came and filled our appointments here the Sunday following Conference. I am very favorably impressed with the opportunity in this locality of doing work for the Master. I am I believe in the midst of a loyal little band of Christians. The Ladies' Aid met last Tuesday night and had a very interesting meeting. They have set their goal to raise five hundred dollars ($500) this conference year.

The Sunday school is starting off well under the leadership of our efficient superintendent, Brother Boswell. Brethren, pray for me that I may lead this people on to greater usefulness in kingdom service.

D. I. GARNER, Pastor.

THE CHILDREN WILL SING

Yes, as stated in the article in the Herald last week, the children will sing some kind of songs, helpful or detrimental. We who are interested in their spiritual welfare are very anxious that they learn those that will be of greatest helpfulness to them. Especially is it true of the children who are under our special care at the Children's Home.

Lest some of you did not observe the article in last week's edition, we shall repeat the fact that there are practically no hymn-books at the Home. We are making an effort to secure as a Christmas present for these dear ones 75 copies of one of the best books in circulation today. Will you help? You may send your donation for as many as you would like to buy at 75 cents each.

The first response has come! Rev. and Mrs. Lawrence Little, out of the goodness of their hearts, have paid for five, representing each member of their family, including the three little Littles, Katherine, Alice, Marjorie and Betty. Maybe some family of ten or twelve will do likewise. Let us please act quickly, so that we may get the books by Christmas.

REPORT OF THE BUDGET COUNCIL
(Report Y)

To the members of the Conference:

At the time this report is written, figures are not at hand for a comparison of this year's receipts with those of last year, but our impression is that there has been a gain not only in receipts but in the number of churches and charges that have contributed to the Budgets. This in itself is hopeful. But we need to press on until every church on every charge assumes its responsibility for the raising of the entire budget.

Last year the percentage allotted to each interest of the General Conference Budget was printed in the Journal—see Journal 1926, page 75—with the amount to be raised for each. The Conference Treasurer's report will show what we have done or failed to do toward reaching the full amount. We have probably fallen far short.

It seems to be the custom in some of our churches to credit all that the Missionary Societies raise on the General Conference Budget. The W. F. M. S. is given only 12 per cent; the W. H. M. S. only six per cent of the total. If the Societies raise more than this and it is credited on the Budget, but still applied on the Missionary interests, by whom and for whom it is raised, the other items on the Budget must suffer a proportionate loss.

If we will think of the General Conference Budget as a wheel, the hub being the local church, the spokes the various interests to whom we contribute, and the rim representing the Methodist Protestant Church as a whole, we will see the importance of each local church contributing its full share to every general interest. If some of the spokes are missing, or made weak from lack of support, the wheel must collapse. The Budget Council would suggest that the churches make an earnest effort to give every interest that which is due that there be no lack in carrying forward the whole program of the church. Not less for missions, but more for all the enterprises in which the Church is engaged.

The suggestion was made last year that the rural churches adopt "the Lord's Acre Plan" for raising the finances in the country church. It is gratifying to know that a number of the churches have adopted the plan this year. Some of them are reporting more raised on the Budgets than ever before. We should suggest that the pastors on these charges relate their experience in this regard and so inspire other churches to undertake the plan.

One of the outstanding needs of our churches is a better financial plan for the raising of church finances. Your committee does not attempt to set forth a scheme because conditions are different in different churches. But we would suggest that the Board of Stewards in each church study the methods that have been successful in other churches, and try to work the plan that seems practicable for their local conditions. We are suggesting that each church get a plan, or make one—and work it.

We would suggest to the president the advisability of having some charts prepared that will set forth the facts as to our finances, and that he give a short talk on the charts as he makes his rounds. A number of business concerns are using this method of salesmanship. We who are the children of light might sell the interests of the Kingdom in the same way.

The Financial Statement in the Herald the past year has, we think, been of great help in stimulating our people to give to the Budgets. We suggest that this be continued during the present year.

The President of the Conference was instructed to study the field with a view to a more equitable apportionment of the Budgets to the various charges. He has laid before us a list for our approval. With certain changes, we are submitting the list to you. After struggling with this matter for several years, we confess to our inability to find a solution that will be satisfactory to all. The General Conference apportionment must be accepted in full, and the needs of the Annual Conference are great; so the amount to be raised must be placed where there is the largest possibility of the money being raised. We cannot take two charges with the same number of members and under every condition expect them to raise the same amount. Not all charges are equally willing; not all charges are equally able. So we cannot lay down hard and fast rules, as much as such rules might seem to be desirable. We have done our best, having in mind the necessity of raising the largest possible amount, to be fair to each charge, and to put upon it no greater task than it can perform.

Conference directed the distribution of the following amounts to the Annual Conference Budget:

Church Extension	$5,500.00

BUDGET COUNCIL.

—It has been estimated that 1,500,000 one-dollar bills are worn out each day.

DR. JOHNSON'S QUESTION

Dr. Johnson's question is, indeed, a very important one, one that should have been asked and seriously considered several years ago. I only want to say a few things; if what I shall say is worth anything, pass it on; if not, let it go for worthless.

In the past few years we have built a wall between our young people and our old people, so that in many instances we have two congregations in the same church. The same pastor tries to serve both. We have too many independent groups, working independent of each other. It seems to me we have forgotten that we are circles within a circle. The greater circle is the church. The circles within the circle are the different organizations working within the greater circle. The pastor is general superintendent of each department. He is also the spiritual adviser and should be so considered, advised with, consulted. When each circle has finished its program it should be brought into the main auditorium for the preaching, the final worship. Each should know its place in the final worship. The children, the young people, the old people all should be recognized in the final worship. They might alternate in songs suitable to each group, then all together.

That wall has created a condition that makes it hard, hard for one pastor to serve two congregations in one; hence, a restlessness that we all feel and see.

If I have some young mules to break, it is very gratifying to know I have a faithful old trusty one to hitch them by. The young should learn to work with the old and the old should give of their wisdom to the young. We are working the Juniors and Seniors together, each rendering programs in the same service. It is working well. I may have failed to make my point clear. Perhaps you should read more than once. I have condensed lest I be too lengthy.

H. L. POWELL.

THE AMERICAN'S CREED

I believe in the United States of America as a Government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a Democracy in a Republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable, established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag; and to defend it against all enemies.

The American's Pledge

I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

A NEW BULLETIN IDEA FOR PASTORS

The Layman Company is now putting out its Tithing Pamphlets in four-page Bulletin form, printed on two inside pages only, other two pages blank, for local material. The cost will give a saving of at least $5 per week to any pastor who uses four-page bulletins in his Sunday services. A good opportunity for five or ten weeks of tithe education without expense or special distribution. Twenty subjects to choose from. Sample set, 15 cents. Prices 40 cents per 100; $3.00 per 1,000.

Please give your denomination, also please mention M. P. Herald.

THE LAYMAN COMPANY.
730 Rush Street, Chicago, Illinois.

—Rev. H. S. B. Thompson wishes us to state that he does not share Dr. Charles E. Jefferson's view of the Bible as to verbal inspiration and inerrancy. A debate on the subject between these two ministers might be interesting and edifying. The truth in the case is important enough to be earnestly and honestly sought.

—Pictures of Rev. J. E. Pritchard and the Asheboro church adorn the first page of the Methodist Protestant of November 23. Editor Benson was present at Conference and was quick to see that this would make good first-page matter. What church and what pastor will be so honored next year?

—We are often in the dark, but Christ is the Light of the world, and He will Lead us.

MARRIED

Cline-Surner

The marriage of Miss Bertha Surner and Mr. Robert Cline took place at the home of the bride. The ceremony, characterized by beauty and simplicity, was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church. The living room, where the vows were spoken, was lovely with its color scheme of green and white, huge white chrysanthemums against a screen of ferns making a scene of unusual beauty. The bride and groom entered the room together. There were no attendants, the ceremony being witnessed only by the members of the two immediate families.

Mrs. Cline is the daughter of Mrs. Lilly Surner Beaver and the late Mr. Surner. She was educated at Concord High School and the Methodist Protestant College at High Point. For the past two years Mrs. Cline has been one of the valued teachers of the Cabarrus County Schools.

Mr. Cline is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Cline, one of the oldest and most prominent families of the county. He is at present secretary and manager of the Mutual Oil Company. During his high school course Mr. Cline was a brilliant football player and was one of the sponsors and a charter members of the DeMolay organization of this city.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Cline entertained the members of the family of the bride and groom at a beautiful appointed breakfast. Mr. and Mrs. Cline have gone on a motor trip to Washington and other northern points of interest and will return through the Sheanadoah Valley and visit the Endless Caverns.

Mr. and Mrs. Cline will return to Concord about the fifteenth of November and will be at home to their friends at 51 South Church Street.

Mrs. Cline is a valued member of Concord Church and one of the efficient teachers of the Sunday school. We wish them much happiness on their journey through life together.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Lineberry-Brown

On Saturday, the nineteenth, 9 p.m., Mr. Richard Brown and Miss Margaret Lineberry were happily married. The ceremony was performed by the writer at the parsonage. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Maggie Lineberry. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, all of Randleman. Both are popular young people of Randleman and vicinity. We wish for them a very prosperous career.

W. H. NEESE.

—The new Sunday school building of West End church is going up. It will be two stories and will house a heating plant for both buildings and is so constructed as to allow for enlarging the church between the two houses. This church has quite a constituency to serve and needs the new room now.

—The Republican National Convention to nominate candidate for President of the United States will meet in Kansas City on June 12.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Payne

Lloyd Bundy Payne, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Payne, of 1203 Blaine street, High Point, was born June 29, 1926 and died November 20, 1927. The child accidentally drank some carbolic acid and was immediately rushed to the High Point Hospital, but no medical skill could save his life. He developed pneumonia and died the following Sunday night.

No one can possibly know the deep sorrow that has come to these young parents except those who have had a similar experience. The mother, most of all, feels a grief that can only come to a mother. In the home she can no more hear the voice of her infant child as it romped and played in the sportive glee of childhood; no more can she administer to its childish wants; but silence, of an indescribable nature, takes the place of the childish pranks of their dear little boy.

At this time we can do nothing more than ask the parents to lean on the strong arm of our dear Saviour, who loves little children and once said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Remember that your darling child does not cease to live. It was budded on earth but is blooming in heaven. While its little body is no longer enfolded in mother's arms, it is safe in the arms of Jesus. Its little form, like the dewdrop kissed away by the rising sun and gone above to help form the beautiful rainbow, it has been kissed away by the sun of righteousness, and is now a precious jewel in the crown of the child-loving King.

Funeral services were conducted at Pleasant Grove by the pastor and a former pastor, Rev. J. H. Moton, and its little body laid to rest in a grave covered with flowers of exquisite beauty. GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Woody

Mary Ellen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shaw, and wife of Mr. Joseph Woody, was born and reared near Bethel church. She died November 9, 1927, aged 74 years, three months and 13 days. She married April 21, 1872. Her husband died April 10, 1915. She leaves four sons, Messrs. Fernando, Harvey, Rufus and Robert; and three daughters, Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mrs. A. R. Perry, and Mrs. James Guthrie; also three brothers, two sisters, a stepmother, 35 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. A host of relatives and friends are sad to know that they will never meet her here again. She was converted in early life and lived a consistent Christian life. She was a member of Bethel church, Foreign Missionary Society, and Egg Club, (which money was sent to the Children's Home) before our Home Society was organized. She was active in all church work. A woman whom to know was to love. She had many friends. 'Twas hard to part with her. Our sympathy goes out especially to her family, who will feel their loss most. She raised a good family of children and was a fond mother and grandmother, doing all she could for their comfort. She finished her work here and has gone to receive the reward which awaits the faithful. She is not dead; she is just away—just gone to her Father's home, where she has begun a fuller, more complete life in His service, surrounded by all that is beautiful. She loved beauty. Her yard at home was a beautiful flower garden. Her friends remembered this and brought many beautiful flowers. Oh, what must heaven be to her, surrounded by the most glorious beauty, and filled with perfect peace, joy and love. She has met father, mother, children, husband, besides many other loved ones, and now she is so happy. No more suffering, nothing to mar her happiness, as she fills her place in Heaven and awaits the coming of dear ones left yet awhile on earth. Funeral services were conducted at Bethel church by Rev. J. A. Burgess, assisted by Rev. G. W. Holmes and Rev. H. L. Isley. Interment was in Bethel cemetery. Her grave, covered with beautiful flowers, was a token of the esteem held for her by the large congregation present.

We, the members of Bethel Foreign Missionary Society, are sad to part with her, for we loved her. She was to us a sister, a faithful co-worker, an inspiration by her presence, and a great financial help. Her place in our society can never be filled. She joined soon after we organized and was active in mission work. She was always proud to have us meet with her, as she could not always attend elsewhere. For some time she had been a great sufferer and not able to go. She was the tenth one of our members who have gone home. How our society is growing in Heaven! Some day we hope all to meet there.

Whereas, our kind, loving Father, in His infinite wisdom and love has called our dear sister from labor to reward, therefore, be it resolved

That we bow in humble submission to His will, knowing that He doeth all things well and all things work together for good to them that love Him;

Resolved, that we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and commend them to our Father's care. He alone can comfort and sustain them in their sorrow. God is love. Death is just the gate by which we enter Heaven;

Resolved, that we profit by her example, and consecrated Christian life, and strive to be better Christians because she has lived and loved and worked among us.

"Now the laborer's task is o'er,
Now the battle day is past,
Now upon the farther shore
Lands the voyager at last.
Father, in Thy gracious keeping,
Leave her now, Thy servant sleeping.

"But we can not forget our friend;
We can not forget her face,
Which cheered us toward our end,
Which nerved us for our race.
Her presence which has made us know,
To God-like souls how deep our debt.
We will not—no, we can not—forget."

MRS. J. M. FOUST,
MISS MARCIA FOUST,
MRS. R. W. LINDLEY.

Harris

On Tuesday evening, November 8th, Brother Andrew J. Harris was called home, after many months of suffering from heart trouble. He was 66 years old, having been born in Granville county, near Oxford, October 28, 1861.

Brother Harris was twice married, the first time to Miss Lee Mitchell, of Granville county, who died in 1901, and later to Miss Margaret Reed, of Maryland, who survives. Four children by the first marriage survive, these being Mrs. Walter Hadley, of South Ashburnham, Mass.; George M. Harris, of Smyrna, Turkey, who is now en route to this country; Dr. Cary F. Harris, of Ansonville, Anson county, and Mrs. R. L. Arrington, of Rocky Mount. The oldest son, Captain Andrew J. Harris, Jr., was killed in France a few days before the Armistice in 1918. There are four children by the second marriage: Reed H. Harris, Misses Mary Harris and Margaret Harris, and Lawrence Harris, all of this city. Three brothers also survive, George B. Harris, Samuel R. Harris and Dr. Fletcher R. Harris, all of this city. Brother Harris was licensed to practice law at the October term of the State Supreme Court in 1885, and immediately opened a law office in Henderson, where he was active in his profession until some time ago when his health began to fail. He became a Mason early in life and was prominent in Masonic circles for many years, having been at the time of his death grand senior warden of the North Carolina Grand Lodge of Masons, and in line for elevation to grand master in another year.

Brother Harris was a life-long member of the Methodist Protestant Church and was until his illness a teacher of the Junior Baraca class. He was deeply interested in every phase of church work until the very last. He was patient and cheerful through all his sickness, and although he loved life, he expressed a willingness to go. He was a man of strong faith and the writer never visited him without being spiritually strengthened.

The funeral service was conducted from the church by the pastor, assisted by Rev. I. W. Hughes, Rector of the Episcopal church, in the presence of a church full of relatives and friends. May God bless the bereaved.

R. A. HUNTER.

PRESENCE OF MIND

Rachel Pierce

It was near the intersection of two city streets. A little girl on a "skooter" shot out of a driveway, narrowly shaved a passing automobile, and skidded in front of an ice wagon, drawn by a big horse, that had just thundered around the corner. The driver, whose eyes were not where they should have been, failed to see the child.

"Giddap!" he shouted, slapping the horse with a loose line.

A horrified bystander called an ineffectual warning. The little girl, almost under the horse's huge hoofs, wavered indecisively, panic-stricken.

"Giddap!" repeated the impatient driver.

The horse, calm amid the frezy of the street and stoically indifferent to the lash, did not obey. Spraddling out his forelegs, he brought himself to an abrupt halt and waited, quiet-eyed and patient, till the little girl got safely out of his path. Then, majestically, he journeyed on.—Our Dumb Animals.

—Sad to read: The step-son of Mrs. Frances Sutton Mills, formerly of Greensboro, fell from a window in Western Maryland College and was taken up with a broken back and paralyzed lower extremities.

Unitarian Propaganda

For some reason hard to understand, sects advocating false and nonessential views are more active in propaganda than are others who have only the truth to spread. Among the most active in the spread of what we consider destructive error are the Unitarians. An article entitled "Jesus" appears in one of the popular magazines for December, which was evidently written by a Unitarian with the purpose of displacing the common conception of Jesus with the Unitarian conception. The author concedes that Trinitarians have been in the great majority, but predicts that some centuries hence the Unitarian view will prevail.

Great would be the loss to the world if such a change should take place. There is power in the Christ of the Trinitarian; very little in the Christ of the Unitarian. The Trinitarian's Christ is God incarnate. The Unitarian's Christ is only a man, though with extraordinary religious genius. The Trinitarian's Christ died for the sins of the world. The Unitarian's Christ died only incidentally, as the penalty for his rebuke of the sins of those in authority. The Trinitarian's Christ rose from the dead and ascended into heaven to be seated in power at the right hand of God. The Unitarian Christ still sleeps the sleep of death as to his body, though they would perhaps concede that his spirit has departed to the abode of the children of God.

The Trinitarian Christ came to the world with knowledge of God and the eternal world and hence with power to reveal to men God and Heaven and Hell. The Unitarian Christ had his origin on earth as other humans and brought with him no revelation of things unknown. The difference between the Unitarian's Christ and the Trinitarian's Christ is the difference between man and God. What a let-down it would be from the Christ of the Trinitarians to the Christ of the Unitarians. The consequences in the spirit and temper of mankind would be terrible. What hope can the world build upon the teachings of a religious genius? Buddha was a religious genius. So was Zoroaster. So was Mahomet. Another man may appear at at any time surpassing in religious genius any that has ever lived. What would be the fate of Christianity if it rested on the fortunes of religious geniuses?

The Unitarians are succeeding in impressing their views upon some. There are young ministers who are caught in their snare as well as unthinking and uninformed laymen. Their view appeals to pride of intellect. It represents itself as a superior view, free from superstition. What it cannot explain by natural philosophy it denies. Thus most of the miracles go. Those allowed to remain were not miracles, but natural phenomena dependent on science. The language of the New Testament when possible is interpreted in a way to exclude the supernatural. Thus the transfiguration of Jesus was simply the radiation of his inner joy manifested in his last days because he felt that he had succeeded in his effort to teach his disciples the lesson of his life. God's approval of Jesus was not manifested by any outward voice that others could hear, but was only an inner feeling in Jesus' own mind. Even the teachings of Jesus that reveal his genius were derived from Jewish literature written before the days of Jesus. He had the genius to appreciate and collect and impress by his teaching, and he had the faith to act upon the basis of the teaching he accepted from those who had gone before him.

When the world comes down to the acceptance of the Unitarian view of Jesus, we predict that it will be ready to turn away from Jesus as not offering enough to be worth while. If Jesus was only a human genius, may not the world hope for a still greater genius? If Jesus was only a man, how did he know what God is like and how did he know how to live like his Father? The Unitarians reduce divine revelation to zero, so far as the race is concerned. They leave only the possibility of a revelation to the individual consciousness, making every man a law unto himself. Why men with such a creed should be so well satisfied with it that they should try to uinversalize it is indeed hard to understand. But there are the Seventh Day Adventists turning he world upside down because of the difference between two consecutive days as the Sabbath. There are the Russellites prodigiously active to convince the world that Christ has already come. The Unitarians have a free field, but people should be on guard against their destructive fallacies.

Going Ahead With God

God's course is ever onward—never backward. He calls on men to go forward with Him. It is thus that a man realizes his true life—by going ahead with God. Every day is a new day. It is not like any previous day because God's way is ever onward. May we not say that each day is better than any previous day has been? It surely must be so, because God is leading the world ever forward. It is our privilege to go forward with God. If we have faith in God's leadership, we will go forward with Him. If we are lacking in faith in God, we will not venture out in the forward way. According to our faith it will be unto us. But know assuredly, O man, that God is trying to lead you forward to the best possible destiny for you. Are you going ahead with God or hanging back and losing life's best?

Warning to Young Women

Dr. Haven Emerson writes an article in The Health Bulletin of North Carolina calling attention to the increase in number of cases of tuberculosis among young women between the ages of fifteen and thirty-five. All other elements of the population show a reduction in the number of cases of tuberculosis. Why should the young women be more susceptible than others? The doctor finds an explanation in the fact that the young women are robbing themselves of needed sleep in order to attend entertainments. The excitement of the movies and other entertainments is destroying lives that might be saved by the rest of plenty of sound sleep.

PROHIBITION

America's Amazing Experiment

By Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D. D.

President of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America

Nation-wide prohibition in the United States is a matter of far extended interest. I have traveled in nearly every State of the Union, in the Dominion of Canada, and in half a dozen countries of Europe since the Eighteenth Amendment was ratified. In all these widely separated regions I found many who were indifferent to the League of Nations and the World Court; in none did I find anyone who was even neutral about prohibition. For the Wets of every nation it is either a tragedy or a farce; a menace to freedom, the beginning of the end for democratic rule, an odious usurpation of personal right and liberty by a blind, bigoted, pharisaical puritanism. For the Drys it is the moral triumph of the century, a bold, brave adventure registering marvelous advance in human affairs; a new era of commercial expansion, and of an accelerated moral and religious progress. Even had it done no more than wipe out that sink of non-social iniquities, the saloon, the experiment, we are told by the Drys, and by not a few Wets, would have been well worth while.

The enactment of all prohibition measures is based upon the right of the community to rank above the individual wherever the general welfare is at stake. As to whether social control of the drink traffic is either wise or expedient, there is much difference of opinion and an equal confusion of data. It cannot be too strongly stated that the so-called facts circulated by the Wets are frequently highly colored, or only partially significant and very inconclusive. It must also be conceded that the publicity materials of the Drys have often been compiled by inadequate methods, or upon questionable returns. Of course the Drys have the law upon their side. Nor can there be any serious debate about Sir William Osler's opinion that "nobody would be a whit the worse if all the liquor in the country were dumped in the Atlantic and all the tobacco in the Pacific." Many worthy citizens would probably experience some temporary discomfort, and a few might suffer actual privation. But within a couple of decades Americans as a whole would have gained beyond words in health of body, soul and circumstances. Prohibition, therefore, is lawful, sound and sensible; it forbids nothing necessary; it contradicts nothing reasonable. It is embedded in the Constitution of the Republic, from which the most enthusiastic Wet has not the faintest chance of dislodging it.

However, when a rumor reached London that the Eighteenth Amendment was doomed to failure in America, a millionaire liquor dealer at once ordered a rollicking celebration at his expense. The halls of a palatial and crowded club in the West End rang with the shouts of the gay revellers until dawn; champagne flowed in streams; and the joy of the bibulous was unconfined. I saw while journeying through England spacious posters prominently displayed which assured the native and the tourist that "Britons never, never shall be slaves" to the infamous tyrannies of prohibition. Drink's paid advocates are well aware that misleading headlines and juggled statistics are an effective means for knaves to twist the truth and make of it a trap for fools. They use them abundantly, backed by the tales of foreign travelers in America who have been horrified by the deceit and villainy of a nation cursed by enforced abstinence from liquor. The chief impression one gets from this very costly propaganda of the brewers is that prohibition here is mainly a crusade arranged by rant, cant and humbug, and engineered by a widespread organized hypocrisy.

Nevertheless, the growing conviction finds daily utterance, not only in Great Britain and Ireland, but in Germany, Sweden, Italy, France, and even Russia, that soonor or later, if not on moral, certainly on economic grounds, these nations will have to deal decisively and stringently with Drink. It should also clearly be understood that the United States is conducting the most amazing experiment in the annals of legislation of this nature. For the first time in modern history our country is attempting to change the personal tastes and habits of millions of people. Let us make it unmistakably clear to lawless sellers and lawless buyers of intoxicants that the liquor traffic has been permanently outlawed in the United States as the enemy of the general well-being. Insist that Federal and State governments shall co-operate to end the organized resistance to the Eighteenth Amendment. It is demoralizing in the highest degree that law should fail through the connivance or treachery of those appointed to execute it.

I do not say that those who honestly believe this particular law interferes with the sacred rights of the citizen have no case. Nor do I insist to legalists that the sumptuary legislation is in its proper place when embedded in constitutional doctrine. But I do say that here is a valiant attempt to rid this Republic of a fearful menace. It has succeeded to the extent that the saloon is abolished, and assuredly no man with an anti-moronic brain wants the saloon returned. For this reason, if there were no other, and there are many others, prohibition deserves a more unanimous and cordial support.

Nor is this all. The Federal Council of which I happen to be president, while not representing all the members of its own constituent Churches, upon the issue of prohibition does represent the vast majority of them. Its administrative committee heartily and unequivocally reaffirms the commitment of these Churches to National Prohibition. They do not propose to allow the results for which their devoted agencies have labored during many decades to be thrown away at the bidding of criminal bootleggers, or of corrupted officials, or of politicians in search of place and pay. But drinking is a moral problem, and especially is it requisite that we should rededicate ourselves to the religious instruction of youth and adults which lies behind moral efficiency.

Those who know the history of Temperance movements are aware that some form of prohibition has existed in America for three-quarters of a century, indicating that after a prolonged experimental stage, national prohibition was established by a swift, clear registration of the popular will. In the last analysis law depends for its support upon the public opinion which sustains it and the conscience of those who live under it. There can be no greater mistake than to suppose that any legislation can relieve us of the necessity for training our youth in habits of temperate living, self-control, and the practices of disinterested citizenships. To foster such habits and cultivate such practices is the special and peculiar responsibility of the Churches—to be ignored only at the peril of the nation.—McCall's Magazine for January, 1928.

QUADRENNIAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION

Baltimore, May 10-15, 1928

The Quadrennial Young People's Convention of the Methodist Protestant Church will be held in Hampden Church, Baltimore, May 10-15, 1928. These conventions have always been a great source of inspiration and fellowship to all who have attended. This coming convention promises to be the greatest ever held in the history of the church. The following summarizes the work that has already been done on the convention and the plans that are being made to make this a truly great gathering of our youth and its leadership:

The Board of Young People's Work, realizing the strategie location and the historical position of Baltimore as the entertaining city, especially since the General Conference which is to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the birth of the church is to be held there, felt that no other city in the denominational territory could quite compete with Baltimore as the location for this particular convention. The matter was placed before the Baltimore District Union of Young People's Work and in a great mass meeting of over thirteen hundred young people, it was unanimously voted to extend a hearty invitation to the youth of the church to "come on to Baltimore next May!" This invitation was heartily endorsed by the Baltimore Preachers' Meeting.

The Baltimore Union began at once its preparations for this remarkable gathering which will bring together hundreds of young people and their leaders. The Central Committee has already organized and held several meetings. The president of the Baltimore District Union, Rev. J. N. Link, is the General Chairman and writes enthusiastically of the plans being made. The following committees have been organized and are already actively functioning: Auditoriums, Decorations, Entertainment, Exhibits, Finance, Interdenominational Cooperation, Missionary Project, Music, Meals and Banquets, Publicity, Pulpit Supply, Reception and Information, Recreation, Registration, and Ushers.

Entertainment

The delegates attending this convention will be furnished lodging and breakfast free in the homes of our Baltimore people, provided their registration fee is in the hands of the Executive Secretary of the Board of Young People's Work, Rev. Lawrence Little, Concord, N. C., before May 1st. Other meals will be served at the convention church at a very nominal cost.

Speakers

Some of the outstanding speakers of the American platform have been invited to attend and address the convention. Of course, many of our leading Methodist Protestant workers will be there to bring their inspiration and assistance. But many outside the denominational ranks will also attend. Definite acceptance has been secured from the following speakers of international fame: Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of New York City, President of the International Society of Christian Endeavor; E. P. Gates, of Boston, General Secretary of the International Society of Christian Endeavor; Dr. Percy R. Hayward, of Chicago, Director of Young People's Work of the International Council of Religious Education; Dr. Frank P. Getty, of Philadelphia, Director of Young People's Work of the Presbyterian Church U. S. A.; and Dr. Frank M. McKibben, of Baltimore, Secretary of the Maryland Sunday School Association. Many others have been invited and are expected to accept.

Program

The convention will open on Thursday night, May 10th, with a great welcoming service at Hampden Church. Addresses will be made by prominent leaders in the church and civic life of Baltimore and by Dr. Thomas Hamilton Lewis, of Washington, President of the General Conference. Friday night, the meeting will be held in the Lyric Theatre, the most commodious hall in Baltimore. The address on this evening will be made by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of New York. Thousands of young people from Baltimore and neighboring communities, in addition to all those attending the regular sessions of the convention, will desire to to attend this meeting. Needless to say that even in this great theatre, seating space will be at a premium! Announcement will be made later as to the other evening speakers. The morning and afternoon sessions will be given over to practical conferences and addresses on all phases of religious education and young people's work.

Trip to Washington

The convention proper will close on Monday night, May 14th. On the next day, all who wish to do so will go on a special sight-seeing trip to Washington, the Nation's Capital. Arrangements have been made with one of the largest sight-seeing companies in America to take the entire party to all the points of interest in Washington. Stops will be made at the White House, the Capital Building, Congressional Library, Washington Monument, Arlington Cemetery, Mount Vernon, and other points of historical interest.

Reduced Railroad Rates

Arrangements have been made by the Executive Secretary of the Board of Young People's Work with the Trunk Line Railroad Association to furnish a special rate of a fare and one half for the round trip to all who attend this convention. All delegates to the General Conference who come in advance for the meetings of the convention will be granted this reduced rate. All who attend the Young People's Convention may remain over for the General Conference and still have the benefit of the reduced fare. You'll never have another chance to visit Baltimore and Washington at such low cost and with such a splendid company as during this convention. Plan now to join us!

Birthday Celebration

Immediately following the Young People's Convention, the General Conference will convene and will celebrate on the opening night, Wednesday, May 16th, the One Hundredth Anniversary of the Founding of the Methodist Protestant Church! Thousands of Methodist Protestants are looking forward to this great celebration and will fill the great convention hall to overflowing. You will want to be there when our "birthday gift" of one hundred thousand dollars, the "Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift," is placed on the altars of the church by representatives from all the annual conferences. All those attending the Young People's Convention are, of course, cordially invited to remain over for this great service.

Register Now

The registration fee for the Young People's Convention is only 50 cents! Although most conventions of this kind charge at least $2.00, we have placed our fee so that every person who wishes to do so may register. All who register in advance will receive the convention publicity, the program and badge, and convention report. All those who attend will be provided with lodging and breakfast in the homes of Baltimore provided their registration fee is in the hands of the undersigned before May 1st. Send in your registration today and have it off your mind. Even if you find that you cannot attend, you will receive your money's worth in publicity, etc. Register Whether You Can Go or Not!

Further information will be given from time to time. Watch these columns for additional news items concerning plans for the convention.

FROM THE FIELD

West Forsyth

Tuesday, December 6, was spent with Brother Whitaker and the pepole of West Forsyth charge. Because of the severe winter weather we were not able to carry out the full program for this charge. Tabernacle was the only church visited. We preached here at 11 a. m., and after dinner met for quarterly conference, but owing to the fact that but one church was represented it was thought best to adjourn until January 15. However, we spent considerable time in discussing conference programs, and matters in general that concern the progress of the church. One immediate result was the securing of four subscriptions to the HERALD. Brother Whitaker is deeply concerned for the success of his charge, and is zealously trying to promote every interest of the church. We left the work with the feeling of profit and pleasure, and shall look forward to our return in January.

Kernersville

We were here Tuesday night, and assisted the Kernersville charge in their first quarterly conference, which was held in the Kernersville church. All of the churches were represented except Sandy Ridge. The pastor's report outlined a program of progress, and the people seem disposed to go forward. All of the conference interests will be given earnest and continued attention, with the hope of an increased showing over previous years. Organization for evangelism is one of the plans of the pastor, and this, we trust, will result in giving the charge greater spiritual power and the attendant response toward larger things along all lines. The old parsonage is to be sold immediately, and a new one built on the Kernersville church lot. This is a forward step, and the charge is to be commended. One of the needs of the Kernersville church is more services, but with the present grouping of churches this seems impossible. The recent death of Brother W. S. Linville was a serious loss to the charge, but his mantle, we trust, has fallen upon others. Brother Lowdermilk is entering upon the work with his characteristic earnestness, and we are confidently expecting a year of progress for this charge. We enjoyed the hospitality of the pastor's home.

Winston

A splendid congregational meeting was held Wednesday night by this charge, and steps taken to provide a pastor for the work. Our plans have not culminated, as we had hoped. However, we still believe that there will be an open door, and that this church will soon be going forward unitedly for larger service. Patience and prayer are still needed.

Vance

We were with this charge Saturday, December 10, and preached for them at 11 a. m. in the Spring Valley church. This litle church, nestling in the pines, two miles out from Henderson, is a joy to the community. Last year it was enlarged, repainted and reseated, and only about $160 of the cost remains unpaid. This is a small, but faithful band, and they have a just pride in their attractive little church. The quarterly conference was held in the afternoon, though only two churches were represented—Spring Valley and Flat Rock. Pastor Chambliss is zealous for the progress of the charge, and is pushing all conference interests. His salary was increased to $1,350, which is all too small for the ability of this charge. The Flat Rock people are enlarging their church by an addition of four Sunday school rooms. This will give them an opportunity for more efficient work, and no doubt will inspire their activities along all lines. A new parsonage is in contemplation for the charge, and may be built this year, though plans as yet are not definite. We hope to visit the other churches during the year, and shall watch, with deep interest and full appreciation, the development of this charge.

Our report of our visit to the other charges in the east will, for lack of space, have to go over until next week.

Assignments

On December 10, Brother J. P. Pegg was assigned as pastor of Flat Rock charge. He will enter at once upon the work, and goes at the request of the charge that he be assigned their pastor. We most heartily commend him to the love and cooperation of the people, and we bespeak for him a year of zealous service and of progress.

College Maintenance Fund

December has been appointed as the month for paying this, and some of the churches have already paid. Others will report soon. Please let us urge again that every charge attend to this during the month of December. Thank you! Thank you!!

The Budgets

A program is in the making for assisting pastors in raising the budgets. This will be announced soon. But in the meantime, pastors will please go right ahead with their own plans and get every dollar possible. Annual Conference receipts are now far short of conference current expenses. Collections will be easier now than later in the year. Press them, brethren.

Appointments

December 15—Meeting of the Conference Committee on Centenary Gratitude Gift at District Parsonage, 4 p. m.

Fraternally,

Denominational Enterprises

FOREIGN MISSIONS—INDIA

The reports coming from India show that all of our workers have been very busy. Each worker is stressing the spiritual side of the work and a fine spiritual atmosphere is being created.

Items From Rev. Minnis' Report

"During the quarter I took school farm workmen and taught them about three weeks. After teaching them a few days I saw that it was possible for some of them to learn, so I asked one of the junior teachers to teach them one hour each evening. They have made very good progress and some of them have learned to read and write a little."

"Realizing that all work and no play is not good for boys, I formed the boys into three teams for division of work and play. Every day two teams of eleven boys each play while the third team works in the field, pulling grass or collecting vegetables."

A Special Effort

"We have made special effort to create a spiritual atmosphere on the compound and during August I took the seventh standard boys for 30 minutes each morning, from 6:30 to 7 o'clock, for spiritual instruction. The boarding master took all the boys for drill from 7 to 7:30, and the little boys for prayers from 7:30 to 8. All the boys are expected to spend 30 minutes each morning in private meditation, Bible-reading and prayer."

Of his work, Rev. Cassen writes: "The quarter has been a very busy one, and the coming quarter has promise of being just as busy. The work on the well at the farm is finished and I will be able to pay off the balance due before the end of the year, out of the Departmental money. The rains started off nicely and we had hopes of a bumper crop, but after the crops had gotten a good start we had no rain for about five or six weeks, and quite a lot of damage was done to the crops. However, we had good rains later and now we hope to get a fair return.

From the middle of September I have started to go out on daily preaching tours to the villages near Dhulia. I find it quite interesting, as well as instructive, and I hope to get an insight into the work so that I will be able to help the native preachers to present the Gospel in a more effective way."

Mr. Cassen also reports numerous trips to the Farm and different Mission stations, 20 visits to different ivllages, 12 talks in villages, 10 trips to the hospital, visiting the sick, six interviews with Government officials, traveled 610 miles in the Ford on Mission business, spent eight days in religious retreat at Vinchur, four days as the Mission's representative to the Bombay Representative Christian Council, preached three sermons in the Marathi language, conducted three communion services and baptized two adults and four children.

The retreat at Vinchur is a new venture in spiritual uplift and development. The following description is given: "From the 9th to the 16th of August all of the workers of the Evangelistic Department were assembled at Vinchur for a week of prayer and meditation and we had a real time of blessing. We spent our time in considering the different aspects of prayer and service and our duty in connection with these two aspects of the Christian life. It was the first time we had attempted to hold such a meeting and I feel that the results were all that could be expected. The men seemed to get a larger vision of their task in presenting the Gospel to their fellow-countrymen."

In Mr. Cassen's field of labor there are 63 villages composed of a population of 41, 842. During the quarter 46 of these villages were visited. Besides Rev. Cassen there are six native workers, two assistant native workers, and two Bible women. There are 12 Sunday schools with an enrollment of 549; 12,565 people were reached with the Gospel during the quarter.

HOME MISSIONS

During the sessions of the Annual Conferences, which extended from August to December, a number of the churches under the supervision of the Board of Home Missions, or supported in part by the Board, have changed pastors. These changes have been made by the appointing power of the Annual Conference in consultation with the official representative of the Board of Home Missions, or where the title to the property is held by the Board of Home Missions the selection has been made by the Secrteary of the Board with the approval of the Annual Conference Presidents. In every case great care was exercised to secure efficient and safe men.

In a previous letter I referred to the appointment of Rev. G. C. Weaver of the Onondaga Conference to the Home Mission field in Rochester, N. Y. The report from Brother Weaver as to the progress of the work is most encouraging. The Onondaga Conference is deeply interested in this promising field and we are all hoping that during 1928 the first unit of the new church will be erected.

Rev. D. E. McVey, of the Kansas Conference, was appointed to Paris, Texas. It was my privilege to preach for him on Sunday night during the session of the Texas Conference. Several of the ministers of the Conference were present. We had a good attendance and a delightful service. Some improvements to the church property and the erection of a parsonage are contemplated.

Rev. C. H. Reed, of the Eastern Conference, at the same time became pastor of West Heights Church, Kansas City.

At the session of the Illinois Conference, Rev. J. K. Worrell was assigned to Chatham Church, Chicago.

Rev. A. E. Clower, of the Iowa-Missouri Conference, was sent to Kahoka, Missouri.

Rev. J. W. Quaid was transferred from Magnolia, Arkansas Conference, to Comanche, Oklahoma. Rev. J. A. Wade was returned to Magnolia.

Rev. H. J. Hescott is now at First Church, Detroit, while Rev. H. L. Watkins has taken his place at Harger Memorial in the same city.

Dr. Orrill, who had served Seaview Church in Seattle so successfully for several years, was compelled, on account of his wife's health, to retire. Rev. T. G. Betschler, of the Maryland Conference, was secured for this important church.

Rev. S. R. Martin was named for First Church, Columbus, Ohio, while Rev. I. M. McVey was placed at Mount Lookout Church, Cincinnati, Ohio.

At the session of the Illinois Conference the five-year term of Rev. F. J. Baylis as president expired and Rev. F. E. Rueckert was elected to the office.

Dr. G. O. McMillan, President of the Fort Smith-Oklahoma Conference, having been elected president of Tehua-cana College, was superseded in the presidency of the Conference by Rev. M. L. Matthews.

Rev. J. R. Tatom, for a number of years president of the Arkansas Conference, deceased during the year. Rev. W. R. Clower, who had been pastor of the church at Haynesville for six years, was elected president at the last session of the Arkansas Conference.

These pastors and presidents have all entered upon the duties of their respective fields of labor with energy and devotion and with the co-operation and consecration of their constituents, and under the blessing of God, this year should prove a most successful one in the advancement of our denomination and our Lord's Kingdom. I have had the opportunity of visiting all the churches with which the Board of Home Missions has any relation and it is gratifying to bear testimony to the fathfulness, not only of the ministers named in this article, but those in the other churches that were not changed during the session of their Annual Conferences. If the General Church knew more of the good work being accomplished there would be great interest manifested and a larger financial support given. J. M. Sheridan.

INDIA GETS THE CHRISTMAS GIFTS

I desire to make this grateful acknowledgement of the fine response so many made to the appeal for the Christmas gifts for the boys' compound in India. The funds kept coming and coming until there was enough and to spare. This has greatly gladdened my own heart. It will gladden the hearts of our missionaries over there; especially Rev. Minnis, who sent out the appeal. But, most of all, it will gladden the hearts of the boys, the teachers and the laborers in the compound. Now theirs will be a bright and joyous Christmas, too. And the blessing! Well, the greatest will come to those who have given, for "it is more blessed to give than to receive." And now most hearty thanks to all who gave and Heaven's richest benedictions upon you and your Christmas all the brighter and happier because of your gifts.

Heartily and thankfully,

S. W. Rosenberger, Exec. Sec'y.

Dreaded Evils That Never Come

England's grand old man, Gladstone, near the end of his long life said that most of the evils he had feared had never come. I presume all of us can testify similarly. We are men of little faith and great fear. We imagine the evil, we can see it coming, but we fail to believe in the Good Power that will prevent its arrival. We do not hear the voice which says, "It shall not come nigh thee." It is said that Napoleon could stand without flinching in the midst of flying bullets. Why? Because he believed in fate. If such a faith as Napoleon's could keep him calm in the midst of danger, how much more should faith in God keep one in peace. Our lives are in God's hands. Nothing can harm us contrary to His will. And when He wills our death or our affliction, it is best so, and we should acquiesce with thanks to God for meting out to us our changes. Why should we allow ourselves to be distressed about evils that never come or about seeming evils that are really blessings in disguise?

—The belfries of all Christendom now roll along the unbroken song of peace on earth, good will to men.—Longfellow.

TIME AND ETERNITY

We speak of Time as if it were essentially different from Eternity. The only difference is in the length. Each is duration. What we call Time had a beginning and will have an end. What we call Eternity is duration without beginning or end, whether we be in this world, or some other world, or in no world, or kosmos.

Our common version of the Bible in Rev. 10:6, uses the expression, "there should be time no longer." This seems to teach that Time ceases, whatever that could mean, and Eternity begins, as some think. But Eternity has always been, and will never cease. The American Revision, and the margin of the English Revision, and Hinds' Interlinear translate "delay" instead of "time"—"that there should be delay no longer" in "finishing the mystery of God, as he had declared to his servants the prophets." (See verse 7, chapter 10).

So this translation makes the meaning clear, that there should be "time no longer," no further "delay," before the things that had been spoken of, or foretold, should be accomplished. So this rendering, which, no doubt, is correct, eliminates the expression of a seeming scientific contradiction or impossibility.

What we call the "end of time," is but the end of this "age" or dispensation; not the end of duration. That will go on forever. It cannot be otherwise.

We do not know the mode of existence in other worlds, or apart from the body. We have no reason to believe that separation from the body, or change of worlds, will, or can, of itself, change our character. What Divine grace can, or may do for us and in us, apart from the body and in another world, we have no means of knowing. We cannot limit God in these matters. The resurrection body is to be "glorious," "like unto his glorious body." "Now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him."

We simply have the "first-fruits," the "earnest" of the Spirit, in this life, the great harvest being after this life. But the mere change in time or location will not and cannot change our character. This is clearly seen in the case of the "rich man." He possessed the same character in Hades that he had here—one of unbelief; did not believe in the sufficiency of God's word, just like the unbelieving in this life, wishing some human addition or modification. But to one who is a subject of grace in this life, there is no knowing how much additional grace may be added in the hereafter.

J. F. Dosier.

Peter's Devotion to Jesus

Toward the close of Christ's ministry Peter became a very close friend to Him. He watched out for Jesus, and helped Him in every way he could. When they were at the last supper, Peter wanted Jesus to point out the traitor, the one who would betray Him. Then when they tried to take Jesus and arrest Him, Peter struck a man and cut off his ear. One of the saddest things in Peter's life was when he denied Jesus, and for this he was very sorry and repented. Jesus forgave him, and he spent his life serving the Saviour he loved.—C. E. World.

DICKIE'S CHRISTMAS STOCKING

What is a little boy to do when he has no stocking to hang up for Santa Claus to fill? You who hang up a long, lanky one, and find it on Christmas morning fat and bumpy with good things, can hardly believe that such a state of things could be possible; but that was the way it was in Dickie Dalton's home, that Christmas.

Times were hard. Work was scarce, and Dickie's mother had all she could possibly do to pay the rent and find food for herself and her little boy; and when Dickie talked about Santa Claus, she shook her head sadly.

"You'll just be makin' a mistake to think about it, son," she said. "We can't spare anything for Christmas this year, what with father laid up with rheumatism and not able to work, and me so short of money. And even if we could spare the money, there's no stockings. You know that yourself. Mine are full of holes; the presents would fall through them. And you are barefoot, and so is Mary. Santa Claus would never put anything in a stocking with a hole in it. Now, don't think any more about it, for you're just putting up a disappointment for yourself."

Mother was very sorry for her little boy and girl, but she was obliged to tell them the truth. There was not a whole pair of stockings in the house, and when it was too cold for the children to go to school barefoot, they had to stay at home. So what was the use of talking about hanging up one for Santa Claus, when it would be just as empty in the morning as it was at night? She knew there were tears in Mary's eyes, and that Dickie had hard work to keep his chin from quivering, but she took no notice, only whirled her machine very fast.

The children went into the next room to talk over the situation.

"We can't do without any Christmas at all," said Dickie. "What can we do, Mary? Don't you think Santa Claus will come even if we haven't any stockings to hang up?"

Mary thought a minute.

"In some countries, across the water, the children put their wooden shoes by the hearth, instead of stockings; but we haven't any wooden shoes, either. But you know, Dickie, there isn't really any Santa Claus, mother said, and it means the love in people's hearts, because God loved us so much that He gave His Son to die for us, and He was born a little baby on that day, and so we called it Christmas, and give each other gifts in memory of that great Gift. I guess mother is so sorry she hasn't anything extra to give us, and that is why she talks so sorrowfully. But I was wondering, Dickie, if we couldn't get up something for Christmas, ourselves, and share it with the Jones twins next door. They won't have any Christmas, either, and we must always share ours, you know."

"But we haven't any stockings," persisted Dickie, recurring to the trouble.

"If you could earn a quarter somehow, we could buy two pair at the ten?cent store, and have five cents left over for candy to put in them. And I guess mother will give us an apple apiece; she always does. And we'll share our candy and apples with the Jones twins."

"I wish we could have a tree," said Dickie, his ideas enlarging.

"Maybe we can. We'll look out for any chances to make a little, and I'll try to get a bit of holly for a little tree. I know Mrs. Linton, across the street, would pay me to mind her baby sometimes, while she goes shopping. We'll manage it somehow, I guess."

Under the influence of his sister's hopefulness, Dickie brightened a little; but the hope faded as the wintry days passed. There were not many ways of making money in their neighborhood; it was scarce, and everybody did their own work to save what few pennies they had for their own Christmas expenses. However, in one way or another, by doing errands and saving such pennies as came to them, Mary and Dickie, by the day before Christmas, had succeeded in saving the sum of 25 cents. And clasping the precious coin in his hand, Dickie started for the ten-cent store to make his Christmas purchases.

Mary could not go with him because mother had to go and take home some sewing for which she hoped to be well paid, and Mary must stay with father, keep up the fire and bring him what he needed; but Dickie was not afraid to go alone. The store was not far away, and he had often been there by himself. True, the streets were crowded with people doing their belated Christmas shopping. Everyone looked merry and happy, and Dickie felt in quite a Christmas mood as he scudded along, dodging in and out and under people's arms in his haste.

He reached the store at last, and made his purchases—two pairs of long, roomy hose, and a little paper bag of candy. So pitifully small did it look to the shop-girl that she added an extra handful, paying for it out of her own slender resources, because it was Christmas. Then he left the store, looking very happy with his two precious parcels tightly clasped in his hands.

The street was crowded with cars and other vehicles; people hurried up and down and across; Dickie felt bewildered by the confusion and good-humored din. It was growing dusk, too, and the lights in the store windows made bright Christmas pictures.

He started to cross the street. In the middle a great truck came hurtling toward him; he turned to avoid it, and found himself almost under the wheels of a fast-moving car. If he sprang back, the truck would strike him; perhaps he might cross in front of the car.

Confused, he stood still for an instant. The drivers shouted, a woman screamed. Dickie tried to run—felt a blow—then everything was dark.

He seemed to wake up to find himself lying on the counter in a drug store with several around him. A doctor held his wrist. A lady in beautiful furs bent over him, tears in her eyes.

"See, doctor," Dickie heard her say, "he has roused—he is conscious. Oh, I thought we had killed him! I am so thankful! Can you speak, dear? Tell me your name."

She spoke as tenderly as mother might have done; but Dickie did not answer her. Dazed still, he turned his head weakly, looking for something. "My—my package—my Christmas stockings," he murmured.

"His Christmas stockings! Is he wandering, do you think?" asked the lady anxiously.

A clerk picked up a little parcel from the floor. "Could it be this? He had it tightly clutched in his hand, I noticed, when he was brought in. Maybe he'd been buying a Christmas present for somebody."

Dickie's pale face brightened, and he moved his hand a little. The doctor placed the parcel in it, and he smiled and closed his eyes again, satisfied.

"Is he much hurt, doctor?" the lady asked.

"No, strange to say. The car just grazed him and flung him off. Why he was not killed is one of those things impossible to explain. He is stunned and bruised, but he will be all right in a few days."

"Then I will take him home, if he can tell us where he lives."

With something of an effort Dickie collected his scattered senses enough to tell the street and number; and then he was carefully lifted in the doctor's arms and carried to the big car which stood at the curb, and they were driven to the narrow street and poor little house where Dickie lived.

By the time they arrived he had revived somewhat, and while the lady and the doctor were explaining to mother what had happened, and quieting her fears, Dickie was whispering eagerly to Mary:

"The stockings are all right, Mary! I held on to the parcel when the car knocked me down. The candy's mashed a little, I guess, but it will taste all right!"

So the Christmas which might have been such a sad one was a very happy time, after all. Mary hung up the stockings and put in Dickie's candy, "mashed" though it was, and some apples and oranges which mother had spared pennies enough to buy. It was all she could afford, but in her thankfulness that her boy's life had been spared, she gave it gladly.

When breakfast was over and the children were sharing their candy with the Jones twins, there came the greatest Christmas surprise of their lives. The same big car which had knocked Dickie down, and then brought him home, stopped at the door again, and the driver brought in a great hamper, so big that he could scarcely find a spot to put it down.

"With Mrs. Harwood's best wishes for a merry Christmas, and hoping the little boy is no worse this morning," he said, and was gone almost before they had time to say "Thank you!"

And the things that came out of that hamper would take too long to tell about. Toys, books, a regular Christmas dinner, fruit and candy filling every crevice, and away down at the bottom, half a dozen pair of warm beautiful stockings, of different sizes; and in the toe of each one was a crisp dollar tucked away.

"So we did have Christmas stockings, after all—lots of them!" said Dickie joyfully.

And you may be sure that these good things were shared with the Jones twins, for that is half the fun of Christmas.—J. L. Glover.

A joyous season still we make;
We bring our precious gifts to them,

A GIFT FOR MOTHER

"I have it!" shouted Ed, so unexpectedly that his two brothers and two sisters were quite startled.

Ed was the middle one of the five children, the one who, their mother said, was just like his father, which was about the nicest thing a fellow's mother could say of him, see? Ed was always doing and saying unexpected things.

"What?" demanded four voices, and four pairs of blue eyes looked toward Ed.

"Mother's present!" replied Ed.

"Where?" the others asked.

"Oh, I didn't mean I had it," said Ed. "I have the idea, see?"

"Why don't grown-ups have Santa Claus?" asked Bobby, the youngest.

"They have," explained big sister Doris. "We're Mother's Santa Claus."

Bobby was far from satisfied with this answer, but the others were listening eagerly to Ed, and did not care to talk about Santa Claus.

"You see," Ed was saying, "Mother wants a phonograph. I know she does because she's always going over to Davis' to hear theirs."

"But we can't get her one!" sighed John, the eldest, who was all of 13 years old. "I'd work and buy her one, if I could, but she says she'd ratherI'd help out with my own clothes. As soon as I'm old enough to have a real job I'll buy her one, you bet!"

"Well listen, I've got an idea," said Ed. "We've each made her some little present, and now let's make her a phonograph."

"How?" John asked, patiently.

"Why," replied his brother, "of course, it won't be a real phonograph, but I think she'll be quite pleased and can get along with it until we are big enough to buy her a real one. You know, Doris recites awful well, and you can sing, John; I can play the fiddle. We'll be the music. We must learn a lot of new stuff to surprise her with. But first we have to make a cabinet."

John and Doris understood at once. Ed's idea struck them as very spiffy. They found a large packing box down in the cellar and carried it to the attic where there was a room in which they thought they could work undisturbed.

First, they planed the sides of the box and then sandpapered them, then they got some dark brown paint and painted it. After the paint was dry, they sandpapered once more, and then varnished the box. One side was open, so Doris and sister Kathy made a curtain to hang over it. Another side was chosen as the front of the phonograph. In it, about six inches from the top, John cut out a piece a foot wide and almost as long as the box was wide. Then in the opening they fitted some slats from a crate painted brown, and the box began to look quite like a phonograph.

"Now, let's try it out," said Doris. "John, go inside and sing something."

"But we must have a crank," insisted Ed. "I could makes one out of heavy wire."

John agreed to this, so they made a crank out of thick wire and a knob off a broken table.

Then they were ready for a tryout. John crept inside the cabinet, Ed cranked, meanwhile making a grinding noise. When he stopped, John's voice rang out: "Holy night! Silent night!"

"It's lovely," said Doris, "but your voice isn't whiney enough. Can't you hold your nose or something while you sing?"

"I might do that," agreed John.

"Holy dight! Silded dight!" came in muffled tones from the cabinet.

"That's just like the Davis' phonograph!" cried Ed in delight.

"I'm afraid Mother will find this, and tomorrow's Christmas," said Doris.

"Where can we hide it?" questioned John.

It was too big for ordinary hiding.

"I know," said Ed. "We'll take turns guarding it. Now, John and I have to go out this afternoon to Dillington's hollow and get greens to trim the house, while Mother expects Doris to go to market with her and help carry bundles. So Kathy and Bobby will have to mount guard this afternoon."

Kathy and Bobby were quite willing and made all sorts of very solemn promises to be faithful to their charge.

Kathy brought her box of paper hours, and Bobby, having nobody to scold, got the library paste. He had been longing for a chance to use it and taste it, too. It was cold in the attic, so they both wore sweaters.

Kathy was almost quarreling with Bobby about his wicked ways with the paste, when the front door-bell rang. Both children stayed very quiet. Then the bell rang again. Who could be calling on them?

"Maybe it's a robber," said Bobby, but his sister thought not.

She tried to be brave and stuck her head out of the window. There was a tall, dark-haired man, who did not look like a robber, standing outside. "Who are you and what do you wish?" demanded Kathy.

"Hello!" cried the man. "Are you Doris or Kathy?"

"Kathy," she replied. "I'm sorroy we're on guard and can't let you in, but Mother will be back by five o'clock."

"Oh, please let me in!" cried the man. "I'll help you guard."

Kathy studied the man's upturned face, and somehow she trusted the man. There wasn't any sneakiness or meanness in the face.

"I'm going to let him in," she said to her brother.

"You better not!" cried Bobby, but she went down and let in the stranger.

"Now, show me what you are guarding," he urged. "I'll help you."

Kathy trustfully led the way upstairs to the attic and showed the stranger the wonderful phonograph.

"You see," she explained, "Mother always wanted one and we can't buy her one just now. We will when we grow up. I'll show you how this one works." She whispered to little Bobby. Bobby crept out of sight. Kathy turned the crank saying: "Gr-gr-gr!" in a loud voice.

When she stopped a little voice began: "Holy dight! Silent dight!"

"Wonderful!" cried the man, and clapped his hands and blew his nose, and murmured: "By jinks!" and "Well, well, well;" Then he said he must go.

Kathy went down and let him out, and he made her promise not to tell of his visit. "Christmas is full of secrets," thought the little girl.

It was the best Christmas that ever was! Snow ev where and happy faces and holly, and a Christmas Eve carols.

Of course, there was a little tree, shining bravely with balls, and there was a gift for each one, and the phonograph! Mother's eyes shone when she saw it! John was singing inside when the door-bell rang, and without waiting, someone walked in. It was the stranger! Kathy and Bobby ran to him. So did Mother.

"Why, Brother Phil!" she cried. "What a Christmas to have you here! Children, this is your Daddy's brother!"

"Will two of you please help me get something out of my car?" asked their Uncle.

John and Ed went out with him, and in they soon came carrying a lovely phonograph and a little bunch of records.

That is why Doris never hears a phonograph without thinking of the wonderful Christmas, but though the gift was loved by them all, Mother seemed to have a strange fancy for the other phonograph. When she was seen cranking it up, of course, the "music" had to hustle, and sometimes the children suspected that, after all, she liked the home-made one best, especially when one of her children made a new "record" for her (which was learning something new, of course).—Selected.

SPIRIT OF THE DAY

These new standards, so revolutionary are they, involve the conception of a new life, which we are bidden to believe is the life of God. When, for instance, Christ said, "I am the resurrection and the life," He meant the divine life, the life which He taught us both by precept and example it was our duty to live. So we have the birth, not of a new set of virtues, but of a new life. And with it came, and comes, the power to live it. So the final note is one of victory, victory over ourselves, over all that is selfish and base and dwarfing. The idea may thus be expanded into the thought of the birth of a new race with new ideas and ambitions and hopes and powers, a new race that shall one day measure up to those Christian ideals which now seem so faint and far off, a race with the capacity to live the very life of God, to think God's thoughts after Him. This is true victory of that faith which is to overcome the world, overcome it, not by fighting it, but by loving it; not by the assertion of self, but by surrender of self. Such is the goal, distant though it may be, toward which the Christmas birth points. We talk much about reform, but what do our petty reforms amount to when compared with this divine process of regeneration that is going on all the while in the hearts of men? But to conclude: If we wish to have a really merry Christmas—we must see if we can not get some of the divine spirit, of which it is the manifestation, in our souls. We must try to be kinder and gentler and less selfish, try to cultivate the divinely childish attitude toward life, try to see the spiritual significance of the great truths about which we talk so much, and which apparently influence us so little. Christmas without the spirit of Christmas is not worth saving. And the spirit of Christmas is the spirit of Him whose birth the day commemorates. A merry Christmas can be experienced only by humble, devout and thankful hearts.—Selected.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Kernersville.—The first quarterly conference met at Kernersville Tuesday night, December 6th, with President Taylor in the chair. Before entering into the general routine of business he gave us a splendid talk on, Love for the Church and love for one another, giving us the Apostle Paul as an example.

The following churches were represented: Kernersville, Ai, and Sandy Ridge. 25 Centenary M. P. Hymnals have been bought for the Kernersville church. Recommedations including our duty towards our Children's Home, our College, finances, including the Every Member Canvas, literature, and evangelism, made by the pastor were endorsed by the quarterly conference. This brought greater hope and encouragement to both President and pastor, and I further believe, being a blessing to the entire charge. The next quarterly conference goes to Sandy Ridge.

Trusting that love to God, love for one another, with a deep abiding desire to point sinners to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, shall be our our aim and leading purpose throughout the entire year, I am, E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

Antioch, Mecklenburg Charge.—We extend to our former pastor and wife, Rev. W. T. Totten, our love and many thanks for their services rendered us the past year. May they have much success in their new work.

And we extend to our new pastor and family, Rev. W. C. Hall, a hand of welcome, and we feel very fortunate indeed in having him as our pastor. He has given us two fine sermons and I believe they are enough to convince us we have a man who can build up our work if the people will stand by him and do as he teaches.

Our Sunday school is still moving along. We have a faithful few.

Our first quarterly meeting will be held at our church next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Hope all churches will be represented in full. MRS. MAE MATTHEWS.

First Church, Concord.—A splendid meeting which has been in progress at our church during the last week came to a close last night. Our pastor was very fortunate in having as his help Rev. N. G. Bethea of Lexington, Mr. Bethea did some splendid preaching and as a result there have been several conversions and reclamations. Our people are always delighted to have Mr. Bethea come our way.

All the Sunday services were well attended. There being 250 in Sunday school. Mr. Bethea spoke to the young people's class of which D. A. McLaurin is teacher, during the class period, there were sixty young men and women present and all enjoyed the message which was a challenge to the young life of the church to be men and women with stability, purpose and high ideals.

At both morning and evening hour he brought inspiring messages to good crowds.

On last Thursday afternoon all circles of the missionary society met in a joint meeting with Mr. R. C. Brown at her home on Kerr street; new officers were elected for the new year after which Mr. Bethea spoke to us for a short while on the condition of Moslem women in the near East as seen by him on his recent visit.

On next Sunday we are having a formal opening of our splendid new Sunday school building, Prof P. E. Lindley of High Point College and some of the students will be with us, also a quartette from Davidson college. We cordially invite you to worship with us at this time.

The condition of Brother Braswell remains unchanged. Mr. Braswell is confined to his bed all the time now in a critical condition.

MRS. D. A. McLAURIN.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Rev. C. G. Isley's sermon last Sunday was forceful and practical and I am sure if we will apply some of the things he said to our own lives we will be greatly strengthened.

Two new members were received into the church, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Beavers from the First M. E. Church, Siler City. We are certainly glad to have these people unite with us.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely. We had a good attendance and much interest is manifested in the Christmas program which is to be rendered on Friday night, December 23. Plans were also made to have a treat for the Sunday school.

Some of our people attended quarterly conference at Piney Grove Saturday. They reported a good meeting. It was decided to set a "goal" for a hundred new members for this conference year. We hope that we may reach this goal and "go over the top."

I am wishing all the readers of the Herald a merry Christmas and a happy new year.

KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Pleasant Grove.—Superintendent Teague is very busy getting ready for our Christmas entertainment. Rough weather the first Sunday has delayed his work, but we are expecting a successful program.

Mr. Bud Kennedy, who has been in a High Point Hospital for several weeks, has returned to his home. We trust that he may soon be fully well.

The funeral service of Jacob A. Burton held last Sunday at his home near High Point, was largely attended.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its December meet in the home of Brother Walter Burton. Nearly $20.00 cash was taken in by the members. Mrs. J. E. Veach and Mrs. Will Newly gave their names for membership. At the close, Mrs. Burton served refreshments to the delight of the large number of ladies present. This plate, if prepared and served in a hotel, would have cost a dollar or more, Mrs. Burton gave evidences of knowing how to delight and entertain the ladies of her church. Brother Burton also delighted all with some select music on the graphophone.

GEORGE L. REYNOLDS.

Bethesda, Halifax Circuit.—We had a pretty good congregation out today—second Sunday—and Mr. Spencer gave us a good sermon, stressing work, co-operation and prayer. After the sermon he called on Mrs. Neville, late delegate to conference, for some remarks. She expressed herself quite earnestly as having been greatly impressed by the conference proceedings—the inspiring addresses and the reports showing the great and varied work being done by the church, as well as the need for more funds and workers. These things she said she had never fully realized before. She was much pleased, too, with a visit to the Children's Home and to High Point College, in company with "Jerry" Hardy, a former pupil of hers. She is proud of these fine institutions and "gladder than ever before that she is a Methodist Protestant."

The woman's organization (combination Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society) is working to raise money for some needed repairs on the church building. They have taken in some by a rummage sale and some by voluntary contributions from the members. This is a new organization here and has hardly gotten into full swing as yet.

The Harrison family are rejoicing over a little grandson, N. M. Harrison the third, son of Rev. and Mrs. N. M. Harrison.

Mrs. M. J. Hunter, one of the oldest members here, who is spending the winter with her children in Wilmington, had a fall recently and is laid up for a while with an injured hip. REPORTER.

Harris Chapel, Vance Circuit.—Sunday morning our pastor, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, filled his appointment here at the usual hour. He gave us a wonderful message on "Consider How Great Things He Hath Done For You," from 1 Samuel 12:24. An unusually large congregation, including many visitors, was present.

The church will be open from one to three-thirty o'clock Sunday afternoon, December 18th. All members are requested to call and make their financial pledge for support of church for 1928.

There was no Sunday school on 4th or 11th; the former service being abandoned on account of severe weather, the latter on account of (?) This will never do. "A good example is better than ten precepts." Let us be on time hereafter.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Clark with their two little sons, who have been making their home in Canada for several years, are here for the holidays. We are glad to have them with us.

We regret to report that Mrs. J. E. Burroughs of Dabney is confined to her bed and Mrs. Nuckols of Dabney, continues sick and unable to be with us. Our hearts go in sympathy to these dear loyal workers and we wish for them a speedy recovery.

With compliments of the season to the Herald family, I am, REPORTER.

Asheboro.—Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely, we have good attendance each Sunday. The Worker's Council meets Monday evening at 7:30 for its monthly business meeting. We find these meetings are very helpful in making plans for the Sunday school. The eleven o'clock hour was communion and instead of having a sermon, the pastor made a few remarks concerning the last hours Christ spent on earth interspersed by appropriate hymns. This was an impressive service.

A class of children from the M. P. Children's Home came down for the Vesper Service and presented a grand program to a large congregation. There have been several programs given in our church by these children and this one was one of the best and sweetest that we have ever heard. The families brought their boxes full of good eats and after the program, the children were invited to the social room where they joined in and enjoyed the dinner hour.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Woman's Home Missionary Society will have a joint meeting Monday at 3 p.m. This is the Annual Christmas Meeting.

At the mid-week services the pastor is teaching "The Worker and His Bible" which is very interesting. Mr. Pritchard taught this subject at the Young People's Summer Conference at High Point this past Summer.

With best wishes to all,

EXIE CALICOTT, Reporter.

Randleman Charge.—We had a very interesting quarterly conference last Saturday at Level Cross. Every church was repreesnted. A change in appointments was made. Mount Lebanon was given the first and third Sundays at 11 a. m. and New Salem the afternoon of the same day at 2:30.

This pastor has not been pounded as some who report poundings. Our people have not come in a body, but numerous individuals have been generous in their contributions. Brother Julius Hanner has contributed regularly to our pantry throughout our ministry here. Mrs. K. G. Coltrane, Mr. T. E. Marley, Mrs. Will Vickory, Mrs. Roddy Fields, Mrs. C. D. Harden, Mrs. Bob Dosier, Mrs. Emma Gray and Mrs. Atrhur Ferree recently remembered us singly, but generously.

Worthville and Salem are getting ready for a Christmas service. We predict a good service at each place. This writer was present yesterday at Worthville Sunday school and heard the appointment of committees by Superintendent A. R. Grace. Nearly everybody, it seemed, was given something to do, and no one objected or wanted to be excused.

The only way to pull a load is for all to pull together, and all pull the right way.

W. H. NEESE.

Denton.—Our new pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham, preached for us here the first Sunday in December. Although the weather was very unfavorable, there was a very good crowd present. Brother Bingham preached a fine sermon. After preaching service there were fifteen new members received into the church, six of these coming from the M. E. Church, South. We are expecting more to join us later.

We certainly are well pleased with our new pastor and family. We believe that if the people on this work will do their part that there is no reason why we should not have a very successful year.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the leadership of Bro. R. C. Powell. There seems to be a fine spirit of co-operation. We are hoping and praying for a good year's work. A MEMBER.

Oak Grove, Forsyth Circuit.—Last second Sunday, the pastor, Brother Stubbins, preached at 3 o'clock. The "order of the day" is to be at Oak Grove on the fourth Sunday in each month at 11 o'clock—also each fith Sunday at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The arrangement is by choice of the congregation. The preaching is good, and the interest is good.

It is very much necessary for those who have influence to urge for better keeping of the Sabbath day. Modern means of fast travel bring great advantage, but there is too much "fast travel" on the Sabbath day.

Preaching and teaching, urging for the sacred interests of the Sabbath day, is very much needed.

The sacred services at the church are very much needed, and there is lots of literature for home use. The Bible teaching is that we need to be occupied week and Sunday. "Human Life" is wonderfully interesting, if we will do our part in making it so.

A man, a member of a certain church, intimated that he was not needed at the Sunday school, since he did not help, but the urging is that he and all go—and encourage by being "on hand." Careless appearance make bad influence. Every child has need to hear the preaching, and to get all the sacred teaching possible. Every home needs a religious paper. Safe teaching is that we do much reading, and the sacred is needed first—hence the need of a church paper in every family. Most of families have a Bible, but how about the reading? W. F. GRABS.

Charlotte, First Church.—On next Sunday morning the Sunday school will render a service entitled, "White Gifts for the King." Sunday evening the choir will give their Christmas cantata, "King All Glorious," by Nolte; Mrs. W. A. Neal, pianist and director.

Capt. A. M. Rankin, of High Point, was operated on here in Charlotte Sanatorium last week. His condition at present seems somewhat improved.

Several of our members are sick. We hope they may soon be well and back with us.

The first quarterly conference met November 23. The following goals were accepted:

1. Every church member reading the Bible and praying daily.
2. Larger number visiting the sick and careless ones of our church.
3. Giving more time to personal work for the winning of souls to Christ.
4. Every member contributing regularly and proportionately.
5. Praying for and supporting our own institutions.
6. Every member subscribing for our church papers.
7. Liquidation of debts and the building of a parsonage as directed by the annual church meeting.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society met the fourth Tuesday evening with Mrs. Surratt. After the devotionals the business was presided over by Mrs. L. M. Harward, the new president. Next was the little auction sale, then Mrs. Surratt brought out serving materials. The Home Society took Vera Garmon, of the Children's Home, to clothe.

The Woman's Foreign Misisonary Society will meet the 27th of December.

The Ladies' Aid met the first Monday. All were pleased with results of the bazaar. This month they will sell Christmas cards and cakes.

We had a number of visitors in our church last Sunday. We are always glad to welcome them.

A committee will prepare a program and Christmas tree for the children of the Sunday school to be given Friday evening the 23rd.

REPORTER.

Fairfield.—We are very glad indeed to have with us Rev. E. G. Cowan as pastor for another year. On December 11, at 11 a. m. he brought us an interesting message on the subject, "The Divine Cross." After the service the first quarterly conference was held. Again he brought us another interesting message at 7 p. m. He and his family spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McConnell. Their presence was greatly enjoyed.

Our Sunday school is doing very well now and we hope that it will hold out during the entire winter. So, friends, let's co-operate with each other and our pastor and carry on the work.

(Miss) MARGIE McCONNELL.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.—Our new pastor, Brother Crutchfield, preached his first sermon for us Sunday morning. A large congregation was present and enjoyed the splendid sermon preached. The main thought of this sermon was,"Lay not thy hand upon the lad."

The first quarterly conference was held at Littleton Tuesday, December 13, 1927.

We haven't planned for a Christmas tree and program this time. There will be one at the schoolhouse December 19, and it would be right much work on the children to have one at both places. REPORTER.

High Point.—A delightful supper and get-together meeting was enjoyed by the Workers' Council of the Sabbath school on December 5th. There was first a business meeting when teachers and superintendents of departments were elected. Rev. P. E. Lindley and Mrs. H. W. Maier, of Thomasville, were after-dinner speakers, and they delivered entertaining and helpful addresses. Twenty-eight members of the council attended this enjoyable affair. Superintendent E. L. Ballard was the general manager, and spared no pains to insure its success.

A very interesting and harmonious quarterly conference was held Wednesday evening. Rev. E. Lester Ballard presided. Good reports were heard from many of the different organizations of the church.

The bazaar and chicken supper at the Children's Home was well attended. The fancy articles of crochet, embroidery, and the like, which were made by the girls, were unusually pretty, and a delicious supper of chicken pie, vegetables, salad, ice cream, cake, and coffee was served at 50 cents per plate. A number of out-of-town people from Greensboro, Asheboro, Kernersville, Jamestown, Thomasville, and other nearby towns were in attendance. A goodly sum of approximately $200 was realized. Mrs. D. A. Neese deserves much credit for her efficient work as general chairman.

Dr. S. K. Spahr was greeted by a large and attentive congregation on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, when he delivered a very timely sermon on "The Call to the Ministry," the text being taken from Matt. 4:19: "I will make you fishers of men." He deplored the fact that the church as never before is suffering from a dearth of ministers, not only in our own denomination, but others as well throughout the country. It amounts to a most serious condition, which confronts the religious world today. Dr. Spahr thinks there are a great many men and women in business who ought to be in the ministry, and some ministers would make better success out in the business world. He thoroughly believes in a call to the ministry, and it is twofold. In the first place, He calls men who are specially endowed physically and intellectually—then He calls them in a still, small voice—in a special way as He did Saul of Tarsus, who exclaimed, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." He is whispering and calling men these days, but the sounds of the world, its allurements of ease and wealth are inviting them with such a loud voice that the wooings of the Holy Spirit are drowned. Dr. Spahr thinks that the ministry is a great sporting proposition, and has a feeling of mystery underlying it. What a great thing it is to cast nets to catch men! And the reward is great. What a splendid thing to see a man saved under your ministry! What is there in all the world more appealing to the young man? Of course, a large number of them think that they can make more money in business or the professions, but it would be very unfortunate for a young man to know that he can command a better salary as a minister, and enter this sacred profession for gain and thus desecrate it.

Dr. Spahr thinks that ministers are the best financiers in the world, for they have the happy faculty of making a dollar go a long way and on meager salaries they feed, clothe and educate their families. Then ministers enjoy the best association and fellowship, and their calling is an "open sesame" to the best homes and families of the community. Most men enjoy the sacrifice and its reward; the happy consciousness that comes from "duties well performed and days well spent."

At the evening service the message was brought by Rev. Paul S. Kennett, of High Point College, who spoke on "The Parable of the Mustard Seed." Professor Kennett is quite a favorite with our people, and they always hear him most gladly.

On Monday afternoon the Ladies' Aid Society held its December meeting in the attractive new home of Mrs. H. U. Oakes, with Mrs. George Penny as associate hostess.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. McPherson on the arrival in their home of a young son on December 2. He will bear the name of Fred W., Jr.

We are pained to announce the serious illness of Dr. A. A. York, who has an attack of influenza, but he showed some improvement yesterday (Monday). His hosts of friends are wishing for him an early recovery.

Capt. A. M. Rankin, who is so well and favorably known throughout the state, underwent a serious operation in Charlotte last Tuesday, but rallied splendidly, and is improving satisfactorily. Mrs. Rinkin, who has been at his bedside, came home Friday, but plans to return to Charlotte Tuesday.

The Christmas entertainment for the Sunday school will be given Friday evening, December 23rd.

Mrs. John L. Ogburn, of Summerfield, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. S. S. Blackburn.

Lineberry, Davidson Charge.—Owing to the extreme bad weather, we had no service at our church Sunday, December 4, but a fairly good attendance last Sunday and Sunday night.

The talks given by our pastor and others were very uplifting, especially the talk given by our Sunday school superintendent, A. H. Reid, his subject being "My Life's Purpose." It was very uplifting to all; we are indeed glad that we have a man in our midst like Brother Reid.

Death has again entered into our church and taken away one of our oldest members, Mr. W. T. Morris; he died December 7 and was buried the 8th at Lineberry. He had reached the ripe age of 76 years; he was a regular attendant at his church until about two or three years ago when sickness prevented him from attending. The writer being a grandson of the deceased, is saddened by his death, but will never forget the counsel and good advice that dear Grandpa gave me and also the sweet encouragement to live on and serve the Lord; but through the sadness and sorrow, by the help of Almighty God, I want to pattern by the life he has lived before me.

The family thank all the neighbors and friends for their faithfulness and kindness through the sickness and death of this one. He was a kind and loving father and husband.

We are plannisg on having a Christmas tree at our church on Saturday before Christmas, but will have no exercise.

As this will be the last report from this church this year, we wish all a Merry Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Christian people, pray for us that we may accomplish much more in the future than we have in the past, as we all feel very weak and need your prayers.

ROBERT LANIER, Reporter.

Burlington, First Church.—It is not a happy experience to break away from a group of church people with whom you have worked for a number of years and whom you have learned to love. It was with the deepest regret that we left the Calvary people, but circumstances seemed to justify the change. When the matter was left in the hands of the stationing committee, and we had prayed that the Lord might direct in the matter, we felt that we could do no more than abide by the decision of the committee. And I would not have this statement interpreted to mean that it was not altogether agreeable with me to come to Burlington. I tried to make it clear to the committee that I would abide by their decision. I have never worked with a finer group of people than those at the Calvary church. Brother Bates is to be congratulated on being their pastor. The church is also to be congratulated on having Brother and Sister Bates as their leaders and coworkers. May God richly bless and prosper the work at Calvary.

The separation from such fine friends and co-laborers as we had at Calvary is compensated for in the making of new friends and in the finding of such splendid workers as we have found here in the Burlington church. We are sure that we are among fine people. One thing especially that commends thes people to me is the high esteem in whic they held their former pastor, Brother Tay lor, and his family. It speaks well for th people as well as for the retiring pastor whe they have only words of appreciation an commendation for him. Brother Taylor di a great work here and was appreciated an loved by both our own church people and th people of the city generally.

We arrived on Thursday, November 18th just about noon, to find that some of th ladies had prepared a bounteous dinner at th hut for the retiring pastor and family an for the incoming pastor and family and fo evangelists who were holding the meeting This thoughtfulness on the part of the goo women is deeply appreciated.

The day after we arrived the painter ar rived, too, and for three weeks kept us mov ing from room to room while he proceeded to beautify the interior of the parsonage This has added greatly to the appearance o the parsonage and will add also to the com fort of pastor and family. This improvemen is also appreciated. The ladies have not only had the house painted inside but have added new shades to most of the windows. We ar now comfortably located and shall be glad to have our friends, both in Burlington and from elsewhere to call to see us.

I have not preached since coming here This is due to the fact that an evangelistic meeting, which had been previously planned began in our church and ran for five weeks closing last Sunday night. There were some thing like 120 professions, the majority o whom were re-consecrations. Twenty-five have given their names for membership in our church, and a few for other churches Those for our church will be received nex Sunday. Many who read this already know Rev. W. J. Ramsey as an earnest, consecrated evangelistic singer. For 36 years he ha given himself to this kind of work, singing for and with some of the leading evangelists of America. John C. Cowell, Jr., the preaching evangelist of the party, is not so well known. He was converted less than five years ago while the Ham-Ramsey evangelistic party was holding a meeting in Fayetteville, N. C He has been preaching less than four years and yet he is a preacher of far more than average ability and power. If anyone is looking for a party to hold a union meeting or a meeting in an individual church you doubtless could not do better than communicate with Rev. W. J. Ramsey, Wilson, N. C. He will be glad to arrange a date with you.

I will hold my first service next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. At the evening hour we are hoping to have Rev. F. L. Gibbs with us. Brother Gibbs is one of First Church's own boys, and we are expecting a large congregation to hear him. All are invited but the young people especially are urged to come.

We have received a cordial welcome from the Burlington people and we are happy to be their pastor. It shall be our purpose to endeavor to so lead and labor here that the good record of the First Methodist Protestant church of Burlington shall not be less commendable in the future than it has been in the past.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.
603 E. Davis St., Burlington, N. C.

State Street, Lexington.—Our congregations ve been the best since Conference of the ree years pastorate here. Our Sunday hool numbered 119 last Sunday. Our anksgiving offering for the Children's Home nounted to $71.06 which is our record offer- g. We are starting out this year with the pe of making all our work outstrip any pre- ous year.

The ladies recently had an oyster supper hich was the first; the public were not invit- l as they wished to experiment with our own embership. A most enjoyable occasion and 0.25 was made clear of all expenses. Since ding themselves there is every assurance w that they will work this on a bigger scale.

Since last report we have been given sub- antial donations by the following: Mr. and rs. J. W. Lindsay, Mrs. J. F. Burkheart, Mrs. H. Evans, Mrs. J. B. Hayworth, Mrs. H. C. gers, Mrs. F. J. Cox, and H. S. Lanier.

From Yadkin College, Miss Cora Totten, rs. Davis, Mrs. Dale, Miss Sallie Taylor, Mr. atthews and Mrs. Younts.

Would like to mention varities given, but it as all the way from a nice young rabbit, om one to ten varities of can goods, from other which shows it was worthwhile. If y names have been omitted it is not inten- nal.

We now have a Junior Christian Endeavor ciety led by Miss Pauline Lowe. They meet the Beginners' Sunday school room at the me hour the Seniors meet in the assembly om.

We have a Junior choir also which has led e songs in the church services now for two nday evenings. The children take a great ide in that.

Our hope here for a strong church in the ture is in the children and we are doing our st for them. Our financial strength has not creased much since our organization, but we e hoping that from these boys and girls a rong, useful church will grow. Will you ay for us, please, and when one of your M. 's move here tell us about it.

Sincerely,
N. G. BETHEA.

Ebonezer, Greensville Circuit.—We are anning to have a Christmas program. Miss dy Clements, Mrs. Susie Bradley have the ogram in charge.

We still are having Sunday school and hop- g to have larger attendance. We are extra ld to have a good pastor like Brother well. This is his fifth year and we are aying that it will be the most wonderful ar that he has been with us.

Don't forget to attend our Christmas pro- am.

RENA ROOK, Reporter.

Reidsville.—Well, I just happened to call to nd a few other things that Will Rogers, the eat lasso artist, doesn't know, because he sn't read them in the papers. The reason hasn't read them is due to the fact that ey haven't been published. I do not suppose will read about them now, unless he sub- ribes for the Herald. Possibly he would do if he knew how informing the publication

For instance, he would learn—that there a Methodist Protestant Church, and that she s been doing business at the same old stand r a hundred years, and that great prepara- ns are being made to celebrate her one ndredth birthday in Baltimore next May, and that he would do himself proud and en- dear himself to a mighty fine lot of people if he made a donation of an even thousand dol- lars to our Gratitude Fund.

—that this Methodist Protestant Church is the leaven hid away in the great lump of American Methodism that has been leavening it for a century, and that the lump has grown more like the leaven with each passing quad- rennium.

—that the new furnishings in our Begin- ner's room in the Reidsville church were do- nated by Mrs. S. J. Kernodle in precious mem- ory of her little daughter who died in infancy.

—that the Primary class room has been fur- nished throughout as a memorial to the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther C. McCollum who died several years ago. This has been done by the father and mother, the grandfather and grandmother and aunts.

—that the entire membership of the church and Sunday school are profoundly grateful to these good friends for these much needed fur- nishings.

—that Mrs. Kernodle's Sunday school class has had a beautiful sign made and placed on the front of the church, enabling all who pass up Lindsay street to know when they come to the First Methodist Protestant Church.

—that it snowed under the inhabitants ofour little city two Sundays ago, and that a few— a very few—of our members dug out in time to attend church.

—that little Robert Dixon Reed, who came to make his permanent home with our Super- intendent, C. R. Reed and wife, has been added to our Cradle Roll.

—that the Philathea class, taught by Scout Executive "Country" Gorman, is clothing a child at our Children's Home.

—that the preachers in our conference never preach anything but "powerful sermons," ac- cording to the reporters to the Herald.

—that this is about all the information Will can stand at one time.

GEORGE R. BROWN.

Forsyth Charge.—After a long and hard journey from Halifax county to Forsyth county we are at last in our new home. The people have been good to us. It started be- fore we moved in and has not grown slack. Our reception at the parsonage was a warm one. We found a number of the Maple Springs ladies in charge. A delightful dinner was on the table and we later found a gener- ous supply of things to eat in the pantry and chicken coop. We do not know the donors but love them just the same. The way the peoples have responded to every need made known has been beautiful and surprising. The parsonage has lately received an excellent oil cook stove; a large Sunbeam circulator heater for the living room that heats the en- tire house; new shades to all windows, a library table, hall-rack, rocker and some other things. The interior of the parsonage has been painted in pleasing shades of color.

Different churches are taking rooms at the parsonage to keep filled with the heavy fur- niture. Maple Springs has chosen the kitchen. Hickory Ridge the living room, Mt. Carmel a bed room—the other two churches have not selected their rooms yet. We think this an interesting arrangement and doubtless a good plan for many rural charges, as very few pas- tors move heavy furniture in these days.

Christmas entertainments are in prepara- tion at four of our churches and other signs of progress are in evidence over the charge.

It looks like we have found a responsive people and we shall do our best while on this charge and expects the best from our members and look forward for a good year in the King- dom of our Lord.

R. C. STUBBINS.

Democrat Church.—It has been some little bit since we have reported from here. We are getting along very well and have our same preacher this year. We were glad for him to come back.

I don't suppose that we will have any Sun- day school or mid-week prayer meeting this winter.

Rev. H. W. Bell will fill his same appoint- ments as usual.

Best wishes.

REPORTER.

Calvary, Greensboro.—The church failed to elect a reporter when the other officers were elected, so it becomes my duty until the church has some one to tell the news, to make some sort of a report of what is going on.

The new preacher, all unexpected to himself and the members of the church, occupied the pulpit for the first time the third Sunday in November, and was met with a hearty recep- tion that made him glad the Stationing Com- mittee had placed him at Calvary. It is good to be back among so many of the members of a former pastorate in this city, and to serve a church so thoroughly united and aggressive that one has only to suggest plans to see them in process of being carried out.

On Tuesday following our arrival, the mem- bers paid a visit to the parsonage leaving us the largest donation we have ever received. And bringing not only gifts for the material man but such expressions of friendliness and good-will that we felt like saying with the Psalmist, "My lot is cast in pleasant places; I have a goodly heritage." Since then other gifts have some in, and others have given us to understand that they share the same sen- timent.

We have held our first quarterly confer- ence, which was a delightful occasion, indi- cating a willingness to fall in with any sug- gestions the preacher might make for the carrying on of the work. My predecessor left the charge in such splendid condition that much that is to be done is already in process. I have but to take up where he left off.

No church in the conference, I am per- suaded, has a finer outlook than this one, and I feel myself fortunate to be assigned here. We are hoping, pastor and people, to make this the best year in Calvary's history.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Lovett

William Albert, son of the late Colon and Louella Hammer Lovett, was born at Graham in Alamance county, North Carolina, on October 10, 1886, and departed this life November 14, 1927. When Brother Lovett was about grown his father died and from that time on he shared with his mother the responsibility of home and of caring for the other members of the family. When he was quite a young man the family moved to Asheboro where he found employment and where he began a useful career. For some years he kept books in the office of a Roller Mill, always doing his work with the utmost care and precision. During the Presidency of Woodrow Wilson Brother Lovett held a position with the Internal Revenue Department of the government. It's a compliment to the young man to say that he was one of the two men to be retained in the office at Raleigh for the first two years of the administration of President Harding, he having such perfect knowledge of the work that it was felt that he was needed to instruct others. For four years he was a Deputy to the Clerk of the Superior Court of Randolph County and in the last election was elected Clerk of the Superior Court, taking office just the past December. As a county officer he was true to the trust and took great delight in his work.

In 1923 Brother Lovett professed saving faith in Jesus Christ as a personal Savior and united with the Asheboro Methodist Protestant Church during the pastorate of Rev. H. F. Fogleman. As a Christian and a church member he took the matter seriously. He was a teacher of boys in the Sunday school and never did more conscientious work than when preparing to teach his class. His boys were fond of him and he was fond of them. He was recently elected a Steward in the church and had expressed himself to a number of people as having appreciated the responsibility of the place and said he expected to do his best to live up to the responsibility of the office.

As has already been stated in the Herald his last Sabbath on earth was a busy one. He taught his class of boys, stayed for the morning church service, came back to the evening service, assisted in taking the offering, went home and described the sermon to his mother and sisters and talked freely about the religious life. The next day he was in an automobile accident, was severely injured, was taken to the Hospital at Hamlet and lived only about twenty minutes. But in that short time he sent word to his mother that all was well.

Surely no finer young man has lived among us. He is survived by his mother who is a daughter of the late Rev. W. C. Hammer, three sisters, Misses Mittie, Ethel and Lucy Lee, three brothers, Clarence and Marvin of Asheboro and Carey of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a host of friends and more distant relatives. The funeral was held in the Asheboro Methodist Protestant Church on the afternoon of November 16 and was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. T. M. Johnson, D. D., Rev. G. F. Millaway, Rev. H. F. Fogleman and Rev. B. C. Reavis of the Asheboro M. E. Church.

Some citizen of the town remarked that it was the most largely attended funeral ever held in Asheboro. There was hardly a town between Raleigh and Charlotte that was not represented. Clerks of the Superior Court from various counties as well as men in all the walks of life came to pay their respects to their friend. The floral offerings surpassed anything that has been seen here, there being one hundred and forty-six designs. The Governor of North Carolina, in sending his sympathy to the family, expressed the feelings of all who knew this splendid young man when he said, "I regarded him as one of the finest young men of the state and one of the best Clerks of the Superior Court in the state." While it is hard to give him up yet we feel that his fine Christian character will shine throughout the endless ages of eternity and that the growth in grace here was only a preparation for the enjoyment of the larger life yonder. The family have the deepest sympathy of the entire community.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

Pierce

Polly Pierce departed this life November 21, 1927, at the age of 63 years, seven months, and 21 days.

She was united in marriage to W. T. Pierce February 16, 1881. To this union were born seven children.

Mrs. Pierce is survived by her husband, six children, 33 grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends. In early life she was converted and joined the church, and lived a consistent member until her death.

During her sickness she repeatedly said, "I am ready to go, there isn't anything in my way. Don't grieve after me; I'll be better off. I have a better place than here."

Mrs. Pierce was a friend to all, and ever ready to lend a helping hand to the sick and needy. Her favorite song was, "In a Land Where We Will Never Grow Old."

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. G. W. Andrew with Rev. Mr. Harris of Trinity assisting, at Mt. Pleasant, her home church at three o'clock, Tuesday, November 22.

Mrs. Mary Jane Sharpe

This good woman was released from the weakness and pain of the flesh October 21, being more than 86 years old. The evening of her life was peaceful and she departed in the triumph of the Christian faith, loved by all who knew her. For more than fifty years Mrs. Sharpe was a loyal member of Mt. Hermon Church, Mt. Hermon Circuit, and was known by the writer all his life.

Mrs. Sharpe is survived by two sons, Edgar and Eusebius, her husband preceding her to the grave about a year ago. Two brothers, H. G. and Alson Sharpe, also survive.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carrol, the writer and Rev. S. W. Taylor conducted the funeral at Mt. Hermon October 29. Her body was then laid to rest in the nearby cemetery.

Welch

Friday morning, November 11th, at 8 o'clock the spirit of Mrs. Lyda P. Welch took its flight from labor to reward.

Sister Welch was born in Davidson county June 15th, 1845. She was one of the bes known women in this section. In early lif she accepted Christ and joined Spring Hil Methodist Protestant church near High Point She remained a member of this church til God said it is enough. Just one week befor her death the writer conducted funeral ser vices for her son, Barney M. Welch. W thought Sister Welch looked feeble then bu we did not think the end so near.

Surviving are, one son, A. L. Welch, on daughter, Mrs. John Blair, two brothers, Joh W. and Sanford Welborn, and one sister, Mis Elizabeth Welborn, all of High Point.

Funeral services were held by the writer a Spring Hill church where the deceased was member.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved one They have our sympathy in this hour of sor row.

FROM WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Brennial Convention of the Anti-Saloon League is a wonderful gathering—

That President Coolidge came out so unequivocally for enforcement, greatly cheered the hearts of all delegates—and his splendid stand was duly recognized.

Bishop Cannon successfully flayed the idea that any wet candidate of any party could carry the South.

The fraternization of Democrats and Republicans—north and south—is hearty and sincere. They will not allow such problems as the tariff to disturb their combination against liquor.

All denominations, including Roman Catholics, have representatives here. It is recognized that there is hard work ahead, but the claim is made by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Loman and Commissioner Doran that progress is being made. So say we all.

PRESIDENT PLANS TRIP TO CUBA

President Coolidge is planning to go to Cuba in January, to be present at the opening of the sixth Pan American Congress, which begins, at Havana, January 16. He plans to go by train from Washington to Key West, Fla., and from Key West to Havana on the battleship Texas. He will call on President Machedo, of Cuba, and will deliver an address before the congress. However, he will not remain in Havana longer than two days, as he feels that, with Congress in session, he should not be away from Washington any longer than is necessary. Mrs. Coolidge, Secretary of State Kellogg, Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, and most of the U. S. delegates to the congress will accompany him to Havana.

"HE CARRIED THE LAMBS IN HIS BOSOM"

Louella C. Poole

Of all the pictures of our Lord,
The one I like the best
Is that where as a shepherd kind
He holds against His breast
A tender little snow-white lamb
That in His arms finds rest.

Naught speaks to me more of His love,
So infinite and deep,
That could in others' joys rejoice,
With others' sorrows weep,
Than this, where in His arms He holds
That tiny baby sheep.

TURKEY'S FIRST CENSUS

The Republic of Turkey has a population of about 14 million, according to the latest census, the first real government census ever taken in that country. When Turkey was governed by Sultans nobody seemed to care about the population. President Kemal, who has just been re-elected, wants to know how many people there are in his republic. He set aside last October 28 as the day on which the census was to be taken. On that day all persons in Turkey were required to remain in their homes from five in the morning until five in the afternoon while 50,000 government officials took the census.

The figures show that Constantinople, the largest city and former capital of Turkey, has a population of about 850,000. Angora, the new capital, has a population of 75,000.—Current Events.

WHEN TOBACCO MEN TALK STAIGHT

Will H. Brown

A well known tobacco organ eulogizes smoking as a "social equalizer," and says that it makes every one in a group of smokers feel at ease, whether conversation proceeds or not, adding:

"The pipe draws wisdom from the lips of the philosopher and shuts up the mouth of the fool."

No evidence supporting either situation appears in the editorial mentioned. But then, the writer was attempting to defend smoking. "A poor excuse is"—worse than none, in this case.

It is when tobacco men talk straight that the reading public gets something to think about. When committeemen called upon the president of one of the biggest tobacco companies in the United States for a subscription to a fund with which to fight anti-tobacco propaganda, they received a shock. According to Good Health magazine, the official had himself given up the use of tobacco, and had been greatly helped by such action. In telling a friend of the request of the committee he said: "I told the committee I would not give a cent for any such purpose; that the people have a right to know the EVIL EFFECTS OF TOBACCO."

Another tobacco man of note—Mr. Duke, deceased—when asked how it happened he did not smoke, said to his physician: "When I invented 'Duke's Mixture,' I tried it myself, and it made me so awful sick I have never smoked since. I believe I am entitled to credit for having hindered a great many boys from learning the tobacco habit by being made so very sick by the first attempt."

HUNTER'S LIFE SAVED BY DOG

Lucile Friese

It pays to be kind to dumb animals.

The life of Patrick Welch, of Bend, Oregon, was saved by his faithful sheep dog which carried a blood-stained glove to a camp three miles distant and led a searcher back into the hills. Welch had gone there to hunt, and his riffle was accidentally discharged, the bullet ranging through his hip. Unable to walk he tied his glove, covered with his own blood, to the dog's neck. The dog ran to camp and brought the herder back to where Welch lay, bleeding to death.

The dog walked beside the horse which carried his master for twelve hours through snow-swept hills to the hospital. Welch will get well. The dog saved his life.

The Challenge of This Present Christmas Season

What the first Christmas season meant each succeeding Christmas may be expected to mean. The first Christmas ushered in life—life such as the world had not seen before, life perfect in all the attributes of true human life. In that life was beauty, not the cold beauty of a gem, but a beauty flaming with love and warming the hearts of all that looked upon it. There was the unprecedented beauty of perfect devotion to God. It was a life that called down from Heaven repeated words of approval. It was also a life full of love to mankind. Even the vileness of men, the sinfulness of men, the wickedness of men, did not prevent that love or exclude its operation. It was a life that gave itself to the service of men in ways humble as well as ways high. It was a life that sought out men to help them, a life that "went about doing good." Not satisfied with labors for men, it went on to the extreme of suffering for men. O, how terrible and excruciating were the sufferings of that life! But all were willingly endured for men, so great was the impelling love of that life. Truly that life was a revelation of the heart of God.

But God would not confine the revelation of Himself to one time and one people. The good tidings were to be for all people. Each generation was to receive the revelation. The whole world was to be informed of the wonderful love that springs from Heaven and flows down to earth. This was God's purpose as announced by the angel.

But how is this revelation to be propagated? By simply repeating the words and deeds of this one life? Surely not this alone, though this must never be neglected. But God has a more powerful way. The same life that burst upon the world in the career of the Babe of Bethlehem is to burst upon the world perpetually from the hearts of those who have known Christ and learned of Him. Greater works than He did shall they do. Each Christmas-time shall the life that was in Christ flow out from the hearts of the myriads of followers of Christ. This life flowing through men will manifest itself in ways similar to those of the Perfect Life, in obedience to the Father, in the service of men, in self-denial

Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born,
If he's not born in thee, thy soul is all forlorn.
God's Spirit falls on me, as dew-drops on a rose,
If I but like a rose my heart to him disclose.
In all eternity no tone can be so sweet
As when man's heart with God's in unison doth beat.
Whate'er thou lovest, man, that, too, become thou must;
God, if thou lovest God; dust, if thou lovest dust.
Immeasurable is the Highest; who but knows it?
And yet a human heart can perfectly inclose it.

—Johannes Schaffer.

What Shall We Do About the Gratitude Gift?

It is proposed that Methodist Protestants everywhere join in giving to the General Conference next May a gift of one hundred thousand dollars as an expression of our gratitude to God for His good providence over us during the first hundred years of our history as a denomination. The share that falls to North Carolina Methodist Protestants is $12,000.00. That is an average of about 50 cents per member.

May will not be long in coming, and it is time to be thinking about the matter.

Several distinct questions are involved. The first is, Is it an occasion for gratitude? Is there something to be thankful to God for? It would take many words to describe fully the situation and point out all the reasons for being thankful to God for our continued existence, to say nothing about our achievements, as a denomination. But when we think of the disadvantages under which we started and of the odds against which we have had to contend all along, we may well believe that without the Guiding Hand of God we would not have been able to survive so long. When we remember that we have not only survived, but have grown in influence disproportionately to our numbers, we may well lift our hearts in profound gratitude to God for the honor He has put upon us.

Not only is it a time for thanksgiving, but the place of meeting of the General Conference is a fit place for special thanksgiving. The convention that formed the Methodist Protestant Church met in Baltimore in May, 1828. Our whole church will be represented in the next General Conference in Baltimore next May. The question cannot fail to come up in many minds, "What shall we render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward us?" In anticipation of that event the gratitude gift has been proposed; $100,000, not to be expended in monuments, but in a continuation of the work of the Methodist Protestant Church, missionary and educational work.

When we think seriously of the matter we will come to feel that it is a privilege to contribute to this fund. While our part is only an average of fifty cents per member, many of our members are children or others without much income,

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE CONVENTION IN WASHINGTON

By Rev. Luther K. Long

The Biennial Convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America, held in Washington, December 4-8, was an exceedingly interesting and heartening gathering. Much work and wisdom are still required, but Americans who believe in the eighteenth amendment have good reason to take courage, because leaders who stand for prohibition are growing both wiser and stronger. Several things stand out significantly as I look back over the Convention.

President Coolidge's Message

The administration has not been as outspoken in favor of the eighteenth amendment, nor as vigorous and determined in the prosecution of violators, as many of us have desired. Suggestions for improvement have frequently been made, some of them directly to the White House. The convention was markedly thrilled when President Coolidge's message to Congress came out. A vote of appreciation and thanks was unanimously passed, and both Democrats and Republicans were enthusiastic in its support. Here is the President's message:

"After more than two generations of constant debate, our country adopted a system of national prohibition under all the solemnities involved in an amendment to the Federal Constitution. In obedience to this mandate the Congress and the States, with one or two notable exceptions, have passed required laws for its administration and enforcement. This imposes upon the citizenship of the country, and especially on all public officers, not only the duty to enforce, but the obligation to observe the sanctions of this constitutional provision and its resulting laws. If this condition could be secured, all question concerning prohibition would cease. The Federal Government is making every effort to accomplish these results through careful organization, large appropriations and administrative effort. Smuggling has been greatly cut down, the larger sources of supply for illegal sale have been checked, and by means of injunction and criminal prosecution the process of enforcement is being applied. The same vigilance on the part of local governments would render these efforts much more successful. The Federal authorities propose to discharge their obligation for enforcement to the full extent of their ability."

Wet Candidates Repudiated

While prohibitionists realize that the eighteenth amendment is as much a part of the Constitution as are any of its original articles, and while they know that it will not be removed except by the same elaborate legal processes by which it was placed there, they are also aware that there are considerable sections of the country in which some of the people are determined to nullify, or make practically ineffective, its provisions. Because of this, the actions and utterances of candidates for public office will be carefully scrutinized, both before and after nomination, and no one whose record is unsatsifactory will be allowed to pass unchallenged. Bishop Cannon, and others from the South, were specific and insistent that neither of the "Als"—neither the small specimen from Maryland, nor the larger specimen from New York—nor any other wets, large or small, need hope for support from the dry voters of the South. Political lines, in the face of attacks on the 18th amendment, are to be disregarded.

Ex-Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania was called to the platform for a few words at the close of the session when Bishop Cannon had spoken. He said: "I am one of the men who think that no wet man will ever be President. We must have a man for President who is with us—not simply one who is dry enough to quiet the drys, and wet enough to satisfy the wets. And the President should see to it that those under him respect the Constitution."

Law Enforcement

The new Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Seymour W. Loman, in charge of prohibition enforcement, and Dr. J. M. Doran, United States Prohibition Commissioner, were both there and contributed much by their thoughtful and definite assurances of devotion to the difficult tasks that have been assigned to them. Getting prohibition agents under civil service regulations will greatly aid in making them effective. The training school being established in Washington will teach agents what they may and what they may not do, thus avoiding many of the embarrassing situations that have caused so much talk and trouble.

The Honorable Mabel Walker Willebrant, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, made a decidedly favorable impression on the convention in her admirable address. She is remarkably clear in her thinking and vigorous in the presentation of her material. Law-breakers will find themselves in hard luck when the Department of Justice as represented by this thorough-going woman gets on their track.

Campaign of Education

The eighteenth amendment never could have been placed in the Constitution had it not been for the temperance sermons of Lyman Beecher and other preachers, the lectures of John B. Gough and Francis Murphy, and the vivid addresses of John G. Woolley, J. Ellen Foster, and Frances E. Willard, and a host of other instructive speakers. Text-books in the public schools revealing the effects of alcohol on the human system was another important factor. So were the many meetings held, and the vast amount of literature circulated by the W. C. T. U. and kindred organizations. Education, agitation, organization did the work.

It is now proposed to place new and even stronger emphasis on education. This is necessary, because of the numbers of young people and new voters added to the lists, and because too many of the older people have thought that the whole questions was closed as soon as the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act found their places on the statute books. Wet propagandists are so busy with their misrepresentations that the facts and principles involed in the situation must be presented to the people clearly, persistently, and persuasively.

Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, for many years an important worker connected with the general offices of the Anti-Saloon League at Westerville, Ohio, is to be brought to Washington and placed in charge of this education program. He is a clear thinker, an excellent speaker, and has extensive knowledge and wide experience—moreover, he has a fine disposition and a winning personality. We are justified in looking for much good to come out of his new office in Washington.

Prohibition Work Unifies

It has been my privilege to attend many large conventions—denominational and inter-denominational, north and south and east and west—but this gathering in Washington

FROM THE FIELD

Granville and Henderson

Sunday, December 11, was given to these charges, so I am grouping them in this report. In the morning and afternoon, we were with Brother Fogleman and the Granville people, preaching at 11 a. m. in Mount Carmel church, and at 3 p. m. in Union Chapel. For the night service our appointment was with Brother Hunter and the Henderson church. Encouraging congregations were present at all of these services, and a delightful spirit of fellowship, co-operation and progress was in evidence throughout the day. Pastors Fogleman and Hunter have the work of their respective charges at heart, and are leading out in progressive programs. The people are with them, and we expect continued and increasing progress for these charges.

Littleton

Tuesday, at 11 a. m., we met with the people of this charge in their first quarterly conference, which was held in the Littleton church. The conference was well attended, with all of the five churches represented. Pastor Crutchfield is being well received and is entering upon the work with hope and vigor. A splendid program for the year was proposed by the pastor and adopted by the conference. Nearly $100 was raised on the conference floor for pastor's salary. Collections will be pushed early in the year, and along with this will go earnest effort to deepen and enlarge the spiritual life of the charge. Our eye is on Littleton; we are expecting a year of progress for this work. Rev. J. B. O'Briant, who belongs to this charge, was present and helpful to the conference. His report showed that he had been active in religious work, though without an appointment this year at his own request. Brother A. D. Shelton and Brother N. M. Harrison were present, also, and gave inspiration to the conference. Brother Harrison is anxious to get back into the work, and hopes to do so at an early date.

Tabernacle

On Friday, December 16, we met with the Tabernacle people in their first quarterly conference. The day was wet and cold, and the attendance not so large. However, both churches were represented, and the business of the conference transacted with promptness and harmony. Pastor Isley has been kindly received by his people, and will have their co-operation as he leads in a progressive program through the year. His salary was increased to $1,350. This is an old and long-established charge with good prospects for continued and enlarged usefulness.

English Street

On Friday night it was our privilege to meet with this church in their first quarterly conference. Pastor Garner and a goodly number of his people were present, and all in the spirit of good will and good works. All business of the conference was transacted in harmony, and the way seems clear for a year of growth on this charge. The congregation has voted to sell the church and parsonage, and a committee has been appointed to secure another location. This will probably be done during the year. The college assessment of $40 was raised during the conference.

Guilford

Saturday and Sunday, December 17 and 18, were given to this charge. The first quarterly conference was held at Vickory church on Saturday, and the usual business transacted, though Hickory Grove and Midway were not represented. Plans were made looking to the sale of the parsonage property. A committee on finance was created which will, no doubt, be of valuable aid in assisting the charge to meet financial obligations. Midway, Fairfield, and Mitchel's Grove were visited on Sunday, and at each place there was a responsive spirit to a program of large things for this charge. The college assessment was raised at these churches. Pastor Ashburn is winning the hearts of the people, and is praying and expecting a year of fruitful labor. We are going to look for good reports from Guilford.

Not Space

There is a great deal more that we want to say about all of these charges, but there is not space. For the hospitality and kindness shown us on all of them we are very grateful.

Officials

Officials of a charge should never miss a quarterly meeting unless it is absolutely necessary to be absent. The force of this is seen in the fact that the most progressive churches on any charge are the ones most frequently represented at the quarterly conference. Pastors will do well to repeatedly lay this necessity on the hearts of their officials.

Committee Advisory to the President

This committee is meeting at the parsonage today, December 20, to assist in some programs of conference importance for the year. Announcements of these programs will appear in the HERALD of next week.

Centenary Gratitude Gift

The conference committee created to handle this matter met at the parsonage December 15 and made plans to go forward with this undertaking. Mr. J. D. Ross, of Asheboro, was made chairman of this committee, and Rev. A. G. Dixon, Liberty, N. C., secretary. I bespeak for Brother Ross and his committee the full co-operation of the conference when their plans are announced. We must raise our allotment of $12,000.

Announcements

December 21—Meeting of the Trustees of the Children's Home, 2 p. m. At 7:30 p. m., with Brother Ashburn and finance committee of Guilford charge.

December 25—At home; Christmas Sunday.

January 1—With Brother Cranford and the Weaverville charge. Hope to visit Democrat and Asheville while on this trip.

January 8—With Brother Burgess in quarterly conference at Center Church, 11 a. m.

January 9—With Brother Burgess, appointments to be announced later.

Christmas Greetings

We are happy in the privilege of extending Christmas greetings to every minister and every preacher in our conference connection; to the twenty-eight thousand members who make up our beloved host; to our College, Children's Home, and the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. And with this greeting goes the earnest prayer that the Christ of Christmas may be in every heart and every home throughout our conference family.

HOW SANTA CLAUS CAME

FRANCES MARGARET FOX

Priscilla's grandfather was an instructor in a state university; that shows that he was a learned man. He was called "Professor." Once the President of the United States invited him to come visiting at the White House in Washington because he knew so much about the stars and everything in the sky. He called the stars by name, and you would think he had once lived in the Milky Way, he could tell you so much about it. Great men from all over the world came to call on Priscilla's grandfather, and he talked with them all as easily as Priscilla talked with Tommie Perkins through the back fence at home. Wise men from everywhere seemed to think that there was nothing about the sun, moon and stars and all the heavenly hosts that Priscilla's grandfather didn't know; and yet Priscilla was deeply disappointed in this wonderful man, because she, seven-year-old Priscilla, had discovered that he didn't know it all.

Here it was, Christmas Eve, and he had said nothing about the Star in the East, about the angels who came winging their way to earth to sing on the hills of Judea, because a Babe was born in Bethlehem; he had not even mentioned Santa Claus and flying reindeer on this most wonderful night of the year. There had been plenty of chance, too, because Priscilla and her dignified white-haired grandfather had dined alone. It had been a long and dreary meal, too, with the colored boy who waited on the table in a hurry to have it over with, because he and the other servants had been given a holiday for the evening. The housekeeper had gone home in the afternoon to make merry with her beautiful grandchildren. She wished to take Priscilla with her, but grandfather had said no, it might be necessary for him to take the little girl to the hospital before the dawn.

The housekeeper understood, and tears came in her eyes as she kissed the little girl and said to her that they would see next day what could be done about Christmas.

Priscilla didn't understand. She knew that her mother had been taken suddenly ill with appendicitis and that she had been taken to the university hospital, and she knew that her father, who was once grandfather's little boy in this same house, long years before grandma died, had gone to the hospital to stay all night; he had brought her to grandfather's house and left her in his care. Mother had said at the last, "Be a good little girl, my darling," and father had said, "Be a brave little girl and obey your grandfather." That was all; not a word about Christmas Eve.

They might have known that Priscilla would be a good little girl just before Christmas, anyway. They might have known, too, that Priscilla would be good for the sake of her mother, although the little girl didn't know the meaning of appendicitis; it was a new word to her.

It seemed strange, though, that they had all forgotten the meaning of Christmas Eve to a little child—all of them but the housekeeper. It was bad enough to be away from home on Christmas Eve, separated from her father and mother, without even a mention of Santa Claus. Worst of all, Priscilla had heard her grandfather tell the nurse at the hospital, speaking over the telephone, that he would sit up all night and wait for news. Now it is well known that Santa Claus does not care to meet the man of the house, up and dressed at midnight, when he comes down the chimney on Christmas Eve; and how could he come down the chimney if there should be a fire in the grate? Priscilla hoped that if her grandfather did sit up all night he would stay in his study and let the fire go out in the living-room.

She went to bed at eight o'clock. She said her prayers at grandpa's knee and he didn't seem to listen to a word she said when she prayed for gifts to take to little sick children in the hospital and besought our Lord to take care of her mother and send her home quickly "all cured." At last, just as grandfather had covered her with too many blankets and was leaving the room, Priscilla called after him:

"O, grandpa, don't you suppose Santa Claus will know I am here and come down your chimney tonight?"

Grandfather didn't smile as he answered thoughtlessly: "Well, if he does, I'll have a good look at him. Goodnight, Priscilla. Go to sleep like a good little girl."

Priscilla couldn't go to sleep; she kept thinking of her dear mother and her father, and their beautiful Christmasses at home, until she was so lonely and homesick it is no wonder that she cried and cried into her pillow. Suddenly the little girl remembered that this strange night, for the first time in her life, she had forgotten to hang up her stocking! She wondered how she could have been so careless; she must hang her stocking at once.

Priscilla slipped out of bed and by the light in the hall found her stockings. A minute later, her grandfather, who was sitting in front of the fire-place in the big living-room, saw a little girl in her nightie coming softly toward him. He was sitting in a huge chair in front of a roaring fire, with the tips of his fingers together. It was strange to see grandfather sitting like that and doing nothing."

"What is the trouble, Priscilla?" he inquired.

"I—I forgot to hang my stockings," she answered.

"Why, that is right," he said, "hang them here by the fire so they will be nice and warm in the morning. You may dress yourself right here on this rug—good idea!"

"Oh, but I am thinking of Santa Claus," wailed the child. "I—I'm afraid he won't come down this chimney with such a fire burning!"

"If he does, I'll make him unload his whole pack," grandpa answered. "I'd forgotten about him." Then he helped Priscilla hang both stockings, but he spoke and acted like a man in a dream, because he was thinking of appendicitis instead of why children hang stockings by the fire-place on Christmas Eve. He carried Priscilla back to bed, and this time he kissed her goodnight and said, "Don't worry, little one, don't worry;" and back he went to the fire to worry and worry, because he couldn't help it.

Priscilla, though, feeling comforted, fell asleep, thinking one minute that angels were in the room and that she heard the rustle of their wings, and feeling sure the next minute that she heard the bells of fleeting reindeer in the air outside.

Suddenly Priscilla was awakened by the distinct ringing of the front door-bell. She sat straight up in bed and listened; the few minutes she had been asleep seemed hours. She heard grandfather walk down the long hall. He opened the front door. No one spoke. Grandfather closed the door after a minute of silence and started back to the living-room. Opposite Priscilla's door he paused.

"Who was it?" she inquired.

"There was no one at the door," he answered; no one in sight."

"Then it was Santa Claus!" the child exclaimed. "He cannot come down the chimney, so he came to the door and gave one ring. Next time he does it, grandpa, do please go faster and let him in."

"I certainly shall," grandpa promised. "Now cuddle down and go to sleep again."

Priscilla tried to keep awake that time to see what would happen next, but she couldn't do it.

Grandpa, however, was wide awake, and now he had something to think about besides Priscilla's mother at the hospital, whose life was hanging by a thread, as the surgeon explained; an operation might save her, but there was little hope. What interested Priscilla's grandfather was this: a light blanket of snow had fallen in that Southern city and covered the front porch, yet, although the old-fashioned bell had sent one clear peal through the house, there was not a sign of a footprint on the snow. Grandfather was mystified.

Perhaps an hour later the bell rang again. Grandfather hastened to the door, with Priscilla shivering with cold and excitement close behind him. The window was open in her room and the night was chilly.

"Run back, child, run back," cautioned grandfather. He opened the door; there was no one there and not a track in the snow.

"It was Santa Claus, I know it, I know it!" the little girl exclaimed. "It is just like him to come to every house in the world where there is a child like me that'll divide everything with poor children! You'll see, grand father, that before morning Santa Claus will get in this house somehow and leave me two stockings full of gifts and things for poor children besides. Now I am going to cover up my ears and sleep so I can wake up early in the morning. Good-night, grandpa, dear. Merry Christmas!"

After the man went back to the fire she called again in shrill, glad tones, "Merry Christmas, Merry Christmas, grandpa, to all the world, and to every one in our family—good night." After that there was no more heard from Priscilla until grandpa awakened her in the Christmas dawn.

Meantime perhaps another hour passed and the bell rang again! No one was there; there were no tracks in the snow. Another interval of time, the bell rang again! No one there; no tracks in the snow.

At last grandfather began to think seriously of Santa Claus, and suddenly he realized how blind they had all been because of the shadow hanging over their Christmas Eve. But a child must not suffer, too, not if he could help it. No child in grandfather's house had ever before faced a cheerless Christmas morning. When grandfather had come fully to his senses, he walked to the telephone and talked with two leading merchants of that town and told them to send to the side entrance of his house the finest gifts and books in their shops suitable for a seven-year-old girl, and a general assortment of toys for "poor children"—and "never mind the expense!"

All night at intervals the front door-bell kept ringing fainter and fainter at last, until in the early hours of Christmas morning it was but a tinkle; still there were no tracks in the snow.

At dawn, though, the latch-key turned in the door and a hasty step sounded in the hall. Grandpa sprang to his feet, and there stood his own son, Priscilla's father. His face was beaming with joy.

"Merry Christmas!" was his greeting. "The best of news!" Priscilla's father exclaimed. "She is living, she will live. The operation was successful—there is every chance for her recovery! But, father, we forgot all about our poor little tad's Christmas stockings, and—"

"Old Santa Claus didn't," Grandpa interrupted, and waved his hand toward the fireplace, where two stockings bulged with mysteries, and gifts were piled high up on the floor. "No, sir, Santa Claus didn't forget—you may depend on that old fellow every time! No, you musn't go for that baby, your clothes are too cold! Let me!"

And he went, skipping. "Merry Christmas, Priscilla!" he called, as he snatched her, blankets and all, from her bed, to carry her, winking and blinking and rubbing her eyes into the warm, bright living room.

"Oh, Merry Christmas to all the world!" she shouted when she saw those stockings. "He came, he came! I knew he'd come! Is mother getting well this lovely Christmas morning?" she asked her father, before she touched a gift.

"Mother is getting well!" father answered, and then he danced around the living room, and behaved the way Tommy Perkins did when his side beat at a ball game! Oh, but those three had a gay time! The housekeeper could scarcely believe her eyes and her ears when she came in to get breakfast.

After breakfast, Priscilla's father and grandfather made a secret examination of the front doorbell. They found that a huge spider had spun a thick web, for reasons of her own they could not understand, around and around the inside of that old-fashioned doorbell. It was the kind of bell that worked by the turning of a knob. When the spider stepped on the slender spring of the bell, down it went with the weight of her heavy body; when she stepped off, "Ding!" said the bell. The two men had a merry laugh, but they didn't tell Priscilla just then what amused them so much.

And at the hospital that day a radiant child said to her mother in the minute in which she was allowed to say anything:

"Oh, mother dear, Santa Claus played a big joke on grandpa! And you ought to see my presents! We have brought a bushel-basket full to give to children in the hospital! I never had so many to divide before in my life! Merry Christmas to everybody in the world; and most of all, to mothers and children in hospitals!"—Presbyterian Banner.

The Challenge of This Present Christmas Season

and cross-bearing when need be. This Christmas-time challenges us to a manifestation of the spirit that flowed through the Christ-Child so wonderfully and so beautifully.

Except the Christ be born again to-night
In dreams of all men, saints and sons of sinners,
The world will never see His kingdom bright.
Stars of all hearts, lead onward through the night
Past death-black deserts, death's still wilderness,
Past hills of pain and mountains of unrest
To that far sky where mystic birds begin
Where dreaming ears the angel-song shall win.
Our Christmas shall be pure at dawning there,
And each shall find his brother fair,
Like a little child within;
All hearts of the earth shall find new birth
And wake, no more to sin.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Union Grove, Orange Circuit.—We have had a very successful year, though not as good as it should have been.

We are all very glad to get our former pastor back. Mr. Williams is a very enthusiastic worker, and I hope by his help we can accomplish greater things this year than before.

On third Sunday p.m. at three o'clock we held our Thanksgiving service.

Brother Williams gave us a wonderful message. Mr. W. A. Davis, our delegate to annual conference, gave us a talk; he reported having had a wonderful time.

Mrs. J. M. Lloyd also read us a splendid article on the progress of our Children's Home.

MRS. LUTHER DAVIS, Reporter.

Enfield.—On account of rain the writer was not able to fill his appointment at Whitaker's Chapel last first Sunday, morning. He went, but found the doors locked. In the evening he supplied the Whitakers church pulpit.

Last Sunday the writer was with the Enfield church again. Both services were very well attended. Our Sunday school is in charge of Mr. H. M. Whitaker. He is conducting a good school, a little more whole-hearted co-operation on the part of our members would make it better.

At the Sunday night service a committee was appointed to make plans for a Christmas exercise.

I am glad to report that the family of Brother Jordan has reached normal health again, or practically so. All of those reported in last week's paper are about well again.

We are sorry to report Mr. and Mrs. Holliday's misfortune. Week before last on their return from Rocky Mount, their car ran into a wagon, and another car which happened to be coming in the opposite direction. They were both thrown from their car, by the awful collision. Some one passing by picked them up and rushed them to the Hospital. At the Hospital the doctors found Mr. Holliday's skull to be fractured, and him in what appeared then, a very dangerous condition. However, after thorough examination the doctors report his case to be hopeful, of course we all are happy. Fortunately Mrs. Holliday only had slight injuries. We shall hope for them both a speedy recovery.

Miss Lelia Holliday is still convalescing, and expects to be able to get out before many more days.

Mrs. J. R. Powers' father lived out his days last week and moved into his heavenly mansion. I am sure we all will remember Mrs. Powers during these days of her loneliness.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

English Street.—We have started this Conference year with more interest, and are planning for better things, than in the past.

Our pastor, Rev. D. I. Garner, believes in work himself, and wants everyone else to keep busy winning others to Christ and the church.

On last Sunday night, December 11, he preached from, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." He most forcefully showed what blessings we all receive by always being present at every service in the house of the Lord. And just left us to realize what we miss when we willfully stay away. And those who were present could not help but secretly make a resolution in their hearts to go to church.

Sunday school is coming along nicely and each class has a teacher that gives their best, and when both teacher and pupil work together it will mean much to the church. They are planning a Christmas exercise to teach the little folks more about Christ's birthday.

On Sunday night at 6:30 a part of the Christian Endeavorers from the High Point College came over and held their Endeavor at our church. The subject was "Mottos", and they held the audience almost "spellbound". We feel they have given us another lift.

Ladies' Aid met Monday night with the president, Mrs. R. S. Russel, with 16 members present, seven new members, five visitors. The devotional was lead by the pastor which was interesting. Some old plans were finished, and several new ones begun, dues amounted to $3.00, and when the birthday box was passed several members secretly paid for the number of years they have lived. The treasurer was ordered to pay $10.00 on piano. We are making a beautiful quilt, some fancy work, and home-made cakes preparing for a sale before Christmas.

After all business was looked after the hostess served refreshments and all had a social chat.

Pray for us that our church may make progress and count for God and the Kingdom during this year.

JENNIE BOSWELL LEE.

Pleasant Grove, Davidson Charge.—We are glad to have Brother Ridge back. He filled his appointment at the Grove with an able sermon. May the Lord bless him in every effort for good. We are having a good Sunday school. Brother H. G. Burkhead was elected superintendent for the coming year. We are proud to have him; he is a regular attendant and always in his place at church. Miss Maletia Garner was elected organist for the coming year. She is a good organist and always on the job.

We are planning to have a Christmas tree on Saturday night before Christmas. We are getting up a good program. May the Lord bless every effort for good.

MRS. J. H. LOFLIN, Reporter.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle Charge.—Here's some more that "William" Rogers probably hasn't heard. After a fairly good start our Sunday school went defunct. Our slogan "Watch Us Grow," is not working true to meaning. December 4th we didn't have any school at all.

Sunday, December 11th, came on though and things got to humming pretty good there today. 18th a goodly number were present for Sunday school and preaching.

Our Christmas entertainment will be on Monday night, December 26th.

First quarterly conference was held Saturday, December 10th, with Pinnacle. All churches represented except Pinnacle.

How many members of Mt. Zion would you guess are taking the M. P. Herald? Just six persons. Mrs. O. P. Jones, Mrs. Ed Jones, Mrs. H. H. Brown, Mrs. W. E. Jones, Mrs. E. S. Stone, and yours truly. We have over 200 members. Surely there ought to be more of them taking the Herald. If there is any one taking it that hasn't reported to me please do so at once. We want to know, for sure by January 1st .

Mrs. T. G. Barber returned from the Lawrence Hospital last Wednesday where she had been for three weeks taking treatment after a serious operation. She is not fully recovered and won't be for some time, but she is at home and is improving—write her a Christmas letter, you good women who love a Christian woman.

Wedding bells have already begun to ring. Alton Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Brown and a Miss Kiger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hawes Kiger, of Tobaccoville, were married last week.

Here's wishing everybody that reads this a Merry Christmas and a happy new year.

C. W. ALLEN, Reporter.

Saxapahaw Charge.—The pastor has been moved to his new work by the good members of Concord church and is now living in the parsonage which is a good one and a fine place to live. Our people did not only move us but visited us shortly afterward and filled our pantry with good things to eat; Concord and Salem each giving us a good pounding. We appreciated very much these things to eat, but we place a higher value on that intangible gift that accompanied them.

We are very proud of our new work and greatly appreciate the kind reception that was given us by each of the churches when filling our first appointments. We have a responsive people who are deeply concerned with their Father's business. They have extended a hand of co-operation to their pastor for the advancement of God's cause. These splendid people are causing us to look with an eye of optimism toward the goal of great success for the year.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at Orange Chapel on Saturday before the first Sunday in January, at 2:30 p.m. We especially request the presence of the official members, but shall be glad to have any who wish to attend.

O. C. LOY, Pastor.

Asheville.—Despite the very cold day Sunday, our new pastor, Brother Fred W. Paschall had good audiences. Every one was delighted with his messages and his genial personality. This week he will spend visiting and meeting his new parishioners. He will be guest of honor at our Brotherhood meeting this Tuesday. He will hold our first quarterly conference this Wednesday night. He will also give us two messages next Sunday. A short program will be given by the primary department Sunday morning. Our young people will give a pageant Sunday night.

Sunday morning Misses Flossie Stout and Wenonah Joyner sang a lovely duet. Miss Verdie McIntyre accompanied at the piano.

Two Sundays ago, Ray Foster added much to the pleasure of the service with a violin solo. He is one of our promising young members.

We are very glad to have for the holidays Misses Udora Younginer from High Point schools, Novella McIntyre from High Point College, and Elizabeth Carter from Duke University.

Our prayers go up on behalf of Brother James H. Bell, who is now in Hot Springs, Ark., on account of illness. He is the husband of our former Miss Vonnie Roberts. Mrs. Ward Mitchell and Mrs. J. C. McKenzie continue ill. Brother E. H. Pratt and family are spending the holidays with relatives in Maryland. REPORTER.

Pine Bluff.—The work here has started off well for the new conference year. Our same pastor, J. W. Hulin, is with us again. We are glad to have him. We have never had a man that seemed to please everybody so much as Brother Hulin.

His sermon today was wonderful in every respect. His text was Second Colossians, second chapter, and the subject, "Ye are complete in Christ." A wonderful application to present day life; showing that things that go beyond our human extremities are only God's opportunity.

The Sunday school will have a Christmas tree and treat Saturday evening at six o'clock at the church. The program will not be up to standard on account of an epidemic of measles in our midst. We hope to make a good offering to the Budget on this date.

Brother Jack Barbee, a charter member of our church, is critically ill. His family and friends do not expect him to recover owing to his age. Brethren, these things will come to us all if we are permited to live till we grow old. These are the times that need our consideration, even now.

Another glorious Christmas season is now here, when all the world will commemorate the birth of our Savior. Now since we have lived past the time when men thought it fitting to take a "drink" because it was Christmas time; let us celebrate this season with thanksgiving and love to our Lord. I read, with interest, President Taylor's view of celebrating Christmas in the last issue of the Herald. If you missed reading it, look it up and read the paragraph about Christmas in his report for the week. Let us spend much of our time and money for Christmas instead of spending it for worldly things that only give monmentary pleasure.

May we spend a profitable year together for God!

A friend,
L. E. MABRY.

Liberty and Siler City.—It seems a bit strange to be back in the pastorate again after ten years of general work, and yet it is fine to have some people once more who are our very own.

The people in both communities received us very cordially, and they are co-operating in everything to make the year a successful one in Kingdom service.

We found the work well organized at each church. The people speak in the highest terms of Rev. F. L. Gibbs, their former pastor, and it is clear to see that he did two good years' work among them. About all the churches lack of being 100 per cent organized is a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in each church. We are hoping the end of the year will find them fully organized.

Not having any parsonage, and being unable to rent a suitable house, we have been living in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Curtis in Liberty since moving to the work. They have been exceedingly kind and have spared no pains to make us feel comfortable and at ease. But since their two daughters and our one daughter are all coming home for Christmas, and there is scarcely room for us all, we will spend the holidays, at least, in the Chatham Inn, in Siler City, with Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Johnson, who are members of our Siler City church.

The Parsonage

The parsonage for the charge is to be built in Liberty. A beautiful lot about 60 by 320 feet has been purchased, the contract let for a good seven-room house, and the brick have already been placed on the ground for the foundation. I think it will be a home which any of our preachers will be glad to occupy in the coming year.

Finances

Siler City has paid in full the College Assessment and the A. C. B. for the year, and Liberty will send a payment on both of these at an early date. Salary is paid in full to date at both churches and a bit ahead at Siler City. The first quarterly conference very kindly increased pastor's salary $300 for the year. Christmas pageants will be rendered at each church, with an offering for the G. C. B. This will make our first payment on this budget.

Spiritual Conditions

We find ourselves among an exceedingly kind people, who hear the Word with gladness, and so far they have responded to our every call with cheerfulness, and they have joined us in setting ourselves to the task of undertaking to add fifty new members to each church. This we will do if it be His will to lead us to that.

The Sunday schools are right down to work to add to their numbers and efficiency. And the Christian Endeavor Societies are rendering splendid service.

May God bless the folks in all their efforts, and may He give us strength and wisdom and grace to serve them well in His name.

Wishing our many friends throughout the entire conference a very happy and blessed Christmas, and a continuation of heaven's choicest blessings throughout the coming year, I am,

Yours in His blessed service,
A. G. DIXON.

Pleasant Grove.—Our Sunday school is still increasing. The attendance Sunday was 200 and one year ago 106. But there are still others in the community that we hope to reach before another year closes.

The work of the Junior Christian Endeavor society has been held up some since the president, Mrs. L. F. Honeycutt, has been sick with the "flu" for several weeks, She has recovered and is now able to be with us again.

Sunday morning Brother Reynolds selected one of the girls from his Sunday school class to read the third chapter of John from which he delivered a very timely sermon on "God's Love for the world." REPORTER.

Bess's Chapel.—This is now our sixth week at Bess's Chapel. We have found the community to be a splendid one. Our people received us kindly, and we wish to express our appreciation to the ladies of the Missionary Society and all who helped buy the furniture and the two rugs for the parsonage. And we also thank the brethren for fixing up the parsonage. On November 18th the good people of the community gave us one of the nicest poundings we have every received, with meats and all kind of good things to eat. We want to thank all the folks for the nice things and may the Lord bless every one. We do not know them all by name but the Lord does.

With best wishes to the Herald.
M. C. HENDERSON.

State Street Church.—Rev. W. H. Wall, of Shelby, a Baptist minister, who is doing educational work among the public schools and school teachers of the State, spent from last Thursday until yesterday afternoon in Lexington.

Rev. Mr. Wall occupied the pulpit of State Street Methodist Protestant church at eleven o'clock yesterday morning and preached a powerful and impressive sermon to a fairly large congregation. The pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, was present and conducted the preliminary exercises of the service and introduced the Shelby minister as an acquaintance of former years. In his discourse on "The Indwelling of the Holy Spirit," Rev. Mr. Wall declared that the greatest need of the world in this age is that the people should listen to the voice of God.

In concluding his sermon the minister emphasized the need of communion and fellowship between the people of all denominations and an expression of appreciation for the helpfulness which one may receive from another. He said that flowers should be given to others while they are living. The climax of his sermon was reached when the Rev. Mr. Wall took a white carnation from his coat pocket and pinned it upon the coat lapel of Rev. Mr. Bethea as an evidence of his love and esteem for the minister who, Mr. Wall declared, had meant so much to him in his early ministerial career. Almost the entire congregation was brought to tears as they witnessed a most unique scene in the pulpit.

While in the city the Rev. Mr. Wall was the guest of Rev. C. B. Way and family at their home on South Robbins street. During his pastorate in Shelby Rev. Mr. Way and Rev. Mr. Wall formed an acquaintance and friendship, Mr. Wall preaching a number of times in the pulpit of the Methodist Protestant church at Shelby.

Siler City.—We are very sorry to report that our pastor was unable to fill his appointments last Sunday on account of sickness, but we are glad to say at this time he is improving rapidly. Yet Mrs. Dixon brought to us two splendid messages, and we feel spiritually blessed by having heard them.

Miss Minnie Cooper and Mr. J. A. Cooper have received their Sunday school certificates and pins. This makes a total of six who have received their certificates and pins this year. We are quite sure there will be more presented soon because we now have a nice comfortable church since it has been underpinned and another heater added to our heating system, and cold weather will not interfere with our Sunday school work.

We hope to have the pleasure of having our former pastor, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, with us during the Christmas holidays.

Our Christmas pageant, "At the Door of the Inn," will be given next Friday evening, December 23rd, at 7:30. This pageant has been well prepared by the following committees: Mrs. Dixon, chairman, Mrs. C. E. Brady, Mrs. Duncan Welch, Miss Flossie Siler and Miss Sallie Smith. We feel sure a large number will be present Friday night to see this pageant.

At the time of this writing little Charles Reitzel Stone is sick, but we hope he is improving.

With very best wishes from the Siler City M. P. Church to the Herald and its readers for your happiness during the Christmas Season and the coming New Year.

PEARLIE MOORE, Reporter.

Asheboro.—At the eleven o'clock service Sunday Miss Thelma Henley and Mr. Howard Craven joined the church by letters. We are glad to have these young people come into our membership.

The Vesper service was very well attended, after which the Christian Endeavor Societies met for a short program. The choir is doing extra work on the Christmas music, as the choir will be in charge next Sunday at the Vesper service. On Saturday evening at 7 p.m. there will be a community Christmas tree. The tree will be planted on the vacant lot next to the Post Office Building and representatives from all the church choirs will sing the Christmas Carols.

EXIE CALICOTT, Reporter.

Pleasant Grove.—Our church Brotherhood met in the home of Brother Z. B. Morris on Saturday night, December 17, to celebrate its birthday. One year ago Brother Morris invited the brethren of the church to his home and gave them such a bounteous supper which all enjoyed so well, it was decided to meet again. This was the beginning of our present organization—now called "Church Brotherhood." I. W. Burton was elected first president and J. E. Veach, Secretary and Treasurer. During the year just closed monthly meetings have been held in the homes of the members. In all the meetings throughout the year a fine spirit of Christian fellowship and brotherly love has existed. This has had a wholesome influence in the solution of all our church problems.

The meeting Saturday night was largely attended; by request of Chairman Burton the pastor presided. The devotional service led by I. W. Burton consisted of scripture reading, songs, and prayer. Then followed the business meeting. First the minutes of last meeting were read and approved and then the roll was called each member present responding by the payment of his monthly dues.

The committee previously appointed to place shrubbery in the cemetery, made a partial report. This committee was continued with J. B. Morris added. The pastor, I. W. Burton, and B. E. Kennedy were appointed a committee to act in place of an "architect." The next matter considered was the payment of the church's college assessment of $70.00. After some discussion the members pledged $21.50 of this amount.

The next item of interest was a call to the dining room. Here we found everything arranged to suit the occasion, and the refreshments served fully met the expectations of all present. This is causing a great deal for all remembered the hospitality of Brother and Sister Morris of one year ago. After eating oysters and other good things for a while, Brother Morris went to the table placed in the center of the dining room and lighted a candle which had been placed in the centre of a large cakke—this one candle representing the age of the brotherhood. He then made a few explanatory remarks and called on president I. W. Burton to cut the cake. Assisted by Mrs. B. E. Payne he soon had the cake ready for use. Following this came a period of speech making. I. W. Burton, Z. B. Morris, Superintendent I. A. Teague, Geo. L. Hilton, and I believe about every one present made short appropriate talks. We then returned to the reception room and proceeded to close after electing the following officers, viz: I. W. Burton, President; Z. B. Morris, Vice-President; J. E. Veach, Secretary and Treasurer; C. C. Payne, Brotherhood Reporter.

Next meeting to be held the last Saturday night in January in the home of Brother S. L. Murphy.

REPORTER.

High Point.—On Sunday morning Dr. Spahr delivered a splendid sermon on "The Lure of Future Joy," basing his discourse on the text from Hebrews 12:2: "Looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith; who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." He compared human life to a race with heaven set for the goal. Jesus himself is the lure, and challenges the best there is in man to strive for the joy that waits all the faithful. Dr. Spahr pleaded with his hearers to think of the price that Jesus paid for their salvation, and to be faithful unto death, winning the crown that awaits their victory, which will be full worthy of all labor and sacrifice. A lovely duet, "My Faith Looks Up To Thee," was sung by Mesdames J. C. Whitesell and Allred.

At the Sunday evening service the choir rendered the Christmas music, giving three anthems, "Now Once Again," by Fletcher, "Thou Child Divine," Old French, and "The Bell Within the Steeples", by Praetorius. Rev. Paul S. Kennett brought a beautiful Christmas message from Isaiah 9:6; "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." This beautiful music and appropiate message were enjoyed by a large congregation.

The three Mission Circles met Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the following homes: Circle No. 1, Mrs. L. J. Diffee, chairman, with Mrs. R. T. Pickens, 704 W. Broad street, nine present; Circle No. 2, Mrs. J. H. Walker chairman, with Mrs. H. U. Oakes, 220 Montlieu avenue, 10 present, and Circle No. 3, Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, chairman, with Mrs. E. L. Douglas, 611 Montlieu avenue, with 12 present.

A delightful Tea was given last Friday afternoon by the Home Economics Department of the College. Delicious refreshments prepared by the members of the Cooking Class were served, and beautiful dresses and articles of wearing apparel made by the Sewing Class were on exhibition. This display was most creditable to the teacher, Mrs. M. B. Street, and this Department is one of the most worthwhile at the College. Mrs. Moseley's Art Class also had a very creditable display of pictures in oil, and the china painting was particularly lovely. Much favorable comment for both these departments was heard on every hand.

A fine "Dixie Endeavor Day" program was given by Christian Endeavor Society on Monday evening, December 15th, and a good offering was received. Last evening a Christmas social was enjoyed and presents exchanged. Miss Grace Koontz was the leader and the Topic discussed was, "God's Kindness and Our Own."

The Christmas entertainment will be given next Friday evening, December 23rd, and a capable committee is working on the program. A treat will be given to the younger members of the Sabbath school.

The good news that Captain A. M. Rankin, continues to improve comes from Charlotte Sanatorium. He is greatly missed at church services, and we are hoping to see him back soon after Christmas.

We are much gratified to learn that Dr. A. A. York, who has been suffering from an attack of bronchial pneumonia, is improving. We are also pleased to announce that Mrs. W. P. Pickett is able to be up and about the house.

Classes at High Point College are closing today for a recess of two weeks. Many members of the Faculty will spend the holidays at home here. Miss McIntyre will go to Asheville to visit home folks, and Miss Mabel Williams to Greensboro. Professor and Mrs. C. R. Hinshaw and children will spend the holidays with Mrs. Hinshaw's parents in eastern North Carolina.

We are extending Christmas gretings and all good wishes to the Herald editor and forces and to all its readers throughout the state, and may every heart be overflowing with the peace and joy "that passeth all understanding."

Enfield, N. C.—First quarterly conference will convene at Enfield Friday before the second Sunday in January at 2 p.m.

BOOSTER RALLIES

December 16, 1927

Dear Fellow-Workers:—

We are arranging throughout the denomination during December and January a series of Booster Rallies, giving information concerning the plans for our Quadrennial Young People's Convention to be held in Baltimore, May 10-15, 1928, and presenting other phases of our denominational program of Young People's Work.

For the North Carolina series, we have been able to secure as the principal speaker Rev. F. L. Gibbs, of this Conference, who has recently been employed as Associate Secretary of the denominational Board of Young People's Work. I am sure that you agree that we could not have chosen a leader better fitted for our work than he. His message is always uplifting and challenging to young people and his vision of the field of religious Education is most helpful to all with whom he comes in contact.

He is to give this Conference the following dates, Monday, December 26th, to Sunday, January 1st, inclusive. Since this is so near the holidays, we realize, of course, that it is not just the best time to arrange them, but it was the best we could do in view of the large number of such meetings that had to be arranged throughout the denomination. I am sure with the proper boosting, we shall be able to have a large number of young people and their friends in attendance.

The Schedule as worked out for this Conference is as follows:

Monday night, December 26th—Concord M. P. Church, Concord, N. C.

Tuesday night, December 27th—Asheboro M. P. Church, Asheboro, N. C.

Wednesday night, December 28th—First M. P. Church, High Point, N. C.

Thursday night, December 29th—Calvary M. P. Church, Greensboro, N. C.

Friday night, December 30th—Burlington M. P. Church, Burlington, N. C.

Sunday morning, January 1st—Henderson M. P. Church, Henderson, N. C.

Sunday night, January 1st—Enfield M. P. Church, Enfield, N. C.

BUDGET RECEIPTS

Report No. 3, from Treasurer Idol, lists the following charges with their payments:—

A. C. B.

Liberty and Siler City	$70.00

G. C. B.

West End	$20.00

College Assessment

English Street (in full)	$ 40.00
Granville	68.90
West End	8.00
Henderson (in full)	115.00
Haw River Mission (in full)	10.00
Yadkin College (in full)	5.00
Liberty and Siler City	26.00

It will be noted that we are listing seven charges this week that have not reported before, and that four of them are out on the college assessment. We are grateful to Liberty-Siler for this generous A. C. B. remittance, and also to West End for their start on the G. C. B.

Let us have this list growingg rapidly. There is pressing need for these funds. Receipts on A. C. B. are still far short of conference current expenses. We are sure that all charges will find it well, from every view point, to press collections NOW. If you get ahead now on your budgets, collections for the remainder of the year will not be so difficult. We hope to have a number of new charges to add to the list in our first January report. Thank you, brethren.

A SURPRISE

Surprises come at different times and in different ways, but the one the writer wishes now to tell about took place on Thursday night, December 15th, when a number of the good people of Kernersville came to the apartment home of pastor and wife, smiling with bundles and packages to make us smile too.

Somehow they had learned that the above named date was the writer's birthday, and that may in some measure, account for the fact, that a dark rainy night did not keep them away. Today, Friday, four other families remembered us with an additional number of packages. Since our return some members of the country churches have made us smile by giving us good things also.

Mrs. Lowdermilk joins me in thanking all who have so kindly remembered us. We also trust that the coming holidays will bring much joy and happiness to every home on this charge.

E. G. LOWDERMILK, Pastor.

—The Redlight business, where tolerated in a given community, acts as a magnet to draw to that center the criminal element from a wide region. It bears always a close alignment with violations of the narcotic, liquor and gambling laws. It is the source of underworld graft with which some communities are continually reeking. And, unlike most crimes, is a festering sore for the spread of loathesome disease. Two weapons for its successful combat have been proven effective: Deportation and Padlocking. Where these weapons are aggressively used the underworld has little left to stand on.—Edwin E. Grant.

—Rays of sunlight passing through a fishbowl burned a hole in a rug which smouldered, flared into flame and started another home fire.

IN BIBLE LANDS TODAY

A Golden Rule Sunday offering of $65, contributed by boys formerly in Near East Relief orphanages in Palestine but now earning their own living, has been sent to aid flood sufferers in the Mississippi Valley and in New England.

At Leninakan, Armenia, several hundred guests ate a Golden Rule Sunday dinner with the 8,000 orphans still in the care of Near East Relief. These included representatives of the government and other prominent organizations. On Sunday evening the government officials invited the American Relief Workers to a dinner in their honor and announced gifts "to assist homeless children in any area under the direction of Near East Relief." These gifts included 500 roubles from one organization, 1,500 from another and 3,000 from another. All officials showed a spirit of hearty cooperation and appreciation of the services of the American Relief Workers in their country.

The service of Miss Alice Carr, a nurse who has been for the past four years connected with Near East Relief, has been loaned by that organization to Turkey, and is now supervising Public Health work in Smyrna. She reports that one clinic shows a reduction in infant mortality from 70 percent to one percent. Miss Carr is the first Public Health nurse in Turkey.

Hagop Mardrosian, an orphan boy artist from the Juniyeh Orphanage of Near East Relief, now twenty years old, has been entrusted with the task of completing the work of his master, a famous Italian painter, in the Cathedral at Tripoli, Syria. The work was left incomplete by the painter's failing health. 36 of the 60 large paintings in the cathedral are the work of the boy's brush, and at the end of a year and a half he has been granted a certificate of honor for the excellent work, by the Trustees of the church.

17 girls, graduated the past summer from the sewing school of the Tiflis Orphanage, were granted certificates of proficiency in making measurements, cutting, fitting and completing garments, when examined by the Commissariat of Education and representatives of the Dress Makers Union of Georgia. One was selected as a teacher for the government trade school, and another for the Tiflis public schools. All others have been provided work sufficient to earn a living.

—A fiendish crime is reported from Los Angeles, California. A twelve-year-old schoolgirl was kidnapped and held for ransom. When the ransom was paid the mutilated body of the girl was delivered to her father, the legs and arms having been cut off. The city and state are greatly aroused and every effort will be made to find and punish the criminal.

—High Point College will be represented in the Student Volunteer convention in Detroit by Miss Mary Young and three students, Messrs. Carroll and Braxton and Miss Anna Livengood.

—California's vice problem is declared to be mainly one of immigration restriction. The old time American stock is practically never found as defendant in criminal cases involving vice exploiters.

—Ford's paper, The Dearborn Independent, will be discontinued at the end of the year.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Burton

Jacob A. Burton, son of John V. Burton and Elizabeth Burton, was born in Davidson county about three miles west of High Point, July 19, 1856, and died at his home near the place of his birth December 10, 1927.

July 19, 1888, he was married to Miss Emma May Charles, of Forsyth county. To this union three children were born, two sons and one daughter: H. L. Burton, now of Charlotte, A. G. Burton, who lives with his parents, and Mrs. Berthea May Wheeler of High Point. Surviving are also one sister, his wife, and three grandchildren.

When a young man he made a profession of religion at Mt. Pleasant, but never joined any church. He was one of the best known farmers of this section, and a highly respected citizen. The large congregation that assembled at his home for the funeral was evidence of his popularity as a citizen.

No one feels the force of a stroke like this so strongly as the wife and children. And as we looked into the faces of the large crowd that had assembled and beheld the beautiful flowers that were spread on and around the casket, we were made to feel that his friends were many. To his companion and children who feel so deeply grieved, we would say, Look to jesus and on him place your troubles and he will help you bear them.

Funeral service was conducted in the home Sunday afternoon by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. C. Byrum, pastor of Calvary M. E. church, of High Point. Burial took place in Oakwood Memorial Park cemetery in High Point.

GEORGE L. REYNOLDS.

Morris

William Thomas Morris died December 7, 1927, aged 76 years, two months and 26 days. He was married to Joicy Loflin about 55 years ago. To this union were born the following children: Mrs. Tom Peters, of Lexington, Mrs. John Riley Lanier of Thomasville, Mrs. S. A. Lanier of Handy, Mrs. John Frank Cranford of near New Hope church, and Mrs. Robert Skeen of Handy, Charlie, the only boy, died in infancy.

He leaves to mourn his departure his wife, five children, seventeen grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren. Three brothers, J. C. Morris of Denton, B. E. Morris of Handy and A. J. Morris of High Point, and five sisters, Mrs. Frank Stout of Denton, Mrs. Nann Ward of Denton, Mrs. Mat. Johnson of High Point, Mrs. Julius Nance of High Point and Mrs. Maberry Russell of Compler.

Brother Morris was a good man. He was converted in early life and joined Lineberry Methodist Protestant church of which he was a faithful member.

Until feeble health would not permit him to attend church you could always find him in his place.

He was faithful as a husband, dutiful as a father, kind as a neighbor, consistent as a Christian, and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. And it can truthfully be said he was a friend to all mankind.

The funeral was held at Lineberry church by the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. W. Hulin, a former pastor, and Rev. E. A. Bingham, and Rev. J. L. Trollinger. A large crowd attended the funeral. His passing removes from us a highly respected Christian citizen. The church and community feel very keenly the loss.

The bereaved ones have our sympathy.

C. E. RIDGE, Pastor.

Clodfelter

A tribute of love from the Ladies' Aid Society, church and Sunday school of Bethesda, North Davidson circuit, to the memory of Mrs. W. J. Clodfelter, who fell asleep in Jesus October 25, 1927.

Aunt Molly, as we were used to calling her, was one of our charter members of our Society. One of the most devoted Christians, always loyal to her Master. He came first in all her plans of life.

She was interested in all church work, but for the last year has been denied the privilege of activity with us on account of her failing health, yet she was always ready to encourage us by her prayer.

We have lost a dear friend, and a kind neighbor, and her children have lost one of the dearest mothers, and her husband, a dear companion, but be not grieved, for sooner or later we must all cross the silent river never to return, but in the golden summer of another life, we shall all meet in that sweet reunion, where parting is unknown.

Therefore be it resolved that we, the members of the Aid Society, ever remember her beautiful Christian character, and that we emulate her examples in our lives by manifesting her sweet spirit of resignation and obedience to the Father's will at all times; that we extend our deepest sympathy to her husband, children and grandchildren, and commend them to the care of One who doeth all things well.

Resolved that a copy be sent the family, and one be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

MRS. C. M. YOKLEY,
MRS. E. A. CLODFELTER,
MRS. D. D. BRINKLEY.

Stimpson

Died at Buckingham, Va., Saturday, November 26th, 1927, Mrs. Martha Annie Hampton Stimpson, the beloved wife of Rev. T. H. Stimpson, pastor of West Buckingham charge, Farmville District, Virginia Conference of the M. E. church, South. Mrs. Stimpson was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davis of East Bend, N. C., where she was born March 16th, 1862. She professed faith in Christ at the age of twelve and connected herself with the Baptist church at East Bend, afterwards joining the M. E. church with her husband of which she was a consistent member till the day of her death. She was married September 15th, 1878; to this union eleven children were born; eight still survive—Mrs. C. C. Matthews, Siloam, N. C.; Mrs. W. S. Allred, Mt. Airy, N. C.; M. R. and T. G. Stimpson, also Mrs. S. A. Hauser of Farmville, Va.; Mrs. S. M. Needham, Shelby, N. C.; Mrs. T. A. Williams, Glen Raven, N. C.; Mrs. Willie Shephard, Buckingham, Va. There are thirty-six grandchildren and one great-grandchild. This good woman lived a beautiful Christian life. She was a great sufferer, being an invalid for several years. She went to church as long as she was able, always trusting in her blessed Saviour. May her children always remember their mother's prayer and when tempted, may they ever look to her Saviour for help, who took her home where a crown of righteousness was awaiting her. May the grace of our gracious Heavenly Father whom she loved and served comfort and sustain the broken-hearted husband and children and other grief-stricken relatives and may we so emulate her sweet life and live so close to the Lord that some sweet day we will meet where partings are no more.

Funeral services were held at Trinity church in Buckingham where she held her membership and of which her husband is pastor, on Monday, November 28th, conducted by her Presiding Elder, Rev. R. H. Potts, and her remains were interested in the family plot at Antioch church in Cumberland county, near Farmville, Va.

Dearest mother we give you up,
Though shed we many a tear.
We little thought when last we met,
The parting was so near.

Yet when we think that God knows best,
We try our tears to dry,
For well we know, if we are faithful,
We shall meet you by and by.

She faded as a gentle flower;
Love ones saw that she must die.
Her aching form returns to dust,
But her home is in the sky.

Her earthly trials are over.
No more she'll feel a pain.
No more she'll know a sorrow,
But with Jesus she will reign.

One by one we're called away,
And our bodies return to clay.
One by one we shall see Jesus
And dwell with Him for aye.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

Holt

Mrs. Josephine Thompson Holt died at her home in Graham Tuesday, November 22, 1927.

She was born August 22, 1854 and was married to Isaac Holt September 20, 1874.

Mrs. Holt had been in declining health for several months, but a fall which she received a short time ago, breaking a limb, hastened the end.

She had been a faithful member of the Methodist Protestant church of Graham.

The funeral service was held at the home Wednesday, November 23, at 3 p.m., conducted by her pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, assisted by Revs. S. W. Taylor of Greensboro, L. W. Gerringer of Burlington, and W. E. Harrop of Graham. After the services at the home, interment was in Providence cemetery. The following grandsons of the deceased were active pall bearers: Paul and French Holt, of Saxapahaw; Edwin Moore and James Rogers, of Burlington; Glenn Anglin of Durham, and Don Holt and Hal Anglin of Graham. The flowerbearers were the remainder of the grandchildren: Ruth, Blaine, James, S. S., Jr., Fay, and Nina Holt, John Jr., and Mrs. Glenn Anglin, Margaret, Max, Wilson, and Paulette Rogers, Mrs. Reid Maynard, Winell Courtney, Nell Holt, and Mary Tome Hughes.

The large attendance at the funeral and the lovely floral tribute showed in what high esteem Mrs. Holt was held by her relatives, friends, and neighbors.

She is survived by her husband, Isaac Holt, of Graham, and the following children: Mrs. J. E. Moore, and Mrs. J. G. Rogers, of Burlington, Mrs. J. M. Anglin, S. S., J. W., R. J., J. C., and C. C. Holt of Graham, and T. M. Holt of Salisbury.

D. R. WILLIAMS.

—R. W. H. Stone, prominent citizen of Greensboro's suburbs, and president of the N. C. Farmers' Union for years past, was stricken with paralysis last week in Raleigh and died on Sunday morning. His funeral was held in Grace church, Greensboro, Monday afternoon, conducted by Dr. Spahr, assisted by Rev. R. J. Tamblyn and Rev. W. F. Kennett. The deceased was a member of Grace church. Brother Kennett gave a sketch of his religious life and of the efforts of his sainted mother to bring him to salvation in Christ. Brother Stone was a quiet, thoughtful man, and a man of unusual intelligence. His superior knowledge and ability among the farmers won their confidence in his leadership and they elected him president of the Farmers' Union and kept him in the position. Just before the fatal stroke came he had asked to be relieved. Death brought him the release that they were unwilling to grant. He leaves besides his wife, one son and three daughters, two brothers, one of whom is the well-known and highly esteemed Brother J. M. Stone, also of Grace church.

CURRENT CALIFORNIA HISTORY

The Los Angeles Tidings of October 7, 1927, says:

"Archbishop Hanna discussed the Immigration Problem of the Pacific with particular relation to California. He reminded his hearers that the great numbers of citizens of Latin race and parentage scattered up and down the California coast together with the great influx of Mexicans, Latin partly by race and entirely by culture, presage a peaceful entrance during the generations to come into the possession of this fair land. The wisdom of this prediction is borne home by the realization of the fact that homeloving, prolific peoples, among whom motherhood still remains in horror, are in presence of a race that are permitting the home to crumble about them, who shrink from the duty of child-bearing, and who are raising a generation of weaklings by showering sickly sentimentality upon carefully limited families of pampered darlings. To the strong shall be the victory, to the courageous the possession of the land. Indications are that, as the Archbishop says, the sons of Italy and Portugal and Mexico will hold the place of pride and power in the California of tomorrow."

ASHEBORO MISSIONARY SOCIETIES MEET

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant church of Asheboro held a joint meeting, as is customary at the Christmas season, at the home of Mrs. J. S. Lewis, Monday afternoon, December 12th. A splendid program was rendered.

Mrs. Lewis conducted the devotionals, reading the Christmas story as related in Luke. After the singing of Christmas carols by the members present, a short busines session was held for each society. Following this, Mrs. John Swain gave an instructive report on the work of the Foreign Society, discussing briefly the various interests in each of the foreign fields where the society is helping support missionaries. Miss Enolia Presnell then very impresively, told a beautiful Christmas Story, portraying the birth of the Christ child, and Mrs. Mae Ridge sang one of the old, familiar carols, telling the story in song of God's wonderful Gift to the world. Next on the program was a report on the home missionary work by Miss Lollie Jones. She gave an interesting account of the institutions, which are being helped by the home missionary society, among which are the M. P. Children's Home at High Point, the Alvin Drew school at Pine Ridge, Kentucky, and the Pittsburg Mission at Pittsburg. After this, Miss Kate Bulla read Amos R. Well's story, "The Gift Scale," which displays the idea of the giving of Christmas presents and the spirit in which they should be given. Mrs. H. W. Walker and Miss Fern Way concluded the program by singing a lovely duet, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Garland Pritchard.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Lacy Lewis and Miss Enolia Presnell, then served delicious refreshments, consisting of fruit salad, saltines, assorted sandwiches and hot coffee.

MRS. JOHN SWAIN,
Corresponding Secretary.

The missionary programs for Juniors are now out. They are fine. Please let Miss Pearl McCulloch, secretary of Literature, know if you want a copy.

White-Ward

On Wednesday evening, November 30, at seven-thirty o'clock the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Ward of Asheboro was the scene of a beautiful marriage when Mr. Frances White claimed Miss Rufine Ward as his bride. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion and everything looked lovely. The ceremony was performed by the writer in the presence of several friends of the family and relatives. Mrs. White is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ward and is a fine young woman. She was educated in the Asheboro public schools and Western Maryland College. She is deservedly popular here with a large circle of friends. Mr. White is from Archdale in the upper part of Randolph County but has lived in Asheboro some years where he is manager of the Capitol Theater. He, too, has many friends here.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for a motor trip to Florida. We are especially glad that they will make their home in Asheboro.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

GOD, LET ME GIVE

God, let me be a giver, and not one
Who only takes and takes increasingly.
God, let me give, so that not just my own
But other lives as well, may richer be.

Let me give out whatever I may hold
Of what material things life may be heaping.
Let me give raiment, shelter, food or gold
If these are, through thy bounty, in my keeping.

But greater than such fleeting treasures, may
I give my faith and hope and cheerfulness.
Belief and dreams and joy and laughter gay,
Some lonely soul to bless.

—Mary Carolyn Davies.

Our Covenant With Annual Conference

Thirty-three years ago when the publisher of the Methodist Protestant Herald, at the request of the president of the Annual Conference and other leading members of the church, returned to North Carolina to engage in the publication of a conference organ, he did so, first on the condition that ministers pledge their individual co-operation, and secondly, on condition that the Annual Conference as a body enter with him into a covenant of co-operation. This covenant was cordially entered into, the publisher agreeing to be responsible for the publication and the Conference agreeing to do the field work involved in canvassing for subscribers.

In the years that have elapsed since that time the Herald has lived and done its work in the measure in which it has done it because the Annual Conference has been true to its covenant. The editor has been heartened all the time by the assurance that the brethren were with him. Even when resources were inadequate we have believed on and labored on. Without this faith and the determination that accompanied it, the burden of publication might have been laid down any year with the plausible excuse that conditions were unfavorable. But the moral obligation of the enterprise and the support of the Annual Conference have given the needed momentum and the publication has continued for a third of a century.

It is gratifying to us to reflect that it is no longer necessary to appeal to the Annual Conference to become responsible for the field work. It has come to pass that each year the Conference reaffirms its devotion to the Herald without a hint from the publisher and provides a plan for effective canvass for subscriptions. The last Conference at Asheboro through its committee on the Conference organ gave careful attention to this matter. The committee's report was adopted, involving the appointment of the month of January for special work in the effort to reach assigned goals. This list of goals we will publish next week. The reaching of these goals would result in a considerable increase in the total circulation. The plan divides the responsibility for its successful working between the pastor and the delegate to the last Conference. Pastors will therefore feel free to call upon delegates for their co-operation in planning for the canvass and in carrying out the plans laid. In the years gone, many of the most successful pastors in this part of their work have chosen to do all the work themselves. But we have thought that they would have been even more successful had they called to their assistance some of the laymen or laywomen. With a layman to assist the pastor in planning and others to assist in execution of plans we shall hope for unprecedented success.

The natural goal is a paper in every home. This has been reached by one or two small churches for a short time. What a church would our church be if we could report that every family is taking and reading a church paper. The nearer we approach to that ideal, the more hopeful the situation becomes.

If from this end of the line we can help by sample copies or otherwise any pastor in reaching his goal we shall be glad to help. The goals will be reached when to present subscribers new ones to the requisite number are added.

Goes Home on Christmas Night

Rev. D. A. Braswell was seriously afflicted last summer and operating surgeons found a cancerous condition which they could not cure. He was not told of his condition and for a time hoped for recovery. But for weeks past his state has been such that the end would not have been surprising any day. But he lingered on until the holy Christmas Day came, and then our Father called him home. Last Sunday night his friends announced that he had passed away. While the air was filled with songs of rejoicing over the world's New-Born King, the spirit of Brother Braswell ascended to God. What a relief to him! Oh how he had suffered! Months and months of suffering. How hard to bear had he not been supported by his faith in God's goodness and His purpose to make our afflictions work out for us a far more exceeding weight of glory.

Brother Braswell's life had been an exceedingly busy one. He was a man of great energy, and this kept him on the go. In labors he was more abundant than most of us. His achievements in the ministry were by no means insignificant. He doubtless erred in judgment sometimes, as we all do, but in spite of his errors of judgment his well-meant efforts were productive of great and lasting good.

He was an outstanding minister in our Conference, and will be missed by us. May his loved ones have the consolation that he himself found in God's great promises.

Paul's Personal Interest in People

Paul was such a scholar and such a preacher that it would not be surprising to find him somewhat weak in the matter of personal interest in people. He had such an interest in man as a race that he might have failed in interest in the individual man. But there is evidence in his epistles that he was strong in his personal-interest proclivities. In closing his letter to the Romans he mentions by name about thirty difference persons and expresses a personal inetrest in them. His letters to Timothy, Titus, and Philemon bear testimony to his thoughtfulness of the individual man. He showed also a personal interest in the spiritual state of governors before whom he was tried. There must have been something very affable and companionable about Paul. Won't it be a privilege when you get to Heaven to hear Paul preach the Gospel as he knows it now and see him live the spirit of Christ as it has been developed in him by this time!

GOD'S MEMORY BOOK

Rev. W. A. Ledford

Moffatt translates Malachi 3:16, "There lies before the Eternal a record of his worshipers." These were the comforting, informing, assuring words of God's Messenger to a people down in the dumps. They were saying, "It is vain to serve God, and to keep his charge." They utterly mistook the nature of God's service, converting it into a mercenary bargain. They worshipped God, hoping thereby to gain worldly prosperity, rather than gain the reward awaiting God's people in the next life. When earthly prosperity was withheld, they charged God with being unjust, and forgetting them in their struggles, troubles and service for Him.

The prophet Malachi borrowed a figure from the Persian kings to assure the discouraged, down-hearted people that God had not forgotten them. The Persian kings kept a record before them of the good deeds of their subjects, as in the case of Mordecai, and rewarded them when occasion presented itself. This book was kept for the advantage rather than disadvantage of the loyal, faithful servants. None of their unselfish, sacrificing services were overlooked in this way.

Both the King James and American Standard Versions translate the phrase, "A book of remembrance," which is comforting, heartening and suggestive. We write down the things we want to keep alive in our memories in such books. Such books occupy prominent places in all our homes. They are shown to the guests and the more important features pointed out and emphasized. Many of these memory books are worn, and soiled on account of long use. If you want to know the value placed on such things, attend an auction sale and let one of the old heirlooms be put up. This same book is described as the book of life, which contains the names of the living—the names of the dead having been blotted out of it.

While the figures of the Persian kings and the city registers are helpful, suggestive in this passage of Scripture; yet, the figure that has gripped more minds and hearts is "Jewels," which are worn for their worth and beauty. God calls the names of those on His memory book, His Jewels or peculiar treasures. Many of the trinkets locked securely in the bank vaults are of little value to the general public, but to the owner they have a peculiar value, because of their history and relations. There is something about those fearing God that makes them very precious to Him.

These poor, short-sighted Jews had not seen the real distinction between the righteous and the wicked. When the day of final Judgment comes, and those fearing God are spared as a man spares his own son that serves him,—placed on the right hand of God, while the wicked are cast into outer darkness, where there is weeping and wailing, the proper distinction can be seen. It may not appear when the fields are white unto harvest, but when the harvest comes with its rewards and punishments there can be no mistake then.

THE CHRISTMAS STORY

There was no room in the village inn
To house the virgin mild,
So in a stable, 'mongst the kine,
Was born the little child.

The babe was wrapped in swaddling clothes
And in a manger lay,
While 'round about His head there shone
A glory bright as day.

While shepherds watched their flocks by night
In fields of Bethlehem,
The angel of the Lord appeared
And told good news to them:

"The babe you'll find in Bethlehem,
With swaddling clothes wrapped 'round,
And in a manger sweet with hay
The Christ-child shall be found."

And as they looked, they saw a host
Of angels in the sky,
All singing praises to the Lord,
The mighty God most high:

"Glory to God in the highest,
Good-will to men on earth;
Rejoice, rejoice, for 'tis the eve
Of the blessed Savior's birth."

The light grew faint and fainter still;
The echoes died away,
And toward the town of Bethlehem
The shepherds made their way.

They came with haste, and found the babe
E'en as the angels said,
The lovely virgin seated near,
Beside His humble bed.

Three wise men of the distant East
Saw in the sky a star,
Whose light of peace and holiness
Did shed itself afar.

"The King is born," the wise men said,
"We must the child behold,
So let us take rich gifts to Him,
Frankincense, myrrh and gold."

On camels richly furnished
They crossed the desert sands,
And, guided by the shining star,
They passed through many lands.

Then in the sky the star did rest;
In went the wise men three
And offered to the Prince of Peace
Their gifts on bended knee.

And far above, the angels watched,
Up in the dark blue sky,
And whispered low the old refrain:
"Glory to God on high!"

CARE AND ITS CURE

Probably the most prevalent sin of Christians is worry. Yes, worry is a sin; if for no other reason than that God said we must not worry! Read it for yourself in Philippians 4:6: "Be anxious for nothing"—don't worry about anything!

Worry does nobody any good; the word is from the old Anglo-Saxon word which was originally used to describe what a dog does to a rat, "worries a rat," takes it by the throat and shakes the life out of it by degrees! That is what worry does to the one who uses his spare time that way.

Worry is nothing less than fretting at the circumstances in which you find yourself, complaining, unconsciously it may be, of the way God has allowed things to work out for you; you would not have allowed that to happen to someone you loved!

Well, here is the cure for care: Don't worry; tell God! And while you are telling Him, take a moment to thank Him for what He has already done for you; then the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall guard your heart and your thought in Christ Jesus.

Notice this cure for care; it is really very fine. Worry is a matter of thought, isn't it? Well, God says, Don't worry; tell Me. And as you are telling Him and thinking of what He has done for you already—and you have to think to thank, do you not?—He will replace those anxious thoughts with peaceful thoughts, in a way that passeth understanding!

But there is something far deeper and richer than that just here. He promises to guard them, to set a garrison around them, so that no thoughts that should not be there will be able to get in! And most marvelous of all, the garrison is none other than Jesus Christ Himself, for He promises to guard them "in" (not through, as the King James version; the Greek word is en) Christ Jesus.

Ah! here is the cure for care; it is to be in Christ Jesus, to have Him all around you, and above you and below you; and for you to be an integral part of Him! You have tried the cure before and found it ineffective; but it was because you were not "in" Him. Abide in Him; then when things come that are likely to worry you, to give you unusual concern, don't worry; tell Him, and He will garrison your thoughts, and give you His peace that passeth all thoughts.—North Avenue Church News.

CAUSES OF CRIME

Dr. Schumaker, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League for Indiana, discussed the "Cause of Crime" at the recent convention of the League in Washington, D. C. He gave the following seven causes as worthy of special mention:

1. The uncertainty and remoteness of punishment.
2. The foreign complexion of our city population.
3. Too much molly-coddling of criminals.
4. Pistols and other deadly weapons too easy to get hold of.
5. Criminal lawyers of a certain class, including certain judges.
6. The way in which the press plays up crime.
7. Our political system of law enforcement.

Ex-Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, being called to the platform soon after this address, said that Dr. Schumaker had made one important omission. "He should have added another," said Mr. Pinchot—"the lack of determination on the part of authorities to enforce the law."—L. K. L.

THE BLIGHT

If the reader travels through the woods anywhere in the Middle Atlantic States—Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, or in the Blue Ridge and Alleghany mountain region—especially if his journey is in the springtime when the trees begin to be fully clothed with the soft green garments of their leafage, he will be impressed by one thing which he sees. In the midst of this beautiful green forest there stand great skeleton trees, sometimes singly, sometimes in groups of three or four, or even a dozen or more. They are not only bare of leaves but frequently bare of bark, and stand up like the bare bones of a tree rather than its full-limbed and full-leaved form. Or sometimes they are recently dead, and a few withered leaves still cling to their limbs, on which the bark has begun to peel away. If you ask what is the matter, and why all the forest is green and beautiful except these solitary ghosts of trees, the answer will come back: "Oh, that's the chestnut blight. It swept through this country several years ago and has completely wiped out one of our most useful species of timber, whose nuts were a joy to the young people in the fall, and whose timber was used for fence rails and fence posts and almost indestructible beams and rafters in barns and outhouses. But something which the learned men call a fungus germ came down here from the North and the chestnut woods have vanished before its desolating march."

The thoughtful student of religion knows that there is a blight of this sort which creeps through the Christian world and leaves many a wreck in its path. It began its march away back in the first centuries of the Christian era. It was then called Ebionism or Gnosticism. Later down the centuries it turned up again and it was known as Socinianism. Somewhat later it appeared in England and was called Deism. Then it got across the Atlantic and appeared in New England and was known as Unitarianism. And now there is a fresh spread of the blight. It has invaded many institutions of higher learning; it has taken possession of some denominational publishing houses with their Sunday school periodicals; it seems to have entrenched itself in certain misnamed theological seminaries, and is now called Modernism. But wherever it has appeared in all the ages, it has left behind it so far as its influence has been unchecked, a lifeless, fruitless form of Christianity, from which the spirit and power and transforming influence have departed.

It takes a scientist with a microscope to analyze and diagnose the chestnut blight, but any man with an open Bible can tell what is wrong with this religious blight that has aimed at the destruction of Christianity ever since apostolic days. The "spore" or hidden germ of this deadly error is found in its opposition to the true divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, His atoning sacrifice, and His literal bodily resurrection. And the germ usually begins to show itself by a denial of His virgin birth.—Selected.

—None can have salvation through faith in the outward Christ who, through continued disobedience reject Him in His inward work of regeneration or purification. This is where so many fail. They would like to have their sins forgiven and be admitted to heaven but would live as they please, and when told they must sell all, must deny themselves, take up the cross and follow Christ in all things, they turn away sorrowful. But there is no other way into the kingdom than by receiving Him who is "The Way, the truth and the life," by obedience to His spirit.—Anderson M. Barker.

FROM THE FIELD

I Wonder—

If the day that commemorates His birth really does what it purports to do. There seems to be so little of Christ in Christmas, and the day is so different in spirit and practice from the first Christmas. Instead of our churches being filled with worshipers, the attendance on Christmas Sunday was much smaller than on regular Sundays. There is much meaning and timeliness in the words of Bishop William F. McDowell. He says: "Perhaps one of our highest services in modern life is to recover Christmas for Jesus Christ and His real purpose in the world." However, we do trust that, despite all that goes into the makeup of Christmas that seems foreign to the spirit and purpose of the day, Christ is being honored, and that more and more we may find our real Christmas joy in a closer fellowship with Him.

Sunday morning we were at Grace for Sunday school; at 11 a. m. we worshiped at St. Paul's, and at night, it was our privilege to observe the pageant at Calvary.

Burned

A Christmas card, received December 24 from Brother Anderson, and intended to convey to us the greetings of the season, informed us in a postscript that our Albemarle church had just caught fire and burned to the ground. This faithful band, and their beloved pastor, have our fullest sympathy, and we can but wish that we had a fat pocketbook. It is heartening to hear that they are going right on with their services, and that the church is to be rebuilt at once. This is the kind of courage that always wins. The insurance was not large, but will help. We understand that the amount was about $4,500. We believe that God will prosper them, and we shall pray constantly that His blessings may attend their building program.

Deceased

Sunday night at 12 o'clock we were informed by phone message from Brother Lawrence Little of the death of Brother D. A. Braswell. In company with Brothers Ashburn, Hutton, Moton, and Cassady, a layman from High Point, we motored to Concord to attend the funeral service at 3:30 p.m. Brother Ashburn, assisted by other brethren, was in charge of the service. A full report of the funeral will be given, we presume, by someone from Concord, and details, therefore, will not be attempted here. Brother Braswell was one of our most zealous and tireless workers, and during his long years of service he did much for Christ and for the conference. We shall miss him in our annual sessions, and on the field; but we rejoice with him in the richer inheritance that is now his. Our tender sympathies are extended to the family.

An obituary committee will be promptly appointed.

Conference Programs

At a recent meeting of the Committee Advisory to the President the following program was proposed and agreed upon:

A. C. B.

January, February and March were set apart as Annual Conference Budget Months. During this time, we hope to raise the A. C. B., and get that part of our financial obligation out of the way so as to leave the remainder of the year free for other matters.

Week of Prayer

The last week in February is designated as "A Week of Prayer for Evangelism."

Pastors' Preaching

During the entire month of March all pastors are asked to preach on evangelism and to urge its emphasis in the Sunday school, mid-week prayer meetings, and other church services.

Special Edition of Herald

Sometime in March a special edition of the Herald will be devoted to Evangelism. The editor has very readily consented to this, and will lend his best help in making this issue serve its purpose in the largest possible way.

Methodist Protestant Day

During the early spring—tentative date, fifth Sunday in April—we hope to observe what will be known as "Methodist Protestant Day," at which time inspirational gatherings will be held all over the conference district. A count will be made of the attendance, and it is our hope to have a great host of Methodist Protestants in these meetings. Details are to be worked out and further arrangements made.

Goals

1. CLEAN CHURCHES. Brooms are cheap, work wholesome, and dirt an offense to worship.

2. MARKERS FOR OUR CHURCHES. Why not let the public know that "this church on the highway is a Methodist Protestant church"? Information about markers will be furnished on application.

3. ALL CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL OFFICERS ELECTED IN OCTOBER, and duly installed before the close of the Conference year.

4. CONGREGATIONAL SINGING, and all churches adequately supplied with standard song books. Every Methodist Protestant church should have a supply of M. P. Hymnals. Certainly!

5. THREE THOUSAND CHURCH PAPERS in circulation. January is Herald Month, as fixed by the Conference. Goals for each charge will appear in the Herald next week.

6. EVERY SUNDAY SCHOOL contributing monthly to the Children's Home.

7. PAYING IN FULL, our $12,000 Centenary Gratitude Gift.

8. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO RURAL CHURCHES, and better organization of rural churches.

9. REGULAR OFFERINGS at all regular church services.

10. THE EVERY-MEMBER CANVASS in every church.

11. EVERY DOLLAR POSSIBLE on the Budgets,—and MORE.

12. PASTORS PAID MONTHLY.

13. ALL POSSIBLE HELP in every possible way for High Point College.

14. OBSERVING THE SPECIAL DAYS, as provided by the General Conference.

15. FINAL PAY-UP DAY, October 21.

16. INTENSIFYING THE SPIRITUAL LIFE of the church.

We most earnestly call upon the church to pray the blessings of God upon these programs and these goals, and to help realize them by zealous, wise, and persistent effort.

CHRISTMAS IN THE HEART

I may not hear the angels sing
As shepherds did of old;
I may not see the Christ-child King
As men who brought their gold.
Yet Christmas comes within my heart
As silent as the snow,
And Christ for me becomes a part,
Until my soul's aglow.

The heavenly star I may not see,
As wise men saw that night,
Nor may I in the manger be
Where blazed the glorious light,
But on my pathway shines a star,
The guiding star of life;
It leads me e'en across the bar
Where ends all toil and strife.

I may not tread the Bethlehem way
With wise men, shepherds, too;
I may not bring my gifts today,
As men were wont to do,
But I shall take into my heart
The Christ of Galilee—
He shall no longer live apart,
But make his home with me.

SLANDER

In the olden days a peasant confessed to a monk that he had slandered an innocent friend. The monk said to him:

"For your penance do this now: take a bag of chicken-down, go to every yard in the town and drop one bit of down into each garden. Do not miss one yard and when you have finished return to me."

The sinner believed his punishment was light. With his bag of down he made the circuit of the town and carefully dropped one soft feather into each garden. Then he returned to the monk, saying: "I have done my penance."

"No, my son," replied the old Abbe; "you will not have done your penance until you take the bag, go again on your rounds, collect every feather you have dropped and bring it here to me."

The gossip protested that it would be impossible. He could not find the bits of down in a lifetime. Many had blown far away.

"So it is with gossip," replied the old monk. "It is easily dropped; but never again, no matter how hard you try, can you gather back the words you have so thoughtlessly scattered."—Selected.

JESUS CHRIST, THE BOND OF UNION

A great, great company whom no man can number has cried with Peter, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God;" and with Thomas, "My Lord and my God." No man who makes that confession can be anything less than my brother! Will you kneel with me before His manger, and weep with me before His cross, and rejoice with me before His empty tomb? Then we are one—one in our faith, one in our hope, one in our love.

Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder; You must not push me away from you, no matter how we may differ in a thousand opinions. We are one! You must not shut me out of the fellowship of our common service. Peter's confession is foundation enough for the whole Church through all the centuries: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God!" Other foundation can no man lay. In somewhat the spirit of Booker Washington when he exclaimed, "I defy any man to make me hate him," I must claim fellowship even with some who will not count me of their company. The body of Christ must not be divided. I hail as comrades all who love and follow my Lord.—Bishop Herbert Welch addressing the Korean Federal Council of Missions.

THE CHRISTIAN PRONOUNS

The lesson of unselfishness is the most important, yet the last to be learned.

The Bishop of Cambridge once put it to his pupils in the form of Christian grammar: "We have learned to say: First person, I; second, thou; third, he. But to put it right, we must turn it upside down: First person, He; second, thou; third, I. 'He' means God, the First Person in the first place; 'thou,' my fellowman; and 'I,' myself, comes last."—Selected.

—Dr. F. B. Meyer, notes The Christian World of London, has returned to England after four months' tour in the United States and Canada, during which he gave 300 sermons and addresses. In spite of these toils, and of his 80 years, he is feeling quite well and is "preparing for his winter's work."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

The Latest Word From Our Work in China

I quote extracts taken from a letter written to Rev. and Mrs. Soderbom by Mrs. Larson, November 4:

"We are still all right here (Kalgan). I hear your man Wu Wen Yu has been very brave during the fighting and looting in Hsuan Hua Fu. He has had 300 in the compounds, two business compounds and the mission compound being united. No one was hurt in these compounds. They had wounded soldiers and took care of them, fed a large number of the refugees and at the end took up a collection. These business places gave $50 and said they would give more. But the whole amount was raised without further contribution from them. Mr. Wu said that it did not cost the mission anything. He rode up to our compound on his bicycle but had to hurry back, as he was then caring for seventy people.

"We have one very sick girl here but otherwise all are well. Last week we had a little anxiety and the school girls came over two nights and slept on the floors, but the third night they went back and all has been quiet since, for the war is now waging further west.

"We were sorry to hear yesterday that Chai Kou Pu had been looted. It is almost the first instance where the armies have entered the mission premises. We still hace refugees here in the chapel. One whole side is filled with women and girls. We have not had the girls go to Tung Kuan for several weeks. It seemed wiser not to have so many seen together.

"Mr. Horace Williams has gone back to Tientsin this week but expects to come back soon. He has been a great help to the teachers and helpers while here but he says that it was not he: it was God. Since his visit our teachers have been more in earnest and more prayerful."

Just a few days ago I received a letter from Mr. Horace Williams, written in Tientsin, November 10. In it he writes:

"I came back to Tientsin November 1, because the American Consul could not give me permission to remain in Kalgan. After the trouble was over in Kalgan I wrote him stating the conditions as being peaceful and asking what I should do. He answered that the conditions were such that the American policy of withdrawing foreigners to the coast cities could not be changed. So I came back to Tientsin but I will expect to spend at least one week each month in Kalgan as conditions permit.

"We were having a great time. After our retreat for prayer and closer fellowship with the Lord there was an altogether different spirit among the workers. A spirit of deep humility prevailed and a yearning for a closer walk with God was manifest. The Lord graciously blessed us, for which we give Him due praise.

"I had a fine trip down from Kalgan. I went to the station Monday evening. The train left there about 3 a.m. Tuesday and made excellent time, as I arrived in Tientsin about 7:30 the same evening. This is the best connection I have ever made, especially when you realize that I stopped at Yenching University (outside Peking about six miles) to see my friend, ate dinner with him, went into Peking and attended to some business, and caught the afternoon train for Tientsin.

"Some missionaries here in Tientsin have started a gospel mission for service men. This is principally for American marines and solders, but a few British come also. We are having fine meetings. There is no attraction save the simple gospel of salvation through Christ. Tientsin is an awful city and exceedingly wicked, and this rescue mission is a great necessity. I am much interested in winning these men to Christ and while in Tientsin I expect to spend each evening in this work.

"No one individual or organization in particular is supporting this work. We have started it on the faith basis and are relying on the Lord for the necessary funds. It is remarkable how the funds come in. We pay $130 rent each month, besides light and water, but already nearly $300 have been received. It was opened October 25. Much good has already been accomplished."

It is sad to learn of the looting at Chai Kou Pu, as the new chapel being constructed was just about completed. And yet it is remarkable that this is the first time that any injury has been done to any of our property. How those people need our prayers! Especially when we note the severe fighting going on in and about Shanghai, in the slaying of 4,000 in one day—men and women deliberately shot down in cold blood. Shall we not pray and work more zealously than ever that the Great Prince of Peace may soon be given His rightful place in the hearts of the people everywhere and wars shall be known no more among the nations of the earth?

India

Miss Mildred Miskimen gives the following outline of the daily routine of work in the girls' compound: "The girls on the compound get up at five o'clock every morning. They do their tasks for the morning, cook their food, and by six o'clock are ready for their morning chapel. All the girls assemble for this service which is led by one of the teachers. At six-thirty they have their breakfast of tea and wheat-bread and by seven are in school.

School lasts from seven until eleven in the morning, then they return to the compound. After school they have their lunch of bazre bread and cooked vegetable, then they are free until three in the afternoon. They spend this time in study, grinding, bathing, washing their clothes, cleaning the compound, etc. From there until five they have school again.

From five to six in the evening is recreation hour. They play games on the compound, or go for a walk, or amuse themselves as they like. At six they have their supper, consisting of rice and dahl. After supper the small girls play until it is time for them to go to bed and the larger girls study until eight-thirty, then they have their evening prayers. These are in groups in charge of a group leader. By nine o'clock all are in bed and the day is over.

On Saturday there is no school, but the day is spent in cleaning, scrubbing, washing clothes and hair, and all the the little things that do not get done during the week.

On Sunday mornings we have the regular church services at nine o'clock. Sunday school is held in the evening.

We also have a sewing room where the girls who are no longer in school work at making the children's clothes. They work during the same hours the other girls are in school.

The monthly examinations show that most of the children in the school are applying themselves well. The inspector of the municipal schools paid us a visit and seemed satisfied with the work being done.

A small plot of ground has been assigned to the school and each class has an experimental garden in connection with the nature study. The children are keenly interested in this branch of the work.

Miss Theresa Frank has charge of the Evangelistic department of the women's work. She gives a very hopeful outlook for the work. "We have a large field," she writes, "which has not been properly covered for years and our greatest handicap is the lack of trained Bible women. This condition, however, will be remedied in less than two years, when the two girls now in training, will be ready to preach. God has been doing great things for us, as a mission, these past months and He has very graciously let "some drops" fall on us of the Evangelistic department. I feel that there has been a greater spirit of prayer and an increased realization of the uselessness of human efforts without the guidance and help of the Spirit of God to bring about any lasting results. And this spirit seems to be growing. We would appreciate the prayers of all who are interested in the work that we may see some definite results, namely, souls saved and willing to take their stand openly for Christ by the time the department closes for the summer vacation in April."

On July 1, Miss Frank accompanied the two girls who have entered the Bible School for their training to the school in Nandubar. Reports from the school indicate that both are doing satisfactory work.

Miss Grace Perley, in her report of the medical department, reports one birth, 731 patients treated and one girl training for nurse.

Dr. Lacy, our new medical missionary to India, arrived in Dhulia Friday morning, October 14. Her coming to Dhulia to have charge of the new hospital, and Miss Perley's training in nursing will mean much toward the development of our medical work in this needy field.

How we all ought to rejoice that God has opened the way for us to enter these three great fields of Christian srevice and thus minister unto these peoples, in the name and spirit of the Christ even as we have been ministered unto! Let us not forget to pray daily for this great work that our substitutes are doing there for us.

MISSISSIPPI AND FLORIDA CONFERENCES

The round of conference visits begins early in August and does not end until well into the second week in December. The visits are divided among the Executive Secretaries so that all this time is not absorbed in that one activity. To come in touch with our leaders and work in various parts of the country is a real privilege and one is sincerely anxious to be of the largest possible service.

The Mississippi Conference met in a little church eight or nine miles from Sallis. The weather could hardly have been more disagreeable; rain, cold winds and muddy roads adding to the difficulties and discomforts. But the brethren came in force and gave to their work diligent and thoughtful consideration. Rev. J. T. Williamson, for a number of years pastor at Meridian and one of the most loyal and faithful Methodist Protestant ministers in the denomination, was chosen president. Miss Bettie Ridgway was re-elected secretary and Rev. F. L. Sharp continued as treasurer.

One of the most interesting sessions of the conference followed Dr. T. H. Lewis' discussion of the Centennial Gratitude Gift plans. Hon. Nate Williamson arose and declared he was not only proud to be a Methodist Protestant, but proud to be the son of a Methodist Protestant minister, and insisted that the time to raise their quota of the one hundred thousand dollars was right there and then! And it was done in short order, more than the amount being pledged and considerable paid at once.

The election of the representatives to the General Conference took place at the usual time and resulted in the choice of C. W. Walley and S. E. Gipson as the ministerial representatives, and Nate Williamson and Miss Bettie Ridgway as the lay representatives. Miss Ridgway was chosen to represent the conference when the Gratitude Gift is presented to the church at Baltimore next May.

The revival of our work in Florida is due in large measure to Rev. C. S. Hartridge. At the last General Conference we thought the requiem had been sung for Florida Methodist Protestantism but we seem to have been somewhat previous. During the last two years a half dozen new enterprises have been started, with three or four organized and established churches. Calvary, Orla Vista, Trinity and Bithlo have been the main efforts the last year, while Stacey Memorial and Englewood are more recent undertakings. Calls are coming from other communities, some of which are of unusual promise, but lack of men and money make it impossible at present to take advantage of these openings.

This trip afforded an opportunity to observe the work and results of the leadership of Regional Director J. H. Straughn, D. D. If the results on other fields are as great and as satisfactory as they are in Florida the plan has more than justified itself. Under his wise, sympathetic and careful direction the foundations are being rightly placed and should give to this new development a character and stability never before known in that region. It is also reflected in the new hope and revived spirit among our people in the northern part of the state. Progress is being made there, too, although more leaders are needed if we are to reap the benefits of a favorable situation.

Rev. C. S. Hartridge was elected president unanimously and Mr. R. E. Lee, secretary. Mr. Hartridge has accomplished notable things during the last two years and his enthusiasm and energy will doubtless result in still greater achievements the coming year.

Dr. Straughn suggested a nominal Methodist Protestant Centennial Gratitude Gift for the Florida Conference and it, too, was over-subscribed in a few minutes. Miss Dorothy Hartridge, daughter of the Conference president, was chosen to carry the gift to Baltimore.

The depressed state of business conditions throughout Florida has made it difficult to carry out plans to extend our work in other communities. Many lots have been given in favorable localities, but it is impossible to take advantage of these opportunities until support from somewhere is given and the men are available as well. In many ways Florida has become a virgin field for the extension of our church. New communities are springing up everywhere and thousands of families live far from church or Sunday school. With proper leadership and help we could soon have a conference ranking among the best in the denomination.

OUR STORY PAGE

WHEN THE CHIMES RANG OUT

There was a rap at the door and Sadie ran to open it for she had seen Mr. Lynde come past the window with Thelma's blonde head bobbing up and down at his side. Sadie's mother heard the rap, too, and had come to answer it.

"Good morning, Mrs. Jenkins," he cried. "I have brought Thelma over to spend the day with you according to your invitation, for we are very busy at our house this morning, for Mrs. Lynde is not feeling very well. I hope Thelma will be a good little girl and not make you any trouble."

"Oh, I am sure," smiled Mrs. Jenkins cordially, "that Sadie and Thelma will have a lovely time, so don't worry about her at all. She will be perfectly all right, and we shall be glad to have her stay as long as you feel you can spare her."

Mr. Lynde thanked Mrs. Jenkins and hurried away. Thelma and Sadie hugged each other. It seemed almost too good to be true that they were to have a long, long play time with no danger of anyone telephoning that it was time for Thelma to come home.

The two of them thought of so many things to do that it was hard to decide which to do first. So they went out and gathered the eggs in the neat little chicken house which Sadie's father had just built. They found nine creamy white eggs and brought them in, but not until they had looked all about the chicken house and Sadie had pointed out Old Susan.

"That's my very own chickabiddy," she said. "See how fat she is! I often bring her something nice to eat and she knows me!"

Old Susan was so tame that Sadie was able to go over and stroke her feathers, but the bird looked at her sadly and with watery eyes, and every few minutes she kept wiping her beak on her feathers.

"I believe Old Susan is sick," worried Sadie, "for the other times she is so lively. I think I'll tell Mother."

Mrs. Jenkins listened and seemed anxious, too.

"Perhaps Old Susan has the roup," she remarked, "for fowls, like people, are ailing sometimes, and if she has the roup, the others may catch it. I'm glad you told me, dear. I'll put Old Susan in the little room at the end of the chicken house by herself until we see what is the matter with her. While I go out and do that, you little girls may clean Dickey's cage and feed him if you wish."

The children were pleased with the idea, for Dickey had a wonderful new brass cage which shone like gold, and he always seemed to be a little happier when it was in nice order, and his seed cup filled and fresh water in the water cup for him to drink. The children spread some papers on the kitchen table, lifted the top of the cage off, and cleaned out the bottom very nicely.

"We must be careful," Sadie warned, "and not get any litter on the floor, for Muvver will have to clean that up if we make a muss."

They were just finishing making Dickey comfortable for the day when Mrs. Jenkins returned from the chicken house.

"I think Old Susan will soon be all right," she said, "for I have given her some medicine and put her in the hospital."

The children laughed merrily at the idea of a hen hospital, and while they were talking about it, Mrs. Jenkins brought out some fresh lettuce and a piece of crisp, raw apple for Dickey's cage.

"Song-birds are like people, too," she said. "They need something clean and fresh and green to eat. See how Dickey loves them."

The bird had already taken a peck first of one and then of the other, and when the cage was hung up again on the hook, he thanked them all by a burst of golden melody.

After a while the children decided to play dressmaking. The only doll which really seemed to need clothes was The Quaker Lady. And so Sadie's mother got some crisp white lawn and gray cloth, and among them they made a complete new outfit. It was quite different from the gay dresses of Sadie's other two dolls.

By this time it was afternoon and Mrs. Jenkins had callers in the parlor, so the little girls went out to the dining room, for Sadie said they must not disturb her mother in any way.

"Let's play church," suggested Thelma.

"But we'll have to sing," objected Sadie, "and singing is kind of noisy."

"Oh, but it's a nice noise," insisted Thelma, "and besides we can shut the door."

"All right," agreed Sadie, "but who'll come to the church and be the people?"

The children looked around and decided that the only doll suitably attired for such an occasion was The Quaker Lady, and as most of the animal toys were rather shabby-looking, the only one Sadie thought in proper condition to attend the service, was her new Quacky Duck. Besides the Quacky Duck was always very well behaved.

Sadie announced that she would "read" the story of the infant Moses who was put by his mother into a little basket of reeds and grasses and placed where the beautiful princess would find him.

There was a little argument about which one should do the praying, but as Sadie was a little older, she decided that everybody ought to pray.

"The Quaker Lady will pray silently," she said, "for my daddy told me that is their habit, and we'll 'cuse the Quacky Duck because p'raps he doesn't know how. I'll pray first and then you'll come next," decided Sadie.

Thelma looked frightened and she didn't say anything for a minute or two.

"All right," she promised, "you go ahead!"

Sadie raised the book with the story of the little Moses in it, solemnly, and closed her eyes.

"I'm so sorry I was cross yesterday," she said softly. "I'll try to be a better girl. I am thankful for my nice home and all the lovely things I have; and because Thelma is here to play wif me. And, please, I'd like a new story-book so Muvver can read to me. Amen."

It was plain that Sadie had been speaking to an unseen Being who was nevertheless very real to her.

There was a brief pause, then Thelma said softly, "Our Father who art in Heaven, please make my mamma well, an' if you can spare one, I'd like a baby sister."

"Church is over," declared Sadie briskly, "and the front door just slammed, so I guess the callers are gone. Let's go and see what Muvver says to do next."

Mrs. Jenkins was coming to find the children.

"Something nice has happened," she beamed. "Aunty Lou has just been here and brought a nice little story-book for you, Sadie. Sit down and I'll read you a story out of it right now."

Just as she was finishing the chimes in the big church down town began to peal forth a sweet, silvery melody, and the three of them stopped to listen.

As they did so, Mr. Lynde came past the window and the children ran to the door to meet him. He was smiling.

"I have come to tell you the good news, Mrs. Jenks," he said. "Mrs. Lynde is feeling quite comfortable and we have a lovely little baby girl at our house."

"I am so glad!" exclaimed Mrs. Jenks. "Do come in."

"No thank you," returned Mr. Lynde, "I have come for Thelma and I am so grateful to you for keeping her."

Now that the door was open the chimes sounded clearer and sweeter than ever. It was just as if they said "Syl-vi-a" over and over.

"Why," cried Thelma, "they are calling my little sister's name. Listen, the chimes say 'Syl-vi-a.'"

And sure enough, that's just what little baby sister was really called, and Thelma loved to tell people about the chimes and how they rang out joyously on the day when the baby came.—Selected.

ANGELS' WORK

I wonder if you have seen that pathetic little story of the poor tired mother who took her three little children into a parlor car by mistake, and was rudely driven into another car in a way that brought smiles to some faces, but a great pity into the tender heart of one of the passengers, a little boy. He showed his sympathy in true boyish fashion by taking some of his own fruit and luncheon to the abashed little group in the common car.

So sweet and genial was the ministry of the bright-faced, beautiful boy, that one of the children, watching his retiring form, asked:

"Was he an angel, mamma?"

"No, dear; but he was doing an angel's work, bless him!" answered the mother.

And it is this answer that rings in my ear so persistently that I pass it on to you, "Doing an engel's work."

Is there not a little bit of angel's work for each of us, every day, no matter how commonplace the day may be? Perhaps you are not quite sure just what an angel's work is, but a little searching of the Scripture will make it quite clear. And having found what the work is like, suppose we, each one, for just one week, watch diligently for such pieces of it as may be in our part.—Exchange.

THE CROSS

The offense of Christianity has always been the Cross; as of old, so still today, Christ crucified is to the Jews a stumbling block and to the Greeks foolishness. It would be easy to remove the offense by abolishing the Cross. But that would be to abolish Christianity. Christianity is the Cross; and he who makes the Cross of none effect eviscerates Christianity.—Selected.

I AM TODAY

I came to you this morning.

I came fresh from the hand of God.

I am called Today.

I am clean and white.

If you touch me with soiled fingers, my beauty will be marred.

A noble thought will glorify me.

A kind word halo me with brightest light.

A deed of love will connect me with eternity.

A cheerful smile will gild me with the colors of dawn.

Soon I will be Yesterday.

If you use me well and wisely, I shall become a beautiful green spot in your life, where memory will fondly linger.

Misuse me and I become a hideous, deformed thing which men name Regret.

I am your Opportunity.

Your Master and mine says: "Son, go work today in my vineyard."

I am here—use me.

Eternity will be made richer or poorer because of you—and me.

I am Today!—E. C. Baird, in The Christian Standard.

CHRIST ONLY CAN SAVE

Church loyalty is to be commended so long as it accords with Christ loyalty. But if these two loyalties conflict, the latter should prevail. The Jews adhered to their Church, rejecting Christ; and their history ever since has attested that they made a tragic and ruinous mistake in their decision. The revelations of eternity will no doubt make the frightful consequences of their foolish choice manifest to an incomparably more appalling extent. It is only as a Church truly represents Christ that it is spiritually serviceable to human beings. If it departs from Him and His teachings, it is destitute of power to regenerate men, to develop them in the religious life, to sustain them in the crises that come with passing years and in death, and to guide them to the Heavenly Home. The truth is, an apostate Church which has deserted our Lord and His Gospel is about the most fraudulent, pathetic, and pitiable organization conceivable, for its parasitical quackeries are not restricted to the physical realm, but deceive and irretrievably wreck immortal souls made in the image of God.—Selected.

Co-operation

Someone has said that Mr. Roosevelt coined the word "strenuous"—that "efficient" was made in Germany by the Kaiser, but that the word "co-operation" was made in Heaven and it takes Heavenly Grace and ingenuity to co-operate,—as Kipling has said:

"It ain't the guns nor armament nor funds that they can pay,
But the close co-operation that makes 'em win the day,
It ain't the individuals nor the army as a whole,
But the everlasting team-work of every bloomin' soul."

—If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble in the dust; but if we work upon immortal souls, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of fellowmen, we engrave on these tablets something which brightens all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Mt. Hermon, Creswell Circuit.—We have with us this year, our same pastor, Rev. R. L. Hethcock, and we feel very fortunate in getting him back, for I feel like he is doing a good work down here. This circuit has recently bought him a new car.

Since our last report we have bought a new piano; we have also had a big increase in membership. I feel that the spiritual condition of this church is better than it has ever been before.

The ladies have organized a Ladies' Aid Society, and are making them work, too. We gave a box supper last Friday night and raised $70.35. We have a number of chickens to sell also.

Our Sunday School is doing fine. We are planning to give a Christmas tree Monday night as a special treat for the children.

With best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to the Herald and its many readers.

CALLA BARNES DAVENPORT,
Reporter.

N. Charlotte—We are getting along fine, the Lord has been wonderfully good to us; we have our lot sold and are now ready to begin our building on our new church property.

Our pastor is boosting with all his energy the hope of having our church erected before another conference year comes to a close. We requested all the readers of the Herald to pray for us that this project may be made possible. Anyone that has any money to give to us will be very greatly appreciated.

We are giving our Christmas program on December 23rd. We think it is fine. Wish all of you might be able to enjoy this entertainment with us. Our pastor, Brother Furr, preached two inspiring sermons on Sunday the 18th. Pray for our success.

Reporter.

Asheville.—The last Annual Conference assigned me to this work, but yesterday, December 18, was the first time that I was privileged to be with the people here. Since I am doing further work at the Seminary the distance is too great to travel to and fro, so I am here for the holidays and will be on the work regularly when the Seminary closes next spring. The church has a pulpit supply committee and in my absence the preaching and the mid-week prayer meetings are being competently and satisfactorily taken care of by men who gladly give their services and who are willing to be used of God in Kingdom service. The committee is certainly fortunate in securing the service of such men and I deeply appreciate their interest in the work. I am also grateful to them for their service.

While at Whitakers I served a people who are as loyal and faithful as can be found anywhere and it is not an easy thing to leave such good people. But after one day with the Asheville people, I believe I have found others who are very loyal and faithful. Yesterday was a good day for us. The attendance at all services was good. The people are appreciative; they are interested in the work and I believe that we will have a good year. The weather has been very cold since I have been here and today is colder than yesterday; but the people's hearts are warm toward their pastor and my reception has not only been very pleasant, but has filled my heart with joy.

Of course, the church has her problems, but this is true of every church. If we look at problems in the right way, they stimulate, they challenge. I believe that such is the re-action of the people here to their problems. It's a fine spirit and I believe that these people will do great things in kingdom service this year. They are the kind that will accept a challenge, who will tackle a problem and give their best in service. I just wish that I could stay with them and work with them, but my school work doesn't permit that, so I am looking forward to next spring when I can give my full time to the work.

May peace and joy be in every heart at this blessed season of the year.

F. W. PASCHALL.

Hallister, Halifax Charge.—The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies held their monthly meeting with Mrs. Hardy, December 13th. The devotional was conducted by the writer using the Jewel Box. We are very sorry our faithful secretary, Mrs. J. J. Williams, has moved to Enfield. We will miss her in our Missionary societies. We are hoping, however, that she will continue to be our secretary.

Our next meeting will be at the parsonage with Rev. and Mrs. Spencer. We want all the members to be present.

Our Sunday School is progressing under the leadership of our faithful superintendent, Mr. E. T. Ellington. Our Sunday school pianist, Mrs. W. E. Knight, resigned Sunday and the writer was elected pianist with Miss Sallie Wood assistant.

Death has entered our church and taken one of our oldest memberrs, Mr. F. N. Porter; he died Dec. 4th and was buried at Enfield Dec. 5th. Burial services were conducted by his pastor assisted by Rev. J. C. Auman. Mr. Porter will be greatly missed in our church and community.

Our Christmas exercises will be held on Tuesday evening, December 27th, at 7:30. We hope to have a large crowd present. Wishing the Herald and its readers a Merry Christmas.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Roberta Church.—We have adopted the policy to "Do, then Talk". So this accounts for our reports not appearing in this paper. But we think our actions for the last while will justify a little talk, so here goes.

By the time you read this, if weather permits, we will have the first installment of our church building program completed. The inside of the church is so completely changed and beautified, that people who have been away and returned just wonder. We are just completing four Sunday School rooms, raised the platform 20 inches, and an average of 12 feet across the entire front of the building, with an altar-railing and kneeling board. We got an idea of the advantage of this improvement when the young folks brought us a very splendid entertainment and exercise on Christmas eve night. A very large, beautifully decorated evergreen tree adorned the scene, under which, as well as on it, piles of gifts lay. The exercises being over, Santa slid down the chimney, and the great time began. Upwards of 300 packages were distributed to the jammed audience as they were called to march by the platform.

We often hear church people say "I wonder why our pastor doesn't write to the paper?" Perhaps the fault lies in you. Allow me to suggest a remedy: Get busy and get up a real pounding, take it to him. If he doesn't write, keep this up. Then if he still forbears, have a wedding or two. If this fails, ——well. This worked on me, I just couldn't stand it. Poundings have been protracted since the cool weather set in. This was kept up until last Wednesday night, when it reached its climax, and they "came skipping on their heels, bringing money, pig, flour and the meat and the meal." I croaked! May God's blessings come to them all. A pounding with $6 in money, an hundred pound bag of flour, with a fine pig besides many other good things, mustn't go by unnoticed.

Best wishes and a Happy New Year to the Herald family.

ROBERT SHORT.

Bethany, Flat Rock Ct.—Our little bunch of faithful attendants are glad to have a pastor once more. We were feeling rather forlorn since conference left us without a preacher, and so many of our faithful ones have left us. The new pastor has preached for us twice, giving us very interesting and helpful sermons. Sister J. T. McCollum enjoyed collecting a box of things and about eight dollars in cash, and presenting them to our pastor as a Christmas present. She said everyone seemed glad to contribute and no one refused to help.

We do miss Brother J. D. Baines so much. He was always so faithful to attend services and take an active part in the church work. He departed this life the fourth Sunday in October, leaving a vacancy in our church and community which will be hard to fill. Brother W. P. Alley has recently moved to Winston. We have been depending so much on these two, to see that things are done, it will be hard to do without them. Death has taken two from our community who came very regularly to our church, and were a great help and inspiration to us. We miss them too. Pray for us that we may do the things the Lord would have us do.

REPORTER.

First Church, Concord.—We have been busy at this church since conference in an effort at getting a good start on the work of the year. Brother Bethea of Lexington spent a week with us during the first of December preaching very forceful and helpful sermons which resulted in several conversions and reconsecrations. His stay was much enjoyed by the church and pastor and much good was accomplished.

Our new Sunday school building was completed prior to the third Sunday in this month and on that day we entered for the first time into its commodious quarters which is proving a real delight to our people. On that day Rev. P. E. Lindley of High Point preached at the eleven o'clock hour and in the afternoon an inspirational service was held for young people. It was quite largely attended and Mr.

Broom of High Point College together with Rev. Lawrence Little made splendid addresses which were well received.

The pastor has been preaching a series of sermons on "The Successful Marriage" on Sunday nights. Four messages of the series have already been delivered to growing congregations, noticeably of young people. The series will be completed beginning the first of the year.

The Christmas season has been of great joy with us here. On Saturday evening the children of the school presented their part of the Christmas program followed by a treat given by the school to each pupil. A general Christmas tree was held in connection with this service. On last Sunday night, which was Christmas, the pageant "At the Door of the Inn" wos rendered before a capacity house.

The pastor and family have not been neglected or overlooked at this season. Much to the surprise and delight of both the pastor and wife, upon our return to the parsonage on Saturday night following the Christmas treat of the school, we found our dining table burdened with a large load of good things to eat which the kind parishioners had brought as a Christmas surprise. It was a fine remembrance entirely worthy of the big hearted people that they are and is genuinely appreciated.

One hour from the time of this writing we are expecting to be engaged in the funeral of Rev. D. A. Braswell who passed peaceably and triumphantly from labor to reward last night, Christmas night at eleven o'clock. Rev. W. F. Ashburn is expected to be in charge of the service and will be assisted by a group of our ministers. We are grieved at his departure but for him it meant, among other things, release from terrible agony. May the Father graciously comfort his sorrowing family. I take it that others will write more fully after the service.

I have only touched a few of the many things we are endeavoring to do and have done since our last report, but I am not careful in this matter when I remember the efficiency of our reporter, who reports often and well.

May the Lord pour upon you our love and good will.

G. H. HENDRY, Pastor.

Mecklenburg.—Christmas is here and Santa has already been here. I reported a pounding some few days ago; I now report two more. I have received three poundings during the past three weeks, the last one was Christmas eve night. Just as we were about ready to begin our program at Stallings Church, the people from Beulah Church came over with a fine large treat of so many fine things. The other one I have not reported yet was from Zoek Church. When we were over there the third Sunday and came out to start home, we found the car seat full of nice things, so many we had to put them in the rear of the car before we could get in the car. We appreciate all that has been done to show their love for us, and our greatest desire is to be able to keep up this good spirit, not for our benefit only, but we realize if the spirit of giving is practiced freely it will be no trouble to raise the Church budget.

We had a very nice program and Christmas tree and treat for the Sunday school, and took a collection for our G. C. B. and got a small sum. We are in hope of being able to collect all our budgets in full. We would like to go to the conference next fall with a clear sheet. May the good Lord bless all the givers and crown their work with success.

Yours in His service.

W. C. HALL, Pastor.

Halifax.—We held our first quarterly conference with Ringwood church on December 16. It was a very cold, rainy day and only four of the churches were represented. Mr. F. M. Taylor was re-elected Secretary of the quarterly conference. Some recommendations were adopted, which, if carried out will mean much to the charge.

On Tuesday, December 20th, the good people of Bethesda church gave their pastor a real Methodist pounding, just the kind that makes a preacher and family rejoice for many days. They began to come about four p. m. and continued to come until a bout 9 o'clock. After the crowd had all departed, we found that our table was well loaded.

Those who had part in the pounding were: J. H. Vinson, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Harrell, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Neville, Mrs. Thomas Taylor, Lewis Bethea, Herbert Harris, Mrs. W. H. Wilcox, Mrs. N. M. Harrison, Miss Helen Harrison, and John Edward Perry.

We want to thank everyone for this kind remembrance, and assure you that it is highly appreciated, and we will endeavor to be more faithful in our service.

With best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

C. L. SPENCER.

High Point.—Wednesday evening, Dec. 21, the Junior Christian Endeavor gave a good Christmas program, depicting the baby Jesus, the star in the East, and the visit of the three wise men bearing gifts. The children sang a number of Christmas hymns and carols in a very pleasing manner, with piano accompaniment by Mr. Kreiger. Mrs. R. M. Andrews then sang a beautiful solo, "Come All Ye Faithful," accompanied at the piano by her talented daughter, Rosalie Andrews. The charming story of the birth of Christ from Lew Wallace's "Ben Hur" was then given by Mrs. J. A. Eshelman of this city, which was thoroughly enjoyed by those present. The Junior C. E. Society under the leadership of Miss Myrtle Davis, is a very live and active organization.

On Friday evening the Sunday School held its annual Christmas entertainment in the assembly room. A splendid program was presented by a number of children and the leading part was taken by Mrs. Rufus Martin, nee Miss Elizabeth Welch. Mr Lester B. Teagne was Chairman of the committe for this entertainment and the Sunday school is greatly indebted to him for the painstaking care and time which de devoted to it. A generous treat of candy, nuts and fruit was then ditributed to every child in the Sabbath School.

On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Dr. Spahr delivered a beautiful message on "The Christmas Glory," the choir rendered an appropriate anthem, "Sing, O Heavens," Maunder, and young C. L. Gray, Jr., sang a beautiful solo, "Birthday of a King." There was no evening service.

Rev. and Mrs. E. L. Ballard left Friday night for Baltimore to spend the holidays with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Ballard. They're expected to return home next Friday.

Instead of the regular mid-week prayer meeting Wednesday evening, a rally under the direction of the Board of Young People's Work will be held, and Rev. Ferry Lee Gibbs will be the principal speaker. He has recently been elected assistant to Rev. Lawrence Little. A series of rallies in the interest of Young People's Convention in Baltimore in May, 1928, is being held throughout the state. All young people, as well as older ones, of the different Methodist Protestant Churches of High Point and vicinity are cordially invited to attend this rally.

Capt. A. M. Rankin came home from Charlotte Saturday afternoon to spend Christmas with his family, and his host of friends are delighted to know that he is improving satisfactorily from his recent operation.

Holt and Garland McPherson came home from University of N. C., to spend the holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. D. McPherson.

Dr. S. S. Coe had the misfortune to participate in an automobile wreck at the intersection of English and Lindsay Streets last last Thursday, but emerged in good shape, with nothing more serious than a shock to his nerves and some bruises. He says it was a narrow risk, and his friends are much pleased to learn that he was so fortunate.

Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York left for Florida last Monday, where the former will recuperate from his recent illness. They expect to be away for a week.

Mangum Harrell, student at State College, Raleigh, is spending the holidays with his mother, Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, and Walter M. Crouch, Jr., is at home from Riverside Academy, Gainesville, Ga.

We regret exceedingly to learn that Prof. Dan W. Smith who has been the faithfel and efficient organist of First Church for two years, has resigned this position to go with First Presbyterian Church. He is a very talented musician having a beautiful tenor voice as well as playing the pipe organ very skillfully and he has served the church in a very acceptable manner. Mrs. J. C. Whitesell will succeed him as choir director, and Miss Mae Kirkman will play the organ.

Beautiful and appropriate bulletins were distributed Christmas morning, printed in green and red. Instead of the list of officers a number of Christmas messages of good cheer and poems filled the fourth page.

Mebane.—The Home and Foreign Missionary Societies met in joint session with Mrs. P. N. Thompson at 1:30, Dec. 11. The program in charge of the home society was suggestive of the Christmas season. Total collections for the evening, $42.03. A good part of this amount was received from a cake sale and bazaar. During the social hour candy and apples werer served. January meeting will be held with Misses Lula and Mary Jobe.

Sunday evening at 7:30 an impressive service was held. At this time a White Christmas and musical program was obserrved. This was enjoyed by a large and attentive audience. Gifts were presented by the Sunday school classes for our two home mission points in North Carolina, the Bethel Home at Weaverville, and the Children's Home at High Point. The gifts consisted of cash to the amount of $40.40, and useful articles.

The musical program under the direction of Prof. T. O. Pender consisted of Anthems and Christmas Carols. This was the first time our church has observed a White Christmas and it was a decided success. At the close of the service a silver offering was received which goes to the general conference budget.

The following young people are spending the Christmas holidays at their homes here: Misses Grace and Katie Lee Barnette, Elizabeth and Edna Nicholson, Alta Allen,and Mr. Hassell Allen, High Point College, Miss Lillian Williams, State Normal, Boone; Joseph Kirk, State College, Raleigh.

Rev. and Mrs. Suits are spending the holidays with their daughter at their home in High Point.

Flat Rock Charge.—The work on Flat Rock Charge is now going forward in a pleasing manner, after some delay at the beginning of the conference year. I have now filled appointments at four of the five churches, and I have found enthusiastic and responsive audiences at each place of worship. The kindness that the people on the work have shown me is truly gratifying and inspiring. I am keenly sensitive to these kindnesses, and deeply appreciate their friendly attitude.

I must give a brief account of the work at each church:

At Flat Rock I found a Sunday school and prayer meeting of true worship and inspiration. These have added greatly to the church services, giving interest and promoting cooperation in many ways. I attended a Christmas exercise at Flat Rock church, and I was agreeably impressed with the performances of the children, and the beauty of the tree, and the general spirit of good will and happiness that pervaded the entire audience. All indications point toward a year of true church progress at this church.

The attendance at Bethany is not so large as one would like, yet the attitude and spirit of the church is excellent. At the Christmas service, held there last Sunday afternoon, I was given a splendid Christmas box, and a nice gift of cash. These presents are sincerely appreciated by my wife and myself. I wish I had space to give the name of each of the generous contributors. Bethany church is going forward in His labor and service.

Bethel church is enthusiastic and progressive in each and every phase of church life. Her path is clear. Work and progress and service are hers. On Saturday evening I was there at a Christmas service and tree. The exercise was given by well trained children to an audience both large and appreciative. Several special songs were given that were deeply effective. I received a nice present from the tree. I am grateful to the good people for it.

I have not had any appointment at Gidean's Grove yet, but I have met several of the people who seemed both kind to me and enthusiastic in church work. I hope to know the people there better very soon.

At the Palestine Church I was welcomed by an earnest and large audience. The people were kind and considerate in every way. They are having a successful Sunday school and their labors for Him are great.

The first quarterly conference on our work will be held at Palestine church on Friday afternoon at 2:00 p.m., Dec. 30. We are pleased to have the prospects of President Taylor's presence.

J. P. PEGG, Pastor.

Pleasant Grove.—On last Saterday night, December 24, our Sunday school rendered a pageant followed by a Christmas tree and a treat for the entire school. Superintendent Teague deserves much credit for his efforts in connection with this, as well as those who so splendidly co-operated with him in the work. Brother Z. B. Morris, teacher of the Men's Bible Class, presented B. E. Kennedy and C. R. Kennedy each a nice teacher's Bible for perfect attendance during the year. The teacher of the Junior class presented three Testaments to three of his students making the highest grade during the year. At the beginning of last year the Church Brotherhood decided to give a nice teacher's Bible to that member of the school who would read the greatest number of chapters in the Bible during the year, also another Bible to the one who read the second highest number. I. W. Burton, president of the Brotherhood, presented these Bibles to the winners last Sunday. Quenton Veach received the first Bible, having read over 5,100 chapters. Hugh Lee Gailey received the recond Bible, having read something over 3,000 chapters.

Since the beginning of the new Conference year we have received a number of gifts which we appreciate very highly. Mrs. Will Newby gave a very fine turkey for Thanksgiving, and Brother Noah Charles a fine chicken for Christmas. Mrs. Ralph Kennedy, Brother Walter Berton, Mrs. B. E. Kennedy, Mrs. J. E. Meredith, and Brother I. A. Teague gave other good things. We also appreciate the box received at the Christmas tree and the fine rug which was also given by a number of friends. GEO. L. REYNOLDS.

Welch Memorial Church.—We hope everybody had a real happy Christmas. This preacher and family have much to be thankful for. First, we are thankful for the consciousness of the presence of Him who came as the first Christmas gift. Second, for health. Third, for the many kind remembrances received from our friends. The pastor and wife received several real nice and useful presents, and a great number of Christmas cards, more than ever before. We are so grateful to those who so kindly remembered us, and wish God's richest blessings to rest upon them.

We feel very much encouraged with the outlook for this conference year. We have made a good start, the interest has been improving most every Sunday since Conference. We held our first qcarterly conference, which was very largely attended. Every one present seemed to be in good heart, and very much enthused with the prospects for this year. We intend to put forth a special effort to do more this year than we have done in either of the three years past, in which we have served as pastor. We wish to mention the very interesting program which was put on by the Sunday school and Senior C. E. Society. This program was rendered on Friday night, December 23. The first part of the program was rendered by the Junior department of the Sunday school, after which a very interesting play was put on by the Christian Endeavorers. There was a large congregation present, and they all seemed to enjoy the entertainment. Santa Claus was present and assisted in the distribution of the presents and the treat; the treat was given by the Sunday school.

Sunday being Christmas, we had only one preaching service. The evening service was called in, and the preacher took a real rest, which he very much needed and appreciated.

With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers for a Happy New Year,

T. E. PIERCE, Pastor.

Asheville.—These are thrilling days for our church here. Pastor Paschall has met most all of our people, and all love him already. His message Christmas Sunday morning was most helpful. His subject was "Our Gifts for the King."

Sunday night our young people presented a pageant, "At the Door of the Inn." Some said it was the best entertainment ever put on in our church here. Those who took part were Misses McIntyre, Misses Younginer, Misses Fawcett, Misses Hanner, Mr. and Mrs. McNeil, Mesdames Williams and Everhart, Misses Allison, Boling, Joyner, Stout, Miller, Haney, Clouse, Messrs. Cashatt, Hanner, Foster, Charnock, and Ladd. Brother J. B. Hyatt and son built the "Inn." Every part was well taken. Brother Paschall read the story. The offering was for the Board of Education.

Mrs. L. J. Edwards, of Granville circuit, was present. She recently came to Asheville. She is living with her daughters, Misses Lenoir and Blanche Edwards, opposite our church on Hillside street.

The attendance at both services Sunday was unusually good. Brother Paschall is spending this week visiting old friends at Whitakers, N. C. He will return for the services next Sunday.

The first quarterly conference was postponed to Monday night, January 2. President Taylor is expected to be with us for that meeting. Every member of our church and his family will be invited so as to make the occasion a rally, and a reception for our pastor and president.

The prayer meeting this week will be led by Brother E. C. Fawcett. Many of our members have adopted the teachings of Brothers Lyons and Van Meter. They are keeping the morning watch—rising up early for prayer and Bible reading, and then listening for the voice of the Master; each one confessing his own sins and faults; surrendering his will to God's will, and going out to witness or share. By this process lives are already being transformed, and blessing has already come upon our church. This week is being kept as prayer week. Our members are praying in secret for our church. REPORTER.

Burlington, First Church.—The preacher folks in the parsonage have enjoyed a good Christmas. A liberal pounding was administered by a number of the church people a few days before Christmas. Among the articles received were a turkey and many other good things. Even before Christmas a number of our people had remembered us with good things to eat. Not least among our Christmas remembrances were a dozen pairs of Burlington-made hose, made in the hosiery mill of one of our men. Not all the names of donors were given, therefore we just say "thank you" to all.

A fair sized congregation was present for the 11 o'clock service yesterday. Quite a good many of our people are away for the holidays. The pageant that was to have been given last night was postponed.

Rev. Ferry Lee Gibbs, from Westminster, Md., has been spending some days at the parsonage. Mrs. N. R. Oliver, Mrs. Gerringer's mother, from Kernersville, is also spending a few days with us. We are glad to have these visitors at the parsonage.

Through the Herald we want to thank the many friends of former pastorates and of the Burlington church for the great number of Christmas cards, folders, and other remembrances. Now the preacher folks would like to acknowledge in a more direct way all these kind remembrances, but as a pastor moves on from charge to charge his circle of friends enlarges until it is almost impossible to do so. However, we should like for our friends all to know that we loved them all, and that we have been wishing for them a Merry Christmas, and shall be wishing for them the very best year possible during 1928.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.
603 E. Davis St., Burlington, N. C.

Sandy Ridge, Kernersville Charge.—Mr. Lowdermilk filled his appointment this morning and preached a real helpful sermon which was very much in place on this beautiful Christmas morning when every one should be glad for the great Gift, the greatest that has ever been given to mankind. The church should have been overflowing with people to worship God for this most wonderful of all times, our Savior's birthday.

We had Christmas service and a tree on Friday afternoon, and the children did well considering the time they had to get their parts and the cold, bad weather. Much credit is due Mrs. Julia Frazier, Mrs. Ray Clark, and our Superintendent, Mrs. Wood, for their untiring effort in training the children. At the close of the exercise the tree was unloaded, after which the Sunday school received a nice treat which was very much appreciated by the little folks.

Our Sunday school is still moving. We are hoping to have all the classes curtained off real soon, which we feel will help much.

Hope everyone had a good Christmas and will have a very happy New Year.

MRS. ANDERSON.

Vaughn, Littleton Circuit.—Sunday December 25th, we had our regular preaching services. Our pastor, Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, delivered a very beautiful Christmas sermon. This message was enjoyed by all.

Some of our members are sick. We hope they will soon be well and able to attend preaching next preaching Sunday.

Wishing all a Happy New Year,

REPORTER.

Chapel Hill, Davidson.—Bro. Ridge preached a good sermon the third Sunday. We are all pleased to have him back with us for another year.

We will have no Christmas program. Hope we will have a good Sunday that day and learn more about Christ.

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Laurel Hill.—Sunday, December 11, there was a very large crowd to hear Brother J. M. Morgan at the morning services. He delivered us a splendid sermon. After the preaching service the Holy Communion Service was observed.

Our Sunday School is getting on nicely under the leadership of A. A. Sain. We have a bunch of Sunday school teachers at Laurel Hill that we are proud of. They keep our Sunday school rolling on.

Wishing the Herald family a "Merry Christmas."

A PRAYER

Dear Lord, kind Lord,
Gracious Lord, I pray
Thou wilt look on all I love
Tenderly today.
Weed their hearts of weariness,
Scatter every care
Down a wake of angel wings
Winnowing the air.

Bring unto the sorrowing
All release from pain;
Let the lips of laughter
Overflow again;
And with all the needy
O divide, I pray,
This vast treasure of content
That is mine today.

THE EVER NEW

He knew that He knew all of fatherhood:
He had read books about it; had observed.
He knew quite all there was in it of good;
How to unselfish sacrifice it nerved
Men of the feeblest courage. He was wise
On that as all themes else below the skies!

One day his young wife hid her blushing face
Against his breast and whispered something sweet.
A thrill, of which he ne'er had know a trace
In all his past, stirred him from head to feet.
To man's full stature in a trice he grew;
At last life's deepest springs he knew—he knew!

Now when, upon his awkward, untaught arm
He holds the helpless mite—hers and his own,
And feels that from earth's most resistless harm
He could defend it with that arm alone,
He understands as ne'er he understood—
As though he had invented fatherhood!

—Strickland Gillilan.

CORN AND WHEAT

It is singular fact that animals fed on a grain ration of wheat do not thrive as well as when fed part corn and oats. The same may be true of humans. At any rate we have found oatmeal a good thing in practice, and popularity of corn flakes and hulled corn seem to show that the public taste is on the side of mixed grains. Corn bread is notably popular at the cafeterias. With this year's enormous corn crop in sight, let's take hold and eat some of it up!—Selected.

—The first woman to be made lord mayor in Great Britian is Miss Margaret Beaven, upon whom that distinction has recently been bestowed by the city of Liverpool. Miss Beaven, who is fifty years old, is familiarly known as "Liverpool's Little Mother," because of the great work she has done for poor boys and girls. She has spent most of her life in caring for crippled children, founded the Child Welfare Association, by which more than 100,000 children have been assisted, organized holidays for poor mothers, and has taken a prominent part in all the charity and relief work of Liverpool. She was born in Liverpool, where for many years her father was a clerk in an insurance office. After attending the Liverpool High School for Girls she went to London University and later spent two years in America with her parents.

"Mama," said little Dora at the breakfast table, "does God know everything?"

"Certainly."

"Does he know that I am now eating bread with jam on it?"

"Of course, child."

"Then, mama, does he know there isn't much jam on it?"

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Ledbetter

Mrs. Margaret Kime Ledbetter, daughter of Christian and Lucy Kime, was born November 22, 1827, in Randolph County, N. C. At the age of 21 years she accepted Christ as her Savior, and joined the M. P. Church at Shilo. 'Till death she was a faithful member. She is the last of seven children, and was the mother of Rev. J. A. Ledbetter—who for several years, was an active minister in the N. C. Conference of the M. P. Church, but only a few months ago, was called to his eternal home. She is the widow of Wesley Ledbetter to whom she was married in 1854.

We had planned to celebrate the 100th birthday of this good woman. But just 17 days before she was to reach her 100th birthday, her spirit went home to be with God; and her weary body lay asleep in death. She said a short time before her death, "I'll soon be at rest" and again "I want to go home and drink, and drink, and drink."

Her mind was clear up to an hour of her death. Her memory, also, was good. Having lived through the time when our country was at war four times, she could tell many things of interest that took place during those wars. She told when the M. P's held their first camp meeting at Shilo, on the Randolph Charge. It was 90 years ago on last summer. Others had held meetings there before, but the M. P's began then, and organized the M. P. Church there and have continued the work.

Mrs. Ledbetter leaves 22 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren. A grandson, W. K. Hemphill, is now our efficient Superintendent of the Sabbath School.

In the passing of Sister Ledbetter, Randolph charge has lost its oldest member. She leaves one son, A. C. Ledbetter, of Guilford College, and one daughter, Mrs. A. M. Hemphill, of Julian, N. C., with whom she made her home. These feel most keenly the passing of Sister Ledbetter.

On Monday, November 7, the funeral services were held at Shilo, where interment was made. Dr A. G. Dixon, of our own conference and Dr. R. Murphy Williams and Rev. S. M. Rankin of the Presbyterian Church assisted the writer in the largely attended services. May a kind Heavenly Father comfort all of the bereaved ones. A. O. LINDLEY.

Isley

Mr. John William Harrison Isley died November 22 at his home in Coble township, near Friendship M. P. church. He was 61 years old, a prominent farmer of the Friendship community, where he had spent his entire life.

The funeral was conducted November 24 at Friendship church by his pastor, J. Elwood Carroll, assisted by Rev. D. I. Offman of the Lutheran church. The body was interred in the churchyard.

Brother Isley is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Isley; the following sons and daughters: Mrs. C. L. Sharpe, Mrs. L. W. Watkins, and Mrs. Walker Allison, Burlington; Otis A. and Will L. Isley, Burlington, Route 7; eighteen grandchildren and one great-grandchild; the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. John May, Mrs. George Wilson, Mrs. E. A. Edwards, Alamance; Mrs. Lawrence Anderson, Ossipee, and Erwin Isley, Alamance.

Mr. Isley was, from early childhood, a member of the M. P. church at Friendshsip. He has held many prominent offices in that local church and the charge of which it is a member. One year ago he was delegate to the Annual Conference which was held in Greensboro. For many years Brother Isley had filled the place of teacher for the Baraca class. His educational ability was only medium, but his religious fervor and his love for men and the way of God made him a power as a teacher. One of our leading ministers who in former time served Mt. Hermon charge remarked to me less than six months ago, "That John Isley at Friendship church would make an excellent preacher." Such a tribute is a credit for any man. In his passing Friendship loses one of her strongest members.

He is only 19 years old and has had a career in crime of which he seems to be proud. After his capture he tried to commit suicide by plunging his head against the concrete floor, but this failed. He is now behind the bars in Los Angeles. He was caught in Oregon and bears the name of William Hickman. His mother has engaged a lawyer to defend him.

—Calvary people were pleased to receive to membership in the church last Sunday the Crowder family, consisting of the parernts and five children. This makes ten members received since Conference.

A LIBERALIZING INFLUENCE

When Yale Divinity School opened its doors last September the registration of students totaled 216. This number will be considerably increased by late comers. The interesting figures given out by the dean's office show that of all the denominations represented, the M. E. Church, South, has the largest number of students, 41. This is one of the influences that insure for the South a ministry of increasing intelligence and breadth. Here are the statistics by denominations:

Methodist (North 18, South 41)	59
Disciples	37
Congregationalists	30
Presbyterians	20
Baptists	25
Episcopalians	7
Evangelical	7
Lutherans	5
United Presbyterians	5
Christian	4
Brethren	4
United	3
United Brethren	2
Universalists	2
Friends	2
Church of God	2
Reformed	1
Advent Christian	1

By geographical distribution the figures are as follows:

Southern states	65
Central states	60
Eastern states	58
Pacific coast states	10
Ten foreign countries	23

This cosmopolitan gathering of the sons of the prophets in this school looks like a propecy of the good time when a united church comprising a very large section of the Christian people of this country, will be a happy reality. L. K. L.

NOT IN 1928, BUT——?

Neal H. Ewing, writing in the Washington Star, rings a new change on President Coolidge's now famous Delphic utterance, "I do not choose to run for President in nineteen twenty-eight." He calls attention to the fact that in these twelve words—the compound, "twenty-eight," being regarded as two words—an iambic pentameter is followed by an iambic trimeter. In case the President had in mind to leave space for four years of Democratic rule or eight years of Republican rule, during which time he would be recreating, there would still be an opening in 1932 or 1936. Mr. Ewing then completes the little poem by placing two lines of his own before the two lines provided by President Coolidge. It reads thus:

"Of some still spot I'd be a resident,
One or two terms to wait;
I do not choose to run for President
In nineteen twenty-eight."

Quite a lot of Sunday school classes and friends from various sections of the country have remembered our children with Christmas gifts. On Christmas Eve, a few members representing the Order of Elks of Greensboro came over to the Home, escorted by "Old Santa," bringing gifts to everyone in the Home. This coming together certainly gave our children the Christmas spirit, and a good time was enjoyed by all. "Old Santa" gave the children a nice talk and told them what was expected of them if he was to return next year. Then in turn the children sang some Christmas carols and we are inclined to believe he left feeling that the children enjoyed every minute of his short stay.

We feel grateful to all who have contributed in any way toward making this a joyous season for the children and all who are in any way concerned.

At this time we are under quarantine due to two cases of scarlet fever in the Home. We have the two cases in the infirmary and no one is allowed inside other than Mrrs. Allman, who is nursing them. We are glad to report that at this time they are both doing fine, and we hope that we have it under control, and that we shall soon be turned loose again.

Wishing one and all a Happy and Prosperous New Year,

E. F. ALLMAN, Supt.

—Should man actually reach the moon, he would freeze solid the instant the sun went down, astronomers declare. Heat-measuring instruments mounted on a huge telescope showed that the temperature of the moon's rocks before a recent eclipse was 170 degrees Fahrenheit but that a mark of nearly 190 degrees below zero was reached at the darkest part of the eclipse. The rapidly falling temperature during the lunar night is believed due to the fact that the moon has no air blanket to protect it.

—Arthur Nash, widely known "Golden Rule" clothing manufacturer of Cincinnati, died in that city a week ago Sunday night at the age of fifty-seven years. In 1916 Mr. Nash took over a factory in Cincinnati with the idea of closing it out and going to live on a farm. Finding the wages paid in the factory almost unbelievably low, he immediately raised them, intending to "close the place out in a few months, but to close it like a Christian gentleman, on decent wages." To his surprise, however, the workers responded to this Christian treatment by giving their employer a greatly increased output, and the A. Nash Co. "was soon making suits at less cost than any shop in the city." Such was the beginning of what has developed into the "Nash Plan" of co-ownership of industry by the workers. Mr. Nash had had during his life a varied religious experience ranging from Seventh Day Adventism to Universalism, of which faith he was an adherent at the time of his death. It was his belief that the philosophy of Jesus "is the solution of all of the problems that are vexing the world." "If the Golden Rule be applied," he maintained, "it will solve all difficulties." The posibilities inherent in the application of the Golden Rule in Turkey as set forth by Dr. John Bayne Ascham made a strong appeal to Mr. Nash, and in 1925 he pledged up to $50,000 a year for five years to send Dr. Ascham to Turkey to establish, with the cooperation of the Young Men's Christian Association, a non-political, non-sectarian, international, inter-racial movement seeking to develop a four-fold program—intellectual, physical, moral, and spiritual—adapted to the needs of the present-day Turkey.—Zion's Herald.

SOUTHERN HAS TRAIN STOP ON 3,370 MILES OF TRACK

Automatic train control apparatus has just been placed in service on the line of the Southern Railway System between Atlanta and Birmington, giving the Southern a total of 3,370 miles of track equipped with this most modern device for the protection of trains—more than on any other railway in the United States.

The train control apparatus is designed to enforce obedience to signal indications and will stop a train should the engineer become incapaciated or run past a signal in the stop or caution position.

Since January, the Southern has equipped 2,265 miles of track with the train control device. Electric automatic block signals have been installed on 1,279 miles this year. The Southern's lines now protected by both electric signals and train control are:

Cincinnati and Jacksonville, 840 miles, the longest continuous installation in existence; Spencer, N. C., and Atlanta, 306 miles, all double track; Chattanooga and New Orleans, 498 miles; Bristol and Chattanooga, 242 miles; Chattanooga and Memphis, 314 miles; Salisbury, N, C., and Morristown, Tenn., 228 miles; Asheville and Spartanburg, 66 miles; Charlotte and Columbia, 108 miles; Atlanta and Birmingham, 167 miles.

The double-track line between Washington and Atlanta, 637 miles, is equipped with electric signals.

—The following 22 states forbid the prescription of alcohol as a medicine, and it is notable that they are among the states having the lowest death rate:

Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Maine Mississippi, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Utah, Washington and West Virginia.

—The North Carolina Experiment Station will be fifty years of age on March 12, 1928. On that date it will pause for one day and evening to learn something of its past and to fittingly commemorate the accomplishments of an honored existence.

—It has been estimated that the volume of stone in the Great Pyramid weighs nearly 7,000,000 tons; there is enough to build a city of 22,000 ordinary-sized houses.

—Dairy and poultry products have become most important sources of the American farmer's income. Last year they brought him more than 3 3-4 billions of dollars, or 31.1 percent of all that he received.

—Estimates of the 1927 cotton crop, which was revised upwards since September, have been reduced again to 12,670,000 bales, or some four millions below last year's total. Only the big carry-over of nearly 8 million bales prevents a really serious shortage.
